Maze of Pipes Under L.B. an Unmapped Peril

By GIL BAILEY
Contributing Editor

There are thousands of miles of them, just below the surface of Los Angeles and Long Beach streets and buildings, turning, twisting, carrying hidden cargoes to hundreds of destinations.

At 8:30 a.m. Aug. 13, 1970, a tractor sputtered down a drainage channel northwest of Wilmington.

Hidden in the shadows of the bank was a pipe with an elbow sticking out into the channel.

The tractor driver did not see it. There was a "very loud spattering sound" — the tractor had snapped the pipe — and within minutes 30,000 gallons of gasoline poured down that channel.

"We've been so lucky it is fantastic," said City of Los Angeles Fire Department Battalion Chief Jack Douglass. "In the last 20 years I've been involved in 30 hazardous leaks. The minor ones you don't keep track of."

On June 8, 1968 more than 3,000 gallons of gasoline poured down gutters into the Dominguez Channel from a ruptured pipe line, threatening nearby homes and Long Beach Harbor.

"In about 1955 a line broke along Sepulveda. People found gas in their toilets seven miles away. I think we had eight fires then," said Douglass, a 34-year veteran of the fire department.

On Nov. 12, 1968 an estimated 6,500 barrels of jet aircraft fuel poured more than 20 miles through flood control channels into Long Beach, setting off two fires.

The problem is not unique to this area.

An estimated 250,000 gallons of gasoline float on top of the underground water basin under Forest Lawn Cemetery, forcing closure of four wells. Efforts to remove the gasoline are slow.

In Oakland earlier this year, a giant pipeline was shut down when a slide at the Hayward Fault in East Oakland, threatened to cut the line.

But in the Los Angeles-Long Beach area there may be more pipelines per square mile of inhabited area than any other place in the state.

The oil refineries and wells are all interconnected.

"I couldn't estimate how many miles there are, but there must be thousands of miles of pipelines," said Douglass.

He feels it is safer to transport underground than above ground, and the oil companies have provided some maps for the pipelines.

"Legislation is a necessity," said David B. Stanton, deputy state attorney general. "There is no comprehensive pipeline legislation."

Assemblyman Henry A. Waxman, D-West Los Angeles, introduced such legislation in the late legislative session.

It would have required all operators of pipelines carrying hazardous or tox-

Nixon Slates San Clemente Conferences

Agnew Leaves for Asia

By BOB GEIVET
Staff Writer

President Nixon said Saturday that he will tackle foreign, domestic and military problems this week in a series of conferences at the Western White House in San Clemente.

He sent Vice President Spiro Agnew on a trip to Southeast Asia, and said that Agnew will visit Vietnam, Thailand, the Republic of China and South Korea, the latter for the first time.

Agnew boarded a presidential helicopter at the White House compound, rode to El Toro Marine Corps Air Station, and took off early Saturday afternoon for Honolulu, first leg of his Far East flight.

He conferred with American military officials.

Cambodians Clear Red Remnants in Phnom Penh Area

PHNOM PENH (UPI) — Six battalions of Cambodian troops conducted a sweep operation Saturday around the northern and eastern outskirts of Phnom Penh, mopping up the remnants of a Communist force that had tried unsuccessfully to crack the capital's defenses.

Only a few troops from one of the three Communist battalions that launched the attack Wednesday were thought to be still in the area. A military spokesman said the sweep was concentrated around Prek Temeak, a village across the Mekong River nine miles north of Phnom Penh.

There were no reports by late Saturday whether government troops had made contact with Communist units.

THE SPOKESMAN ANNOUNCING the sweeps said the main Communist force had been defeated and disorganized with casualties of 500 killed compared with Cambodian losses of 19 dead and 124 wounded. The spokesman did not say whether Prek Temeak was in government or Communist hands.

Field reports had said earlier that the Communists had seized the town after forcing government defenders out. Flares were seen in the area Friday night, but the spokesman said that they had been set off "to warn the civilian population." He did not elaborate.

Cambodian troops also launched sweeping operations among thickly foliated banana tree orchards near

Skipper, 5 Crewmen Leave Sinking Ship at Last Moment

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A determined Philippine skipper and five crewmen who held out to the last abandoned their burning, listing freighter, the Don Jose Figueras, Saturday night in the Pacific 900 miles northwest of San Francisco.

The Coast Guard said it had received word that Capt. Demosthenes Gabac radioed from the Japanese merchantman Cuba Maru that he, his crew of 39 and two passengers all had been picked up without injury.

The Don Jose was listing 40 degrees to starboard as night closed in, the Coast Guard reported. An Air Force plane which flew over it earlier said the ship was "cherry red" where it was burning in holds 2, 3 and 4.

Gabac had radioed earlier he and five crewmen were staying "until the last." But as darkness closed in he and the skeleton staff abandoned the ship and moved to the Cuba Maru.

The Coast Guard said the 42 rescued persons would be transferred to the Perseus, a merchant ship under contract to the U.S. Navy, steaming northward toward the scene.

There was no immediate indication where they would be put ashore.

Shortly after noon Gabac, his ship listing 23 degrees with a cracked hull and flooded from efforts to fight the raging fire, had radioed.

"Abandoning ship now. No recourse. No recourse. Fire beyond control. Crack in hold No. 3."

The 466-foot, 7,673-ton vessel only three years old, is owned by the Republic of the Philippines.

Legislature Gone, Problems Remain

SACRAMENTO—There is little indication that what the California Legislature did in 1970 — despite the session lasting longer than any in the state's history — will affect people's lives very much.

The truly needy welfare recipient will still have to

Last month a member of an I. P. T. reporting team informed Edward J. Kirby, director of the Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control, that a question had been raised about the licensing of Sinatra by the state of California in view of the fact that the state of Nevada had revoked the singer's gaming license for casinos at Las Vegas and Lake Tahoe.

Kirby, who was not appointed ABC director until March 1967, stated that all of the papers and any investigations required for the granting of the license had been processed under the previous administration of Gov. Edmund (Pat) Brown. Kirby added that his office could not challenge the license unless it received a protest.

The ABC director would seem to be unduly modest about the powers of the Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control.

PEOPLE IN THE NEWS

Teacher Begins Third Year With His Borrowed Heart

To Louis B. Russel Jr., the world's longest living heart transplant patient, wearing a heart that wasn't his own is no different than having dentures.

Russel, 44, an Indianapolis elementary school industrial arts teacher, on Monday begins his third year of life with a borrowed aorta pumping the blood steadily, and surely through his robust body.

"It's just like a false tooth," said Russel, commenting on the expressions of amazement that come from so many who meet him in generous rounds of speeches before service clubs and civic organizations.

The second anniversary of the surgery which gave him a new heart at the Medical College of Virginia in Richmond on Aug. 24, 1968, will bring a general belief to most medics that he is "over the hump." They said originally if he made it for two years, he would have overcome the tendency of the body toward rejection of the "foreign organ."

It probably will mean a sharp reduction in the number of trips Russel will have to make to Richmond for check-ups. But he still goes regularly three times a week to an Indianapolis physician for electrocardiograms and once a week for a fairly comprehensive physical examination.

Russel appears to be the picture of health. He weighs 200 pounds, eats mostly what he wants to eat, exercises on a bicycle-type device in his home up to half an hour at a time, and smokes cigarettes in open defiance of his advisers.

His daily schedule of activities would exhaust many healthy men. Even during the school year, when he puts in a full day at school 69, Russel spends hours of his spare time making speeches.

Ever since he recovered from the ordeal of the surgery, in which he received the heart of a 17-year-old boy, Russel has expressed a belief he has an obligation to share his experience with others in exchange for his being given a new lease on life.

WILL WED

A n n e-Marie Rasmussen Rockefeller, whose marriage to New York Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller's son ended in divorce last June, will marry Robert W. Krogstad of Madison, Wis., it was announced Saturday by the couple.

Krogstad, a recently divorced business executive, is the father of three children.

The two announced no specific date for the wedding, saying only that it would take place "before the year is out."

Mrs. Rockefeller, who has custody of her three children, was a maid in the Rockefeller home before she married Steven Rockefeller in a small Lutheran church in Norway in 1959.

After 11 years, Mrs. Rockefeller, 32, the daughter of a Norwegian grocer and retired fish merchant, obtained a Mexican divorce.

Mrs. Rockefeller met Krogstad in Madison in 1968 when she was campaigning for Nelson Rockefeller's candidacy for the Republican presidential nomination.

HAVEN

Black Panther minister of defense Huey P. Newton chose the gilded penthouse apartment of actress Jane Fonda on Manhattan's East Side Saturday to call for a massive "community" demonstration at New Haven Tuesday to prevent the "legal lynching" of another Panther.

Newton, sitting on a white, green and gold antique French chair, his image reflected in gold-framed mirrors as he spoke into a battery of microphones, said he was calling "for the community to come and give the racist judicial system a mandate against the legal lynching of McLucas." Lonnie McLucas, the New Haven Panther accused of killing Alex Rackley.

He said it was "the people" who freed him from prison. Newton recently was freed from a California jail after an appeals court ordered a new trial on charges of manslaughter in the killing of a policeman in Oakland, Calif.

Newton said the "vigil" would begin at 10 a.m., on the New Haven green when the jury is expected to begin deliberating the verdict in the McLucas case. Newton said neither the Panther Party nor the "community" would stand by and see McLucas "crucified."

McLucas, a Panther organizer in Connecticut, is among eight party members charged in connection with the fatal shooting of Alex Rackley 15 months ago. Twenty two days of testimony in his kidnaping and conspiracy trial ended Friday.

The runnersup were Carolyn Dartnell, Miss Australia, second runnerup; Yvonne Haunani Young, Miss Hawaii, third runnerup, and Geraldine Welford, Miss New Zealand, fourth runnerup.

Although the money for new legal defense work has been cut off, Gillis said, Kettering agreed to pay $11,000 a month from now through December to help cover the 40 cases and 15 appeals the firm now has pending for the Stones. After December, another schedule of payments will be worked out, he said.

NO MORE

A Denver millionaire who has given more than $260,000 to a coalition of youth gangs for legal defense of arrested gang members has decided to cut off the contributions, his lawyer says.

Chicago lawyer Kenneth Gillis said his client, Charles F. Kettering II, whose grandfather of the same name was an early leader of General Motors Corp., had been contributing $11,000 a month to the Black P Stone Nation.

But Gillis said that Kettering, who lives in the Denver suburb of Englewood, Colo., lately had ordered his law firm to "take no new cases, post no new bonds, no new nothing." He said payments to handle current cases would continue through the end of the year.

The attorney said Kettering's change of heart came about because of the South Side church of the Rev. Curtis Burrell was razed by a mysterious fire earlier this month.

The Black P Stone Nation, a coalition of gangs whose nucleus is the Blackstone Rangers, has been feuding with Rev. Burrell since he fired several gang members from salaried positions with a

LINDA KASABIAN AT MOTHER'S HOME
She and Children Plan to Remain in Milford, N.H.

WILL HAVE HELP

Linda Plans Book About Cult Life

MILFORD, N. H. (UPI) — Linda Kasabian, the star prosecution witness in the Tate-LaBianca murder trial in Los Angeles, plans to write a book about her experiences with the Manson family, the Boston Globe said Saturday in a copyrighted story.

The tiny mother of two said she has agreed to collaborate with an unidentified west coast author in the venture, it was reported.

"I am thrilled to be home again and very happy with the understanding being shown me by all my friends in Milford," Mrs. Kasabian said Friday.

SHE IS STAYING with her mother, Mrs. Kenneth Byrd, and two children, Tanya, 2, and Angel, 5 months, at her mother's home in this town of 5,000 in southern New Hampshire a few miles from the Massachusetts border.

Mrs. Kasabian, 22, wearing a wig to disguise her identity, flew to Boston Thursday after testifying for 18 days at the trial in Los Angeles.

Mrs. Kasabian, who is separated from her second husband, said she hopes to buy a house "in the country" and live there with her children. She said she may leave Milford but plans to remain here for the time being.

"I AM ANXIOUS to go to work somewhere so Linda can stay home with her children," Mrs. Byrd was reported to have said.

"After all, this is the first time in eight months that she has been with them."

Mrs. Kasabian declined to talk about the murder trial of Charles Manson and members of his family for the slayings of actress Sharon Tate and six others.

"I can't talk about the case because I am still technically a witness, subject to recall after 48 hours' notice," she said.

Four Newsmen Freed, Prince Sihanouk Says

HONG KONG (AP) — Prince Norodom Sihanouk sent word Saturday that his Army of National Liberation is freeing four Western newsmen who had been captured in Cambodia, including Time Magazine's Robert S. Anson.

"We are well aware they are not belligerents," Sihanouk said in a cable to T. Jeff Williams, Associated Press correspondent in Phnom Penh, Cambodia's capital. "That is why we use every effort to find and free those who disappeared."

Still missing after the release of the four would be 18 foreign newsmen, including three Americans — free-lance photographer Sean Flynn, son of the late actor Errol Flynn, Dana Stone of the Columbia Broadcasting System, and Welles Hagen of the National Broadcasting Co.

Sihanouk's telegram was sent to Hong Kong, where Williams formerly was stationed. The correspondent earlier had asked the prince's assistance in gaining the newsmen's release.

SIHANOUK'S reply named only Anson, 25, who was captured by the Viet Cong Aug. 3 while driving alone near the Cambodian city of Skoun. The others being freed were reported to be Dutch and French.

Sihanouk said his army was freeing "four reporters including Mr. Anson." He added: "We will continue our efforts to locate and free the others."

Richard Dudman of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, Michael Morrow of Dispatch News Service and Elizabeth Pond of the Christian Science Monitor were released in June after 43 days of captivity.

Two Americans, Gerald Miller and George Syvertsen, both of CBS, were slain after they intruded into enemy-held territory in Cambodia.

THE YUGOSLAV news agency Tanjug, in a report Saturday from Peking, said Sihanouk's government was freeing one American, one Dutch and two French newsmen.

In Paris, the French Television network reported it had learned from a reliable source that Alain Clement, a network sound man missing since July 7, had been freed and was on his way back to Paris.

In his telegram to Williams, Sihanouk insisted again that his forces should not be held responsible for the missing reporters.

The regime of Premier Lon Nol, who deposed Sihanouk March 10, "must assume sole responsibility," the telegram said, because the new government authorized the newsmen to enter Cambodia.

Portland Turmoil Looming

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — Hoping for the best and preparing for the worst, Portland will be host to the American Legion National Convention beginning Friday.

Cause for concern is the possible confrontation between some 14,000 Legionnaires and perhaps 50,000 antiwar protesters.

Neither side is advocating violence, but both worry that the irresponsible could cause trouble.

Taking no chances, authorities will be ready with 6,000 Oregon National Guardsmen trained in crowd control and a full force of state and city police, along with firemen whose vacations were cancelled during the week.

SPOKESMEN for the major protesting group, the People's Army Jamboree, have gone to great pains to insist their confrontation with the Legion is psychological, not physical. They have been negotiating with the city for park sites to stage their meetings and also sleep.

Gov. Tom McCall sanctioned use of a state park for a rock music festival. The idea is to syphon off some of the protesters to areas away from the heart of the city, where the convention will be held.

A brief story in the city's underground newspaper, the Willamette Bridge, said Gov. McCall had won the support of the Yuppies in the forthcoming election because his action on providing a state park for a rock festival was "a step closer to the legalization of marijuana."

President Nixon has been invited, along with other national leaders, to address the convention. There is speculation that the President will not attend but dispatch Vice President Agnew to talk to the convention — quite probably on his direct return from a tour of Vietnam, scheduled to begin Aug. 22 and end Aug. 30.

The Vice President this past week used the speakers' rostrum of the Veterans of Foreign Wars convention in Miami Beach to condemn an end-the-war proposal in the Senate.

SPONSORS of that proposal are Oregon's Sen. Mark Hatfield, a Republican, and Sen. George McGovern, S-S.D.

An aide to Gov. McCall, Ed Westerdahl, said after inspecting guardsmen in crowd-control training at Fort Lewis, Wash., "We feel we will be better prepared than any state ever has been to handle crowd problems of all kinds."

American Legion National Commander J. Milton Patrick, in a pre-convention statement, said:

"The American Legion comes to Portland at your invitation with only peaceful intentions to transact business dealing with veterans and youth affairs. Predictions of trouble, of possible violence, have not come from the Legion."

"Any questions concerning the other groups, which will allegedly be present in Portland during the period of the Legion convention, for whatever purpose, should be addressed to authorities of the City of Portland who have cognizance of such matters."

Busy Week Slated at San Clemente

cial during a 90-minute refueling stop at Honolulu, discussing the situation in Southeast Asia with Adm. John S. M. McCain Jr. commander in Chief Pacific.

He was scheduled to fly on to Guam where he would spend the night.

"The Vice President will be taking from me personal messages, but substantive messages, on our bilateral relations with each nation," Nixon said.

The President recalled that Agnew went "to this part of the world just eight months ago," and said that was "a very successful trip in reassuring our allies of our basic commitments in that area of the world."

He said Agnew then "informed many of the purpose of the Nixon Doctrine, a doctrine which has as its goal not withdrawing from Asia but providing the means whereby the United States will help other nations help themselves, so that we can have a peaceful Pacific with free nations of Asia able to defend themselves against aggression."

NIXON SAID, "The vice president will be returning on Aug. 31 or Sept. 1, and will be reporting here at the Western White House before returning to Washington."

"Details of Agnew's trip to the Far East were disclosed by President Nixon as he faced a battery of news reporters and cameramen on the sun-bathed lawn of the Western White House."

Planking them were Secretary of State William

Rogers and Henry Kissinger, the President's foreign policy adviser.

As he readied his departure, Agnew declined to detail the substance of his discussions with the leaders of the Far East nations. He said it would be inappropriate.

"I think that the leaders of these countries will take my presence at the direct request of the President as a distinct reaffirmation of our conviction that the American presence in Southeast Asia is something that we are determined to maintain, and that our friends can depend upon that," Agnew declared.

Newsman noted that Agnew's itinerary does not include Cambodia, and press secretary Ron Ziegler said that there is no plan now for such a visit.

This nation will supply Cambodia with up to $50 million worth of military aid, but Ziegler said the Administration plans it to be "unsophisticated equipment."

The Chief Executive's work week begins Monday when he will host more than 50 newspaper editors and broadcasters from the Western states, including Alaska and Hawaii, for briefings on military, domestic and foreign affairs.

The news executives will meet with Rogers, Attorney General John N. Mitchell, Kissinger and the four-man Council of Economic Advisers.

President and Mrs. Nixon will be their hosts at a luncheon beside the pool of the bluff-top mansion overlooking the sea.

LAWMAKERS MADE LITTLE PROGRESS ON KEY ISSUES

districts to finance their operation remains, and the pollution and despoilment of California's air, land, and water continues relatively unchecked.

More than 5,000 bills, constitutional amendments, and resolutions were introduced during the 229-day session, and about 2,200 bills were approved and sent to the Gov. Ronald Reagan for his consideration.

The overwhelming majority of the bills passed in a technical changes in laws which very few people know anything about, and which have little or no effect on the average citizen.

BUT AMONG the bills passed were some which if the intended effect is achieved, will have an impact.

California continued putting pressure on auto manufacturers, and specified in a bill awaiting the governor's signature, that each new car sold in the state from 1973 on must have a smog device individually tested and capable of meeting the nation's toughest standards. An auto maker would be fined $5,000 for each car sold here which does not have such a device, in working order.

Stationary polluters risk a $6,000-per-day fine if they ignore a court order to stop spewing harmful matter into the air.

Alarmed by the findings of environmental expert Gilbert Bailey, contained in a series carried by this newspaper, the Legislature ordered the study of the effectiveness of Los Angeles County's long and expensive war on smog, a war Bailey said the county was not winning.

But the legislature — specifically, the state senate — declined to approve bills reducing pollution-producing lead in gasoline, and rejected a bill which would have imposed a special tax on new cars to build up a pollution-fighting treasury.

FOR THE SECOND straight year the Senate passed but the Assembly killed a bill outlawing smog-producing cars in California after 1975.

Conservationists concerned about California's land and water resources had little to cheer about. No legislation was enacted creating controls on coastal or inland development, for example.

Consumers may, if the governor signs a bill introduced by Assemblyman James A. Hayes, R-Long Beach, have additional legal tools with which to fight unscrupulous merchants, and insurance companies will be required to explain why they are cancelling a client, but other legislation desired by consumer-oriented groups failed.

A bill which would have provided penalties for fraudulent or incompetent auto repairmen died. So did a bill requiring merchants to post the unit price (for instance, the cost per ounce or pound) of merchandise. So did a bill revoking the right of a money lender to both repossess a car and sue to collect the debt owed on the repossessed car.

But a measure increasing the interest finance companies may charge was approved.

LEGISLATION imposing a tax on municipal utilities — which the utilities claim the consumer would have had to pay — was killed.

Bills altering the creaky legislative machinery were considered and killed, and no conflict-of-interest measure was passed.

A bill to ban school busing without a parent's permission was passed, over objections that it could increase racial strife.

A bill directing the state attorney general to bring suit on behalf of any Californian ordered into battle in an undeclared war was killed.

State scholarships to institutions of higher education were increased, but a pay raise for University of California and state college faculty members was denied.

Proposals to help both public and private schools finance their operations were rejected, and school finance, one of 1970's most pressing problems, will have to wait until next year before a solution can even be sought, much less implemented.

Some 30 school districts in California were threatened with bankruptcy at the end of the 1969-70 school year. Many of them are, in fact, bankrupt now, and are incapable of resolving their difficulties by themselves.

The cost of government, including welfare, continues to rise and the method of obtaining funds to pay the cost remains inequitable, because no tax and welfare reform proposals satisfactory to enough legislators were made in 1970.

Taxes, welfare, school finance, and environment were the main concerns of the California Legislature as it started 1971. They will be the main concerns of the legislature as it starts its 1971 duties next Jan. 4.

Youths' Rocket Not Bad

PRESQUE ISLE, Maine (UPI) — Seven Presque Isle High School students culminated two years work Saturday by firing a 5½-foot rocket which, only partly successful, soared 3,000 feet into the air.

"It was a pretty good show for the first try," said a slightly disappointed Barton Pipes, 18, president of the Jaese Rocket Society.

Plans had called for the "Jaese I" to achieve an altitude of 10,000 feet.

"We weren't able to pack all the fuel into the rocket we were supposed to — only about two-thirds," Pipes explained.

A DEVICE which was to have triggered a nosecone parachute also failed to function and the rocket plunged back to earth.

"The nosecone was slightly damaged," Pipes said, "but the engine's intact."

The solid fuel rocket, which cost about $50, was to have reached a velocity of 650 to 700 miles an hour a half second after the "controlled explosion" firing. Pipes estimated the top speed at about half that.

THE JAESE society got its name from the middle initials of the founding members, all but one of whom graduated from high school earlier this year.

The firing took place on a barren spot about seven miles northeast of Presque Isle.

are done, my only recreation is sitting quietly knitting and crocheting rugs, afghans and lap robes, which I give to people in convalescent homes. Up to now I have managed to buy all my yarn at second-hand stores, but prices even in these stores have gone up and I can no longer afford to buy the yarn. Does ACTION LINE know of anyone who has scraps of knitting or rug yarn they have no use for? Anything I make I give away. I'm just trying to help in the only way I know how. Mrs. L. H. Long Beach.

A local yarn shop has collected a large box of assorted yarns for you, which will be delivered to your home.

In-Depth Study

Q. We have been researching our family tree and found that one of our relatives was aboard the Lusitania when it was sunk. The only information we have is the man's last name. Can ACTION LINE locate a passenger and crew list so that we can look into this further? M. H., Lakewood.

A. A complete list of passengers and crew aboard the Cunard Line's Lusitania the day it was sunk is available on microfilm of the New York Times in the periodicals room of the Long Beach Library, Ocean Boulevard and Pacific Avenue. Ask for the edition of May 8, 1915, for the list and stories on the sinking of the liner by a German submarine off the southwestern coast of Ireland, May 7, 1915. The sea disaster claimed 1,195 lives.

Under the Rug

Q. Please help me determine which is the best pad to have installed under carpeting on a cement-slab floor. I have been told so many things by different salesmen that I just can't decide if rubber or foam would be best. L. C., La Palma.

A. Most of the spokesmen we consulted from carpet mills, a carpet pad firm and a carpet sales store advised the use of sponge rubber pads, with bubble waffle design, over concrete floors. But one spokesman said a good quality rubberized felt pad, made with a combination of hair and jute covered with a coating of rubber, would be equally good over such floors. No one we talked with recommended urethane foam pads over concrete.

REACTION

ACTION LINE recently told a reader that there is no law against topless bathing suits for women. This is not correct. I refer you to Section 7300.12 of the Long Beach Municipal Code, which not only prohibits topless suits, but also requires that bathing suits come to a line above the navel. Of course, in these days of the bikini, almost everyone on the beach would be subject to arrest. Section 7300.13 deals with wrestling on the beach with a member of the opposite sex while attired in a bathing suit. I guess the way to obey this ordinance would be to take the bathing suits off. Mrs. H. H., Long Beach.

Sinatra License Raises Questions

the detailed requirements of the law."

The 1970 edition of an ABC pamphlet entitled "Questions and Answers Concerning the Alcoholic Beverage Control Act and Related Constitutional Provisions" states on Page 3 a pertinent question and its answer:

"Q. What are the powers of the department?"

"A. The department has the exclusive power, in accordance with the laws enacted, to license and regulate the manufacture, importation and sale of alcoholic beverages in this state. It also has the power for good cause to deny, suspend or revoke any specific alcoholic beverage license."

Legal grounds for an accusation include "The plea, verdict or judgment of guilty to any public offense involving moral turpitude..."

If ABC's director feels his department lacks power to initiate a questioning of Sinatra's license, no such qualms inhibited Edward A. Olsen, chairman of the Nevada Gaming Control Board, when on Sept. 11, 1963, he filed a complaint against Sinatra, listing five counts of alleged violations.

It should be explained that the state of Nevada maintains and circulates to casino operators a black list of "unsavory characters," cautioning the operators not to associate with them.

Olsen's complaint charged that the blacklisted Momo (Sam) Salvatore Giancana, described in the complaint as "one of the 12 overlords of American crime," visited Sinatra's Cal-Neva Lodge at Lake Tahoe for several days in July 1963 and that Sinatra associated with him. A third count alleged that when charged with violation of the blacklist, Sinatra called Olsen and vilified the state board with foul language. The complaint alleged an adviser to Sinatra at the lodge attempted to bribe auditors who were trying to check the records of the casino. The fifth count related to nonappearance of another Sinatra adviser who had been granted permission to appear before the Nevada Gaming Commission.

Rather than face the charges, the singer announced on Oct. 8, 1963, that he would sell his estimated $3.5 millions in casino holdings at Cal-Neva and the Sands in Las Vegas. A partner in both gaming establishments was Dean Martin, who also has endorsed Reagan for re-election.

On Oct. 22, 1963, the Nevada Gaming Commission revoked all of Sinatra's gaming licenses.

the village of Apey Khsath, also located across the Mekong River from Phnom Penh and about 1.5 miles from its royal palace.

THE COMMUNISTS STARTED a mortar harassment at the village Friday dropping in several high explosive rounds.

In Vietnam, military sources said that ground action involving U.S. forces had reached the lowest level of the year.

No major ground actions involving Americans have been reported since Wednesday when one American was killed and eight wounded in a clash in Quang Tri province about 400 miles north of Saigon.

Facts You Should Know About Diamonds

Lawson's Jewelers

A MILLS STORE

Cecil Rhodes, the creator of the Rhodes Scholarship also created the first international cartel, now known as the DeBeers Diamond Syndicate. DeBeers Ltd. (named for the owner of the farm where the first diamond was discovered in Africa) controlled all the diamonds mined in South Africa.

They also then established an organization to distribute the diamonds mined. This organization would buy all the production of their own mines but also all other diamonds mined in South Africa! Thus, no other entity or person could export diamonds in the rough. The governments of the countries where the diamonds are mined protect this organization. The greatest problem is to control SMUGGLING of rough diamonds.

Remember, no one has been able to successfully produce artificial diamonds. Industrial diamonds have all the properties of gem diamonds except that they lack any brilliance. Industry is constantly using diamonds, as diamonds are immensely vital in today's industries. In fact, one of the prime reasons for Germany's downfall in World War II was due to Germany's lack of access to industrial diamonds.

DeBeers divides diamonds into these two groups, industrial diamonds and gem diamonds. London is their headquarters. We are only concerned with the distribution of gem diamonds, as those are the diamonds you and we normally have seen.

DeBeers then sells these gem diamonds in the rough (for in its original shape) to selected cutters of rough diamonds. These selected cutters then shape the diamond and make it brilliant. The diamond cutting centers are Antwerp, and recently, on a limited scale in comparison to Antwerp, and for only sizes up to 1/2 carat, in Israel.

GALS GO FOR BROKE

By ANN HAVILAND

WASHINGTON (UPI) — "My husband is going to work with our children," said one suburban Maryland housewife, "and I'm going to march."

"We have the right to vote, and little else — except to be a wife, housekeeper, mother or sex object," said Jackie Ceballos of the New York City chapter of the National Organization for Women.

"And in this strike we're protesting that," she said.

Wednesday, August 26, marks the 50th anniversary of women's suffrage in the United States, and women around the country plan a variety of celebrations — and protests.

SOME working women will take the day off. Many housewives will abandon their normal routine to pass out leaflets or attend rallies, workshops and demonstrations.

Female activist Betty Briedan called for the national strike last spring, and since then members of NOW and Women's Liberation have been doing most of the strike planning. Women representing all levels of income, education, and color will take part.

The widest range of actions has been planned by a diverse coalition of 52 organizations and individuals in New York City. Sponsors range from wealthy socialite Eleanor Guggenheim to welfare mothers, attorneys and lesbians.

They are demanding social security benefits for housewives, an end to Madison Avenue's "use" of women in advertising and on-the-job, day-care facilities for children of working parents.

THEY ALSO want more statues of women in public places, including the replacement of the statue of a nymph outside the Hotel Plaza by one commemorating sojourner truth, a 19th Century liberationist who sought the emancipation of blacks.

"Out of the hundreds of statues in this city, about the only women depicted are Alice in Wonderland and Mary Poppins," said NOW's Jackie Ceballos.

An all-day conference on women's issues has been arranged in Pittsburgh and a picnic is planned for the twin cities of St. Paul and Minneapolis in Minnesota.

Some of the original suffragettes who were jailed 50 years ago in demonstrations demanding the right to vote for women will march in Boston. Others will ride in a Los Angeles motorcade.

In Syracuse, N.Y., women plan to conduct a sidewalk theater in front of a modeling school protesting "the image of a woman as a sex symbol, a clothes horse and a dumb blonde."

Denver, Colo., women will protest "the stereotype of women in school textbooks."

DENVER and other cities also will see consumer boycotts of various sorts. In Washington, D.C., women plan to protest food chain store "discount" prices. They have urged local women to support a 24-hour boycott of these stores.

Protest rallies are planned in Albuquerque, N.M.; Tucson, Ariz.; Chicago; San Francisco; Buffalo, and other cities. The Albuquerque rally will focus on problems of women in poverty and Mexican-American minorities.

Women themselves are divided. Some profess to see no point in the protests. Others say they are afraid to strike, particularly since strike planners say they can't offer help to women who are fired for staying away from work. Others say they support the strike "and to hell with the consequences." (In Washington, Federally Employed Women is urging the some 700,000 women in federal jobs to request annual leave Wednesday since the law forbids them to strike.)

Sammy Davis in Vegas Hospital With Pneumonia

LAS VEGAS (UPI) — Sammy Davis Jr. was hospitalized Saturday with pneumonia when he became ill at Lake Mead Marina, 40 miles east of here where he was on location for a television show.

The diminutive star was confined to an oxygen tent at Sunrise Hospital. He was listed in "fair" condition.

A doctor was called to the Caesars Palace yacht at Lake Mead Saturday afternoon when Davis became nauseated and complained of general aching. He had a temperature of 103 degrees and was rushed to the Las Vegas hospital by ambulance.

Davis had been commuting from Las Vegas for the past 13 days during the shooting of a television segment of "The Name of the Game" being filmed at Caesars Palace Hotel on the Las Vegas "Strip" and at Lake Mead.

ic substances to provide the State Water Resources Board with maps and descriptions of their pipelines, results of safety tests, descriptions of the substances carried and to report any leaks within 24 hours.

"THIS LEGISLATION would have imposed a minimal burden," said Stanton. "The operators have the information. I assume they have the maps and know what goes through their pipelines, and I hope they know when they have breaks."

The legislation was killed in the Legislature. No one knows whether it will be reintroduced at the next session.

Stanton is worried about the subtle effects of leaks, such as the effects on the underground water basin in the Forest Lawn leak.

"You can handle it once it gets to the street," he said. "Fire departments generally have been successful in coping with such problems."

He noted that the Western Oil and Gas Association has provided maps on a voluntary basis.

BUT NO ONE appears certain that all pipelines have been so mapped. In addition there have been problems with companies not admitting they are responsible for leaks — No one has admitted responsibility for the Forest Lawn leak, although only one pipeline is in the area and one company is bearing the costs of cleanup.

"Our greatest problem is getting some companies to own up," said Douglass. "They do send crews out right away when a leak is reported, but we usually know about the leak before they do."

Other substances, such as chlorine and natural gases are carried through pipelines. Two men were killed in a chlorine leak near Long Beach in 1967 and a city block was destroyed in a natural gas explosion in 1968 in San Jose.

DOUGLASS POINTED out that these pipelines operate for years without incidents.

"They pump millions and millions of gallons with stiff opposition," said without problems," he Stanton of the attorney said. He added, "We've general's office. been lucky." "It is a necessity," he "Legislation has met repeated.

Fulbright Plan Wants Israel Borders Assured

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. J. William Fulbright, D-Ark., Saturday proposed a bilateral treaty with Israel to guarantee its borders, by force if necessary, as the final step in a settlement of the Middle East struggle.

Fulbright emphasized that such a treaty would be acceptable only if the United Nations first settled the conflict, "imposing" terms if necessary, and firmly guaranteed the security of both Israel and the Arab states with a formal agreement ratified by all parties.

Under no condition, Fulbright said, should such a treaty be submitted to the Senate now. And he emphasized that it should serve only as a supplement to the U.N. agreement.

THE PROPOSAL was broached in a speech, "Old Myths and New Realities — II," which Fulbright will deliver to the Senate Monday — a 37-page document in which the chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee spelled out his views on the Mideast for the first time.

The State Department had no immediate comment on Fulbright's speech. The speech was likely to anger the Israelis, who have little faith in the United Nations and are adamantly opposed to imposed settlement. The Arab countries probably would object to greater U.S. involvement in the Mideast, specifically in the form of a treaty commitment to Israel.

The treaty proposal came as something of a surprise. Fulbright has been a foremost advocate of a shrinking of U.S. commitments abroad.

He told newsmen there was nothing inconsistent in his proposal. What he has objected to, most strenuously, he said, is secret executive agreements negotiated without the consent of Congress.

FULBRIGHT criticized Israel for continued occupation of Arab soil and praised the Arab states for moderating their opposition to the Jewish state. But he said the United States should frankly recognize its "sentimental and cultural bonds" with Israel. He said the nation's leaders should stop rationalizing U.S. involvement "in terms of grandiose geopolitical concepts" and recognize that "there is nothing wrong with a policy based on sentimental attachments."

Under Fulbright's plan, the U.N. Security Council would guarantee and enforce peace terms, including a return of occupied lands and compensation and resettlement of Palestinian refugees.

The guarantee would include stationing U.N. forces in militarily neutralized zones at all points that are critical to Israel's security, free passage for Israeli ships through the Suez Canal and the Strait of Tiran, and a restoration of the Arab-Israeli frontiers that existed before the June 1967 war.

SEN. J. WILLIAM FULBRIGHT

truce terms, accepted by Israel, committed the United States to maintaining such a balance.

And he claimed the balance has been tilted toward Egypt by the installation of surface-to-air missiles nearer the canal since the cease-fire went into effect at midnight Aug. 7.

"EVEN IF the United States had thought seriously about asking for the removal of the missiles, I doubt if they could effect it even if they wanted to," Rabin said.

He declined to elaborate on what weapons the United States should send Israel in order to maintain the arms balance.

Cairo Radio announced Saturday that the Iraqi government had arrested 10 more Egyptians, bringing to more than 70 the number jailed by Baghdad since the Iraqi and Egyptian governments began their propaganda war.

Iraq, a bitter foe of Egyptian acceptance of the U.S. peace initiative, has charged Egyptian authorities with jailing at least 26 of its nationals in Cairo.

IN AMMAN, Palestinian officials reported Saturday that four Arab guerrillas were wounded Friday night in a clash between two rival guerrilla groups.

The fight began, a spokesman said, when a truck from the Popular Struggle Front, which is loyal to Egyptian President Gamal Abdel Nasser, bumped into a car belonging to the anti-Nasser Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine.

A gunfight erupted that was finally halted by a joint patrol of Guerrillas and Jordanian army troops, officials said.

The Israeli military command in Tel Aviv reported Arab guerrillas shelled two frontier communities in Upper Galilee and an Israeli para-military settlement in occupied Jordan Friday night.

Israeli troops returned fire, a spokesman said, and there were no casualties.

Waning Tropical Storm Nears Haiti; 39 Dead

SAN JUAN, P.R. (UPI) — Tropical storm Dorothy, with 39 dead and hundreds injured in its wake, weakened to a tropical depression over the waters of the Caribbean Saturday, but remained a threat to Haiti and the Dominican Republic.

The French Red Cross rushed aid to the islands of Martinique and Dominica, where Dorothy made its first landfall Thursday, washing away homes, roadways and bridges with its torrential rains.

Hurricane hunter-planes reported Saturday Dorothy had become disorganized with top winds of 40 miles an hour as it neared the Dominican Republic's rugged Barahona Peninsula.

"Heavy rains and gusty winds with occasional gusts up to 45 mph should be expected in the south coastal areas of the Dominican Republic and over the Barahona Peninsula in particular," the weather bureau said. "Residents along the south coast should watch for rough seas and swells."

Forecasters said Dorothy was not expected to intensify but cautioned small craft in the south coastal areas of the Dominican Republic and Haiti to seek safe ports.

Body Found; Believed Kidnaped Girl

KITTERY, Maine (UPI) — The body of a young girl found under a pile of hay in an isolated barn was tentatively identified Saturday night as that of Mary Catherine Olenchuk, the missing 13-year-old daughter of an Army general.

The girl disappeared Aug. 9 and authorities feared she was kidnaped. The body, found in a wooded area about 10 miles from Ogunquit where Miss Olenchuk was last seen, was badly decomposed, police said. No signs of violence were apparent.

"The body was discovered in an obscure corner of the barn, covered with hay," said Assistant Attorney General Richard Cohen. He said a T-shirt bearing the words, "Yokomiko AFB" stencilled in blue, was found on the body, and Miss Olenchuk was wearing a shirt when she was last seen.

The barn, vacant but new, had apparently been used by "hippies" as a campsite recently, Cohen said.

The girl's parents, Brig. Gen. Peter Olenchuk and his wife, were notified and were expected to view the body today at a hospital in Waterville.

Cohen said fingerprints had been taken and a positive identification was expected Sunday morning. An autopsy was to be performed Saturday night.

Olenchuk, commander of the Army Ammunition Supply Agency in Joliet, Ill., was officer in charge of the movement of deadly nerve gas from depots to North Carolina for dumping in the Atlantic Ocean last week.

At a news conference Thursday, Olenchuk, 48, said he did not think the nerve gas job had anything to do with his youngest daughter's disappearance.

"I can't discount the possibility, but I think it is highly improbable," he said.

Cohen said there were no apparent signs of violence on the girl's body. "The tentative identification was made by her hair and personal effects," he said. "All signs point to homicide."

Pilot Suffers Seizure; Jet Lands Safely Uruguay Impasse Unbroken, Terrorists' Broadcast Foiled

NEW YORK (UPI) — A Northwest Airlines pilot flying a Boeing 707 with 140 passengers and six other crewmen aboard fell unconscious while making a landing approach to John F. Kennedy International Airport Saturday and the copilot took over, landing the plane safely.

Northwest officials said the pilot, Capt. Michael Jo Redmond, 50, of Minneapolis, was rushed by ambulance to the airport medical office. There was no report on his condition.

An airport spokesman said the crisis developed while the big jetliner from Minneapolis was making its approach to the airport at about 3:52 p.m. A crew member radioed the control tower that the pilot had suffered "a possible heart attack" and had lost consciousness.

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay — The war of nerves continued Saturday between the Tupamaro terrorists holding two foreign captives and the Uruguayan government, which refuses to bargain for their release.

Six Tupamaros seized a downtown radio station Friday night in an attempt to broadcast a message denouncing President Jorge Pacheco Areco for "attempting to establish a dictatorship."

The recorded broadcast, which was cut of the air by the transmission tower seconds after it began, also called U.S. police adviser Dan A. Mitrione, who was assassinated by the Tupamaros earlier this month, an "espionage agent."

But police sources said the confiscated message made no mention of the other two kidnaped foreigners, Brazilian Consul Aloyio Mares Dias Gomide and U.S. agronomist Claude L. Fly.

The last word on their fate was received Aug. 11, the day after Mitrione's body was found, in which the kidnapers said the hostages were in good health.

Unconfirmed reports said private negotiations with the terrorists for the release of the men had begun through the Brazilian Embassy and the Apostolic Nuncio, although spokesmen for both these missions denied them. The Apostolic Nuncio is the Vatican envoy.

The Uruguayan government has steadfastly rejected rebel demands for the release of 180 political prisoners as ransom.

St. Paul Store Bomb Injures Woman

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — A bomb exploded in a restaurant of a downtown St. Paul department store Saturday, injuring one woman, police said.

It was the second bomb blast within a week in the Twin Cities area. No reason for the blast was given immediately.

Police said they found a second bomb in the store and defused it.

The injured woman was identified as Mary Peek, 48, of St. Paul, listed in satisfactory condition at a hospital.

A spokesman for the department store, Dayton's, which has several stores in the area, said no estimate of damages had been made.

A bomb explosion Monday caused $500,000 damage to the old federal office building in Minneapolis.

RUMORS

JUNKY

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. — A two-ton abstract art sculpture, which city workmen hauled away from the HemisFair '68 grounds, will be restored or rebuilt, Mayor W. W. McAllister said.

"We do not know who was responsible for its destruction," McAllister said. "Somebody just moved it and apparently regarded it as a piece of junk. It was discovered in city yards very badly damaged."

He said the city accepted it as a gift in February 1968 and "that means it's our responsibility" to restore it.

Its absence from the fairground was noticed on a recent visit by Mrs. Henry Catto, who, with her husband, the U.S. ambassador to the Organization of American States, gave the metal sculpture to the fair in memory of her father, the late Gov. William P. Hobby.

RELAXED

NANCY, France — Butcher Marcel Leblaut returned from his vacation to find his house broken into but soon discovered the burglar. The intruder was asleep — after a good meal from the refrigerator — on Leblaut's bed.

CHILLY

VANCOUVER (UPI) — Most people wouldn't spend $400 to rent a bulldozer and go plowing through tons of garbage looking for a refrigerator. Unless, of course, it had a deep sentimental value.

Burton White's son hauled the refrigerator off to the local dump, believing his action to be a favor for his father.

Now the elder White is turning white at the thought of never seeing his ice-box again.

Sentimental value amounted to a $15,000 cache of rare coins hidden in the refrigerator.

LUCKY!

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — A boy drawing lucky numbers pulled out 155 winners at a stationery store's grand opening — including the five numbers he had entered.

A spokesman for the store said the boy, 12-year-old Jay Nagle, looked the other way during each drawing and pulled the tickets from the bottom of the box.

An engineer for a Charlotte corporation figured the odds against a person drawing his own five numbers in 155 tries were 1,550,837 to 1.

PROTEST

BOSTON — (UPI) — About 15 young women marched in front of the city's most fashionable clothing stores to protest the replacement of the miniskirt by the midi.

All members of the Girls Against Midis (GAMS), they said midie and longer skirts were an attempt by manufacturers to exploit some women's susceptibility to fashion trends.

All but one of the marchers had their hemlines far above the knee. She wore bell-bottomed slacks.

Hold Your Breath — Fight Pollution

MOSCOW (UPI) — Hold your breath, and help fight air pollution.

A Soviet magazine Saturday described man as a small-scale polluter who exhales everything from hydrocarbons to ethyl alcohol into the atmosphere.

The journal Khimia i Zhizn (Chemistry and Life) said Soviet biologists discovered an exotic variety of substances in the air breathed out by human beings.

The included hydrocarbons, alcohols, ammonia, formic and acetic acids and acetone.

"The scientists have found that even non-drinkers exhale an average of 17 milligrams of ethyl alcohol daily," the magazine said.

Khima i Zhizn said the experiments on what people exhale are important in designing life-support systems for spaceships.

2,208 Miles of Federal Highways Due to Open

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Federal Highway Administration said Saturday 2,208 miles of interstate highway will be opened in a total of 44 states this year.

Federal Highway Administrator F. C. Turner said California would open the greatest distance, 161 miles. Illinois is opening 137 miles, Utah 116 miles, Wyoming, 111 miles and Montana and Virginia each 105 miles.

THE INTERSTATE highway program was begun during the Eisenhower administration. Federal highway officials estimate that sometime in the late 1970s, it will be possible to drive coast to coast, or border to border, nonstop on interstate roads.

In October, they said, a segment of Interstate 80 will open in Pennsylvania which will allow uninterrupted travel on the route between the east coast and Nebraska.

Major accomplishments as a result of the mileage being built this year include the following new roads in western states:

— As a result of construction in Wyoming and Colorado, I-25 will stretch 380 miles without interruption between Springer, New Mexico, and Cheyenne, Wyoming. And the closing of another Colorado gap enables I-80 to go 254 miles nonstop from Castle Rock, Utah, to Cheyenne.

— Construction in California has opened up a 227-mile stretch of I-15 between San Bernardino, California and Las Vegas, Nevada, expediting travel between Los Angeles and Las Vegas.

A state-by-state breakdown on the new interstate mileage to be opened in western states during 1970, and the routes involved, follows.

Water Bumpers Tried on Buses

LOS ANGELES — Hit a Southern California Rapid Transit District bus and it may go s-p-l-a-t.

The district plans to put "water bumpers" on 10 of its new buses this fall to test whether it makes them safer.

The water bumper, the company explained Tuesday, absorbs a vehicle's impact by release of water.

The water-filled bumpers will be made of vinyl plastic.

Negro Asks Half Million, Claims Arizona University Failed to Warn Him of Valley Fever

TUCSON, Ariz. (UPI) — A $500,000 damage suit was filed in Superior Court here against the Arizona

Board of Regents by a New Jersey man who claimed the University of Arizona failed to warn him of the dangers of valley fever, especially to Negroes. Lester Randolph Jr., a Negro from Roselle, N.J., charged in the suit that he contracted the disease, known medically as "common coccidioidomycosis, in 1966 as a freshman at Arizona. He said the Arizona Board of Regents had a duty to warn him when he applied for admission to the University that Tucson was an endemic area for valley fever and that it is 20 to 30 times more frequent in Negroes than in Caucasians.

Randolph charged that he has suffered permanent damages because of the disease.

'Integration Policy' in Taxing Defended

By JOHN M. PEARCE
WASHINGTON — The government's new policy of denying tax exemptions to private schools that refuse to admit Negroes is not "addressed to a specific problem identifiable with a given region of the country," the Internal Revenue Service said Saturday.

Nor is it pointed at any particular state, IRS Commissioner Randolph W. Thrower said in reply to a bitter letter of protest written by Florida Gov. Claude R. Kirk Jr. Thrower said he is confident the federal courts will uphold the new position.

Kirk's letter, dated July 29, said the IRS apparently intended to involve itself in "social engineering," and planned to "bludgeon into submission

HEW 'Integrate Now' 25% Success in Texas

By ROBERT E. FORD
DALLAS, Tex. (AP) — The Health-Education-Welfare Department's "desegregate now" campaign in Texas could claim a 25 percent success Saturday. From here on, it seemed from legal maneuverings, the agency will find tougher going.

In 17 days, seven schools have met the new guidelines either through agreement or court order.

And it appeared that the Justice Department, those who have failed to conform to what the Internal Revenue Service holds to be desirable."

In addition, Kirk accused Thrower of "complete and utter disregard" of the principle that laws, not men, rule the nation and said he has shown a "willingness to extend your own authority where the law gives you no clear right to extend it."

Thrower responded, in a letter dated last Wednesday and released Saturday night, that the position "was not reached as a unilateral act of the IRS, but only after considerable and lengthy study of the issues and in consultation with the Justice Department, the Treasury Department, and members of the White House staff."

It is, he said, "nation-wide in scope" and will be uniformly applied to private schools in all states."

IRS POLICY since July 10 has been to deny tax exemptions to private schools in racially discriminatory admissions policies. In addition, contributors to those schools would lose the right to deduct their contributions for income tax purposes.

The policy would apply to contributions made only after an exemption is revoked.

IRS has in fact, revoked the "advance assurance of deductibility" for contributors to 11 schools, all in Mississippi, while granting new exemptions and assurances to seven other southern schools which had applications pending when the policy was announced.

In Mississippi, however, IRS is under federal court order to suspend the exemptions of 41 private schools — including the 11 named in a suit brought by the parents of black pupils in public schools, unless those schools guarantee to the court's satisfaction they do not discriminate.

NONE OF the schools granted exemptions since July 10 is in Florida.

Thrower told Kirk, as he explained at a news conference announcing the policy, that the 5,000 private schools with current exemptions and the organizations controlling 10,000

CAMPUS SECURITY CHIEFS from three universities listen intently during a seminar held Saturday in Washington, D.C., by the President's Commission on Campus Unrest.

Panel Seeks to Clarify Police Role on Campuses

By PEGGY SIMPSON

WASHINGTON (AP) — After a three-day probe in Ohio of campus trouble that took the lives of four Kent State University students, a presidential commission met Saturday with law enforcement officials to determine when police should get involved in college disturbances.

"When do you break up an illegal gathering and when do you not — and who must complain for you to act?" asked Dean Bayless Manning, a member of the President's Commission on Campus Unrest and dean of the Stanford University Law School. The question set the tone for the session with college and municipal police.

The meeting came after a week of hearings during which the commission also traveled to Mississippi's Jackson State College, like Kent State the scene of student deaths last spring and continuing controversy over the role of National Guardsmen and police.

The commission's report is expected in mid-September.

William W. Seranton, former governor of Pennsylvania and commission chairman, said there appears to be a fuzzy jurisdictional area regarding authority when a college is in the midst of a city.

"JACKSON STATE is a good example," Seranton said, "where a main thoroughfare goes right through the campus."

City police patrol the fringes of the campus, he said, but where their authority begins and ends seems debatable.

William T. Beall Jr., chief of the University of California police force, said in such situations he favors an integrated campus and public city police force.

"Have them work on and off campus and do it in a very routine way," Beall said, "so it is a daily occurrence and students accept this as a daily part of their life."

The commission met behind closed doors, except for a brief photographing session.

Thomas Reddin, former chief of police in Los Angeles and now a television commentator, quipped that the presence of cameras "certainly stimulated the discussion. Everyone wants to speak at once."

IN ADDITION to Beall and Reddin, others at the meeting included four chiefs of police: Edward M. Davis, Los Angeles; Charles R. Gain, Oakland; Bernard L. Garmire, Miami, and Jerry V. Wilson, Washington, D.C.

There were two major generals in the National Guard, James A. Liston of Madison, Wis., and Charles L. Southward, Washington, D.C.; Sheriff Dale Carson of Jacksonville, Fla.; Michigan's director of state police, Col. Frederick Davids; and Quinn Tamm, executive director of the International Association of Chiefs of Police.

Other campus police representatives were W. Wade Cromwell of the University of Virginia and John Chesley Marchant of the University of Massachusetts. Commissioners Donald D. Pomerleau of Baltimore, Md., and Francis B. Looney, Nassau County, N.Y., also were invited.

During the commission's hearing at Kent State testimony disclosed there was no evidence of sniper fire during the May 4 confrontation between students that led to the deaths.

Other major points made before the commission were:

— Guardsmen on the campus were scared and disorganized during the break up of a war protest rally climaxed by the shooting.

— Guardsmen should be equipped with non-lethal weapons for civil disturbances but should not be sent to university campuses except as a last resort.

— The commission should decide if the actions of Gov. James A. Rhodes, who was defeated in a Republican primary election for the U.S. Senate the next day, inflamed the riot situation.

6 Young People Killed as Microbus Hits Van

SWEET SPRINGS, Mo. (AP) — Six young people were killed and a girl was critically injured Saturday when, according to highway patrolmen, a microbus slammed against a parked tractor-trailer along Interstate 70 east of Sweet Springs.

The driver, Ronald Edward Childress of Memphis, Tenn., suffered minor facial lacerations. With him in the van was William Albert Hopson of Macomb, Ill., who was not injured.

The identified dead were listed by the Highway Patrol as John Scott Sears, 23, of Richmond, Va., who was the driver of the Volkswagen; William Wiebold,

17, of Baldwin, N. Y.; Michael Harrington, of Morro Bay, Calif.; Jay

Sandoval of Denver, Colo., and one man was not immediately identified.

The injured girl was 18-year-old Caroline Tiberio of Batavia, N. Y.

Girls to Face 100 Men in 'Clean Air' Car Race

By DAVID HASKELL

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (UPI) — Two young girls who don't know anything about cars and a 38-year-old mother who set a speed record in drag boat racing pit their driving skills against about 100 males in the Second Transcontinental Clean Air Car Race which begins Monday.

"No, we don't know anything about cars, except to drive them," said Cheryl Williams, 20, who with Lydia Summers, 21, make up the only all-girl driving team in the 3,600-mile race from Massachusetts Institute of Technology in Cambridge to California Institute of Technology in Pasadena.

ABOUT 40 automobiles, all equipped with power systems designed to drastically reduce air pollution from motor vehicles, are expected Monday to begin the first leg of the six-day race, involving about 350 students from colleges and universities in the United States and Canada.

Cheryl and Lydia, both from Bedford, Ind., are driving the entry sponsored by the University of Evansville in Indiana, where Miss Williams is a psychology major. Miss Summers is a nursing student at Purdue. Their 1969 Oldsmobile has been modified to run on liquid propane gas, but the girls admit they won't know anything about it.

"Everybody's excited and nobody has any confidence in Lydia and I," Miss Williams said. "They don't think we can drive it, but we don't really expect any trouble."

Mrs. Roberta Nichols, 38, a graduate student working on her masters degree in physics at the University of California at Los Angeles — which sponsors her car — is the only mother in the race, which is intended to stimulate both academic and industrial efforts toward meeting antipollution standards set up by the federal government for 1975.

SHE GOT involved in this race, she said, because of her interests in drag boat racing. Up until last September she held the world record for women on water in drag boat racing, reaching 131 miles per hour in 8.5 seconds over a quarter-mile course from an idling start.

"It's fun," said Mrs. Nichols, whose 17-year-old son Robert will be her cross-country driving partner.

"I think we'll have a real good time," she said. She and her son will be operating an internal combustion engine car run on diesel fuel.

The only other girl driver entered in the race is Nancy E. Wood, a Worcester (Mass.) Polytechnic Institute freshman from Gardner, Mass., a member of one of the institutes' five entries.

This race is the outgrowth of one two years ago when MIT and Caltech went cross-country in opposite directions in electric-powered automobiles. Caltech won on a corrected time basis.

ALTHOUGH there are about six pure electric cars and a like number of electric-hybrids in this year's race, most of the entries are modified internal combustion engines using either propane, natural or compressed gas. MIT has entered the only turbine vehicle and four steam-driven cars were registered.

For the next week, the drivers will head west with overnight stops scheduled for Toronto, Ann Arbor, Mich., Champaign, Ill., Oklahoma City, Odesa, Tex., and Tucson, Ariz., with the first arrivals expected at Caltech late Sunday.

At Pasadena, the cars will be tested for pollution emissions which, along with performance and elapsed time for each of the six legs of the race, will be used as the basis to determine winners in the various classes and an overall winner.

DR. JOHN T. Middleton, head of the National Air Pollution Control Administration, says his agency will lease the winning cars in each of the five categories for $5,000 each for two months to study the vehicles as possible cars of the future.

Although the purpose of the race is serious — to find ways to reduce air pollution from automobile exhausts — most of the teams are finding the whole affair a swell way to spend the summer.

As Miss Williams put it: "We're having a good time."

More Pollution Talk Than Action

By GIL BAILEY
Contributing Editor

Much is said about the environment, and protecting it, but little is done.

A white-haired and distinguished-looking gentleman, both corporate and a little corpulent, down the table at a lunch for the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce Water and Power Committee, commented:

"Those environmentalists. They want to stop everything."

His viewpoint, in part valid, also illustrates why so little is being done, and it does raise the question of what could be done in terms of our present society, and the way it functions, to bring pollution down to acceptable limits without destroying society.

So here are some ideas on how society — today's society — might be changed to help the environment, and with these ideas some illustration of the cost to the individual.

First, the automobile is responsible for most of our smog, so reduce auto use and you reduce smog.

Make automobiles more expensive, so that most families can afford but one car — say you need an income of $15,000 per year, or more, before you can afford a second car (costs being what they are, we're approaching that figure now).

Change the law on driver's licenses. Don't issue any to anyone under age of 21, unless they can prove absolute need, need for a job, or need for head of household or, perhaps, if they were in the service. If the only way a guy could get a driver's license was to enlist we might not need a draft.

IT IS ONLY an estimate, but if all the under-21 "pleasure" drivers were eliminated — a costly pleasure — then smog might be reduced 10 to 20 per cent.

Ban cars from Central Los Angeles, and the central core of other major cities, and provide bus and taxi services — buses driven by natural gas and electric go-carts for downtown taxi service.

Electrical power plants and industries, including oil refineries, chemical plants and foundries, also cause air pollution. Air-conditioning, all by itself, is forcing demands for electrical power up. Until there is pollution-free power, restrict the use of air-conditioning to areas where it is needed for medical purposes.

Some industries would just plain have to be ordered to move.

CONCURRENTLY turn the auto and space industries loose on such projects as rapid and mass transit and water pollution control plants. Require, that, at least, industry use recycled water.

What kind of life would all this produce?

For a time there would be economic dislocation, similar to what is currently happening in the space industry.

The kids would have to walk or take the bus. They wouldn't be driving.

Dad would probably be taking the bus to work. It might take him longer, but then again it might not.

THERE WOULD be no air-conditioning on hot nights, but hopefully the hot air would be pure air.

Each home might have but one television set and the family would be talking to each other, even if only in heated discussion of Ed Sullivan versus the football game.

There wouldn't be any camper truck, or trail bike for vacation, but there would be a relatively natural area for that vacation.

Clothes might not come out of the wash so white, but the water coming out of the pipe at the other end wouldn't be loaded with phosphates.

IN PART, what would happen is what President Nixon's Environmental Committee suggested — a change in the economic thinking of the country. Many material goods would be exchanged for improved quality of the air, water and land.

None of this is going to happen, at least not right away, but those who talk about cleaning up the environment should also talk about the cost, and part of that cost is the personal freedom we now enjoy to pollute.

Does the "right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness" include the right to pollute? A good many people, including that gentleman at the chamber luncheon, think so, although they wouldn't define it in the terms just used.

How much are you willing to give up for clean air and water and for an uncluttered landscape? Would you give up your car and your air-conditioner?

By BEN FUNK

OCALA, Fla. (AP) — Conservation 70s, charging that the Cross-Florida Barge Canal digging already has ruptured underground water springs, threw its weight Saturday behind the move for a moratorium on construction.

Lyman C. Rogers, president of the powerful coalition of environmental groups, said "logic dictates an absolute guarantee of our water supply before another spade of earth is removed."

"IT IS NOW clear," Rogers said in a statement, "that the primary environmental consideration is the undetermined effect this digging will have on the great Florida Aquifer, that massive honeycomb of limestone that serves as our underground water storage tank."

"Already the digging on the western side from the Ignis Lock to the Gulf has caused several serious ruptures of underground springs, allowing this fresh water to flow to the open Gulf."

It was this same "unknown factor," Rogers said, that forced a halt to construction of a ship channel started along the same route in the 1930s.

Asked for reaction to the C-70 statement, Joe J. Koperski, chief of the U.S. Army engineering division at Jacksonville, said:

"We have been hearing statements that a few springs were flowing into the Gulf but they must be very minor. I don't think you could class them as ruptures."

ROGERS said his organization, formed to lobby a record number of environmental bills through the 1970 Legislature, has carefully watched "the gathering storm clouds of doubt and controversy" surrounding the canal project.

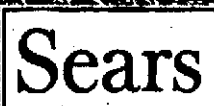

Comment was withheld, he said, until the leadership was convinced that a moratorium was essential pending determination of the canal's impact on the state.

Interior Secretary Walter J. Hickel has called for a 15-month work stoppage to permit an indepth ecological study and Rogers said C-70s was "appalled" that federal and state agencies and members of Congress were fighting the move.

"It is the essence of sound reason that additional tax money should not be expended on this project until this study is completed," the statement said.

The Environmental Quality Act of 1970 requires that no project may be built without guarantees against environmental destruction, it added, and public officials who try to prevent implementation of the law are in violation of it.

Evening School Expanded

By RALPH HINMAN JR.
Education Editor

Expanded and sporting a new name, Long Beach's second-oldest high school reopens this fall at 845 Park Ave. and three other locations strategically spotted around the city.

"Long Beach School for Adult/Evening High School" is the new, broad-purpose name of an institution known more simply since its founding in 1913 as Evening High.

Headquartered in the rear of Wilson High — that's the Park Avenue address — a "new" LBSEAHS results from a July 1 separation of the city's unified school and junior college districts.

PRIOR TO the division, "old" EHS was tied closely to City College. It was based on that school's bustling mid-town business and technology campus, administered on a split-time basis by a college official. Many, if not most, of its classes were integral to the college's far-flung adult education program.

In the separation process, however, LBCC gained title to its business and technology facility while the unified district kept full responsibility for Evening High.

An immediate question to be resolved involved a new home for EHS. Since a growing college needed the space at BTC, where would the night school go?

Wilson, with its more central location, was an obvious choice as a substitute home base.

Selected to administer the program were former Jordan High Principal Clifton N. Patterson, given this budget-pinched year a dual role as director of special projects and EHS principal, and Patrick J. Bratton, teacher-in-charge.

WHICH — and how many — courses to offer was another pressing question.

Supt. W. Odie Wright earlier had recommended a curriculum not exceeding 100 basic "and a few elective" courses.

As finally hammered out, the new EHS will present 40 classes in 12 subject areas: art, business, citizenship, English, history, humanities, industrial arts, mathematics, political science, psychology, public affairs and science.

In addition, any course in the LBCC 100 or 700 series may be taken through the college for high school credits, strongly bolstering the basic program.

With much of the classwork to be done between 7 and 10 p.m. at Wilson, courses also were scheduled for three new adult centers: the Community Improvement League, 2222 Olive Ave.; Stephens Junior High School, 1830 W. Columbia St. and Lindbergh JHS, 1022 E. Market St.

Faculties at all four centers were recruited largely from the regular high school teaching ranks, says Bratton, himself a former Poly High humanities and English instructor.

GRADUATION requirements are comparable to those in a daytime high school although physical education is not mandatory, Bratton points out.

An older student is entitled to credit toward a diploma from several sources: previous high school work, correspondence courses from accredited schools or the U.S. Armed Forces Institute (USAFI), work experience, military service or by examination over a specific subject.

Honorably discharged veterans are entitled to 10 credits plus a maximum of 20 additional points for service school programs.

Veterans, and in some cases, nonveterans, may take a General Educational Development test which, with a decent score, replaces all but two courses needed for graduation.

USEFUL IN MANY COURSES Teachers' Seminar at CSLB Makes Newspaper a Tool

"I had never thought of a newspaper as anything but a source of current events . . ."

But as a result of a just-completed Newspaper-in-the-Classroom seminar at California State College, Long Beach, teacher Diane Sensy returns to school this fall "full of so many ideas I'm dying to try out."

She — and 34 other Long Beach and area teachers — participated in a two-week, upper division credit-earning session sponsored jointly with the college by The Independent, Press-Telegram.

COMPARABLE content-wide programs are supported by American Newspaper Publishers Association (ANPA) and the National Education Association.

Finding now, innovative, relevant ways to use newspapers as a teaching tool was a primary goal for the course as guided by CSLB faculty and a wide-ranging panel of guest lecturers.

Teacher-participants agreed that newspapers especially are valuable in reading, English and social studies courses, both regular and remedial.

Other uses — as outlined in written projects turned in by enrollees — included "Use of the Newspaper in a Life Science Course"; "Student Analysis of Mass Media"; "The Newspaper and Practical Mathematics."

One project even told of utilizing the medium in typing classes.

While most of these teachers were from junior and senior high schools, there are successful programs here and across the nation on an elementary school level. Whatever the grade, newspapers are billed as auxiliary teaching aids, not replacements for textbooks.

Seminary members toured the I.P.T. as part of their studies.

Although the summer program is finished, alumni will meet this fall to compare notes, says Mrs. Barbara O'Reilly, educational services coordinator for these newspapers.

In addition, she says, "Many attending asked for information on how to run workshops in their own schools, to share with other teachers what they learned and tested. I am available for consultation and aid on such workshops for graduates and other interested teachers."

CSLB FACULTY were Associate Prof. Mayer J. Franklin, secondary education department chairman, and Journalism department head Dixon Gayer, with Glada Thrall of Millikan High School serving as course coordinator. Guest lecturers were:

COMPLETE NEWSPAPER SEMINAR
With diplomas in hand and newsprint mortarboard caps, graduates of the Newspaper-In-The-Classroom course for teachers held at California State College, Long Beach, surround Dr. Mayer Franklin, chairman of the

Retiring NASA Chief Still Faces Tough Apollo Decisions

By AL ROSSITER, JR.

CAPE KENNEDY (UPI) — A month after he took the helm of the National Space Agency, Dr. Thomas O. Paine was faced with one of the toughest decisions of his career — was Project Apollo ready to send men around the moon?

He decided it was, and his judgment cleared the way for the historic Apollo 8 lunar orbit Christmas time flight in 1968.

That daring adventure shaved several months off America's moon landing timetable and seven months later, Apollo 11 astronauts Neil A. Armstrong and Edwin E. Aldrin set foot on the moon's Sea of Tranquility.

DR. THOMAS O. PAINE

Calls It Quits

Paine, 48, guided the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) through the harrowing recovery of the near-disastrous Apollo 13 moonflight last April.

NOW, 22 months after he took over as administrator of the agency, Paine has decided to call it quits. He will return to the company that he left in January, 1968, to become deputy NASA administrator.

"There certainly is some relief in laying down such a tremendous burden of responsibility for carrying out these programs in the light of all the world," Paine said after announcing his decision.

"And yet I must confess, in all sincerity, that despite the somewhat sense of relief that goes with laying down these responsibilities, my real reaction is one of great reluctance.

"I'LL MISS that much more than I will feel relieved to have laid them down. It was a tremendous experience for me, one that I am sure will be the greatest in my life, and I am really sorry to be leaving.

Paine's decision to leave his $42,500-a-year post was a surprise to just about everyone in the 31,000-man space agency. But he said for personal reasons he could not continue as NASA administrator for many more months "and it was my conclusion that this was an excellent time for a change of command.

"When I faced up to the job in the space agency, it was clear to me there were two major responsibilities that had to be discharged," Paine said.

can leaders, the sources said. Under this heading, the conferees will deal with Rhodesia, Portuguese, French and Spanish colonies, and South Africa's racial policies and its refusal to relinquish South-west Africa.

The sources said beyond new calls for increased African aid to black African nationalist movements and for international pressure against white minority rules, they were unable to see what the conferees can do to bring down white governments in Africa.

The sources said they do not expect the OAU to adopt drastic measures against Britain, such as severance of diplomatic relations, the conservative government supplies military equipment to South Africa.

AS IN PREVIOUS conferences the "decolonization" of those parts of Africa still under foreign domination will continue to be a main concern of Afri-

ONE OF THESE was the meeting of the committee that we made to the American people that we would land on the moon within the decade of the 1960s. The second was to lay out the post-Apollo program which would follow this decade of the sixties and its very strong concentration on one particular goal in space.

Even before Apollo reached the moon, the one-time submariner and deep sea diver was turning a great deal of his administrative energy toward the future.

He directed a detailed study of future spaceflight opportunities and from that analysis came a report to the President's space task group recommending a broad, ambitious program of cosmic exploration and exploitation for the 1970s and beyond.

THE NASA recommendations to the presidential study panel included manned planetary expeditions in the 1980s, development of a rocket plane space shuttle transportation system, creation of 50-and 100-man earth orbital space bases and smaller lunar colonies and a wide variety of automated space missions.

The space task group was headed by Vice President Spiro T. Agnew and was made up of Paine, Air Force Secretary Robert C. Seamans and Dr. Lee A. DuBridge, the President's science adviser.

The group accepted most of NASA's recommendations last fall. It called for a balanced manned and unmanned space program for the rest of the century with emphasis on development of practical applications of spaceflight as well as continued exploration of the universe.

THE PANEL also recommended to President Nixon that the United States accept the long range goal of a manned flight to the planet Mars before the year 2000.

Without committing the United States to any specific program, the President earlier this year accepted the recommendation that the nation proceed with a balanced manned and unmanned spaceflight program for the 1970s and beyond.

Paine, who was at the Florida White House when the President issued his statement on space, said Nixon favored "a bold, diversified, very wide ranging program for the 1970s

BUT THE increasing demands upon the nation's finances for cures to some of its more pressing domestic problems and the constant dream by the war in Vietnam have resulted in severe money restrictions on NASA that have jeopardized many of the agency's proposed projects.

Paine of late has been devoting much of his time to fighting for more funds from the White House and Congress and setting priorities for the use of the diminishing money available to the agency.

Paine, who will become a vice president for the General Electric Co., said he is not at his best in political maneuvering. But he said he got along well with Congress and the President, and he said the budget cutbacks were not the cause of his resignation.

NASA IS now beginning to prepare its budget request for the next fiscal year. Unless a new administrator is named before that, Deputy Administrator George M. Low will run the agency when Paine leaves Sept. 15. One of Low's first tasks will be the 1972 spending plan.

Paine, however, still has one major decision facing him — whether two moon landings should be eliminated from the Apollo program to free two Saturn 5 rockets for later space station launchings.

"We need to make these decisions within a relatively short period of time," Paine said the day after he announced his plans to leave the government.

Beyond that, Paine said, decisions are needed on the priorities of the space shuttle transportation system now in the early design stage, on advance space station programs, on orbit to orbit maneuvering systems and on the many unmanned scientific and applications mission proposed.

"This is going to obviously require hard decisions since the resources are limited, and we have to stretch this over a large number of different activities," Paine said.

"It's very important, I think, as we face these issues and make these decisions, that we take a very long range view because the direction that the space program takes in the 1970s is indeed going to cast a shadow through to the end of the century."

"I can see nothing ahead but continued success and national recognition for future Police Olympic events."

---William J. Mooney,
Chief of Police, Long Beach

Their aim: to win

By JUDY HAZLETT
Staff Writer

The Police Olympics are coming to Long Beach — and for the first time in the four year history of the statewide event, policewomen have been included in the official rules.

The games will begin Friday at various sites throughout the Long Beach area; awards presentations and luau will be held at the Edgewater Hyatt House to close the three-day marathon Sunday.

Until this year only a handful of women peace officers took part in the competition.

In 1967, the first Police Olympics was held in San Diego. No women.

In 1968, the Orange County law en-

Lady paddles board toward clean water

By PAT McDONNELL
Staff Writer

Some have called her a "modern kind of earth mother who fights for land, sea and air."

A newsman described her as "the public watchdog member of the Los Angeles Regional Water Quality Control Board" and "a most uncommon scold."

Adversaries have dubbed her "Brown's Revenge" in reference to her midnight appointment by former Gov. Edmund G. (Pat) Brown days before he relinquished his office to Ronald Reagan.

No matter what titles they give her, Ellen Stern Harris stands alone as a Dona Quixote waging war against industries who pollute the Los Angeles County shoreline, harbor and ground water supplies.

Long before ecology became a popular word, the scourge of polluters was leading a lonely campaign to conserve the remaining resources and scenic beauties of California.

As her four-year office comes before Governor Reagan for reappointment next month, Mrs. Harris can be proud of her record of spurring the once-lethargic board into implementing her demands to halt industrial waste discharges into harbor waters.

"I used to be a very mild, positive-thinking girl," smiled the articulate third-generation Californian as she relaxed over a cup of coffee in her Beverly Hills home, the dark-haired, attractive divorcee looked more like a spokesman for the Junior League than the arch enemy of noise, waste and pollution.

"People used to comment about the 'marvelous projects Ellen has in mind' . . . I suppose that's how they thought of me when they appointed me to this position," she grimaced.

"I also was naive and assumed

• The 1970 series of Starlight Serenades will close Tuesday with a free concert at 8 p.m. in Recreation Park. Soloist will be baritone Hernan Pelayo, opera singer and man of many talents. He also is a man with a dream that he is turning into reality. See story, Page W-6.

Suffragette to march again, others buy turtles in Peru

By PAT McDONNELL

"CARDS ON THE CLIFF" was the successful successor Tuesday to 1969's "Bridge on the Bluff" at Elsie Benwell's spacious home on Ocean Boulevard. And well over 70 members and guests of Long Beach Symphony Guild enjoyed sparkling conversation and mouth-watering buffet spread at fund-raising bridge and garden party.

Hostess' horticultural talents were evidenced by blooming garden of roses, bachelor buttons and massive dahlias as music lovers discussed upcoming Starlight Serenade on Tuesday in Recreation Park.

Vivacious Eva Miner circulated among Jean Tyndall, Marty Delaplane and Florence Locks . . . to name a few. Looking smart in an ivory-hued sheath was Lillian Crawford. Her black and red designer's scarf purchased in Tokyo's Imperial Hotel brought back memories of Japan trip to Expo '70 for Olga Bowers, Judy DuBourdieu and Alma Bobb particularly fetching in beige skirt of raw silk and shirtmaker blouse.

Bridge buff Ruth Todd quickly got down to business of cards while Margie Masterson, May Evett and Jean Barnshaw poured over guild scrapbook prepared by Alberta Carlson.

THAT INTREPID turtle collector, Anne Strong Graves, has been at it again and is back in Long Beach with a variety of exotic tortoises from South America to add to her 1,500-piece collection.

Anne and her Smith College classmate, Anne Close of Fort Mill, S.C., launched their two-week odyssey by flying to Lima, Peru, thence to the Amazon River port of Iquitos. From there they took a motor launch to a jungle camp, sans electricity or plumbing, to observe primitive Indian tribes. At night they went spear-fishing and looked out for crocodiles with flashlights.

After touring Cuzco, they boarded a train for Machu Picchu to explore the site of the Incas' final retreat from the Spanish conquistadores.

"The ruins were discovered as recently as 1911 and are remarkably well-preserved," reports Anne.

The adventurous duo then flew to the Galapagos Islands, where wouldn't you know, not a single giant tortoise was to be seen.

"There was plenty of wildlife," says Anne, "the seals, penguins and blue-footed boobies had no fear of humans and we walked among them."

For more details, check with Anne who's busy unpacking her newest acquisitions — a turtle carved from a horse's skull and primitives made by Amazonian Indians.

Her next turtle-hunting expedition? Why the Himalayas, of course. Where else would one search for Tibetan turtles?

ALL TEEN-AGERS should be so lucky as Cindy Carver whose parents, Bob and Bev Carver, treated her with a trip to Tahiti to celebrate her 14th birthday.

Carver family's two-week idyl in the island paradise was shared with Ed and Ursula Casselman of Garden Grove and Bill and Irma Lee Dietrich of Oceanside.

Cindy cut her birthday cake on their arrival day in Papeete and got her wish for plenty of scuba diving when the group headquartered at Club Mediterranee on Moorea. Side trip was made to Bora Bora and everyone's home boasting marvelous sun tans — especially Bev who sewed five bikinis designed for same.

SILVER ANNIVERSARY of Glen and Valerie Moeller was marked at a reception in Westminster home of their son-in-law and daughter, Don and Julie Silliphant.

Guests included Pat and Byrne Centers, Carl and Yvonne Calkins, Al and Simone Harrison, Richard and Andrea Prior, Clara and Keith Atkins, Dave and Doris Jackson and Pat Turner. The Moellers were married in Valerie's hometown of Norbiton, Surrey, Eng.

...old salts cruise to Santa Cruz

ADD TO THE INCREASING members of the "Moving Generation" the names of Hal and Diane Steuber who are moving to Lafayette now that Hal's been transferred by his firm to Berkeley.

No doubt about it, Diane's been a busy gal packing for youngsters, Tommy and April, and transferring household goods from the old English Tudor house she and Hal have been remodeling since they moved into it two years ago.

Lucky Hal has been off to business sessions in San Francisco and Chicago — so much so, that he missed his own farewell party because of a delayed flight to Los Angeles.

Undaunted host-couple, Sally and Steve Maynard, repeated party Saturday when they bid Sandy and Jim Gill, Johnny and Catherine Richert and Judy and Joel Indes to view home movies of the group's activities over the years.

Other members of the "Moving Generation" missing from fest were Barbara and Ken Borden who started the trend one year ago when they took up residence in Lake Oswego, Ore., and Marshall and Sue McComb, who now live in Walnut Creek — five minutes away from Diane and Hal's new home in Lafayette.

OLD SALTS of Marina Yacht Club are back from a week-long cruise to Santa Cruz under the able direction of Port Captain Fred Miller and wife June.

Commodore Harry Dawson and Mary Lou sailed on Soots-Us to first port of call (after seven-hour run) at Channel Island below Ventura.

Next day, boats were paired for buddy cruising and on Monday, the fleet crossed in Santa Cruz to anchor at Pelican Bay. Tuesday was set aside for hiking and beach party enjoyed by Marv and Veronica Tincher, and Jack and Virginia Herten . . . to name a few.

Sailors were kept busy Wednesday boarding dingys to view the painted caves at high tide and night anchorage in Lady's Harbor where Vice Commodore John Mapes and wife Anita took the vanguard on the Great Escape.

Docking Thursday at Smugglers' Cove were Bob and Marie Givens and Fred and Norine Taylor.

Rounding it up with weekend at Catalina and the Isthmus were Gerard and Alberta Hixon, guests of the William Kaudlers, on the Karinoko, J. W. and Pat Hodge on the Shamrock.

THEY PICKETED the White House, waved banners and cried out demands for equality.

They braved arrest, went to prison and courted death by starvation in hunger strikes. Does it sound familiar?

We're referring to the Suffragettes who campaigned to liberate half the population — women — and won in 1920 when the 19th Amendment to the Constitution was ratified giving women the right to vote.

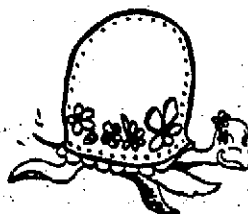

To commemorate the 50th anniversary of this event, the U.S. Post Office is issuing on Wednesday a six-cent Woman Suffrage stamp.

And a Long Beacher who'll be in line at the Post Office to get her share of the commemorative stamps is Helen Price of 222 Belmont Ave.

Spirited Helen, who retains membership in the Long Beach League of Women Voters, takes pride in the fact she marched in Los Angeles during the 1911 Suffrage Parade. She colorfully describes the day in 1920 that she cast her first ballot.

Now the lively LWV'er is campaigning for a California stamp to be issued for our state's leaders in the Suffrage movement.

Proof that you can't keep a good woman down is the repeat performance of her role of 59 years ago that Helen intends to make Wednesday when she participates in the women's liberation march and demonstrations in Los Angeles

New horizons scanned by hospital trustees, wives at banquet

Telescoping in on new horizons of patient care are Bruce Sanderson (left), administrator of Long Beach Community Hospital; LaVerne Sanderson, Dr. Kenneth and Bella Berkaw. Festivities at International City Club focused on future plans of the hospital to meet the community's growing health needs. Among the 40 hospital board of trustees and wives attending stellar event were Norma and Dr. William Carnes, Marian and Walter Groshong, Jane and Dr. Charles Morrell and the Herbert Murphys. Spotted at the head table were C. Duane and Betty Mooney, Walter and Roxanne Oliver and the Herman Weisskers.

Policewomen have hopes of winning

forcement agencies were sponsors. One woman out of 1,000 entries — Sgt. Jolene Decker of the Long Beach Police Department.

"I walked into the gym at the University of California at Irvine where the volleyball matches were scheduled and found they had reserved the entire women's gym just for me to use the dressing rooms," Sgt. Decker said. "I asked myself, 'What am I doing here?'"

When 1969 rolled around, the Olympics traveled to Lake Tahoe and Sgt. Decker, who this year is chairman of the women's events, again entered the volleyball competition. In addition a few other women colleagues entered such events as track and field and swimming.

But, the 1970 games are drawing more feminine interest and with the Olympics only a week away, a total of 47 policewomen have entered from the Los Angeles and Orange County Sheriff's Offices and police departments from King City, Santa Barbara, Glendale, and San Diego, in addition to Long Beach.

According to the "Events" booklet, compiled by the California Police Athletic Federation and distributed to all 1,450 entrants, the women ARE ALLOWED to enter six out of 29 events, including golf, pistol tournament, swimming and diving, track and field, trap and skeet shooting and volleyball (women's doubles).

They are excluded from archery, badminton, bowling, table tennis and tennis. Maybe next year!

The rules say women may compete only against women, but maybe in the future interest will be shown in mixed doubles in tennis and bowling plus other men-women team events.

THE WOMEN'S GOLF matches will begin at 7 a.m. Friday at Skylinks Golf Course, 4800 E. Wardlow Road and El Dorado Park Golf Course, 2400 Studebaker Road on Saturday; Pistol tournament is planned from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. at Long Beach Police Pistol Range, 7390 E. Carson St.; Swimming and Diving is scheduled at the Belmont Plaza Olympic Pool, 4000 Olympic Plaza; Track and Field, Millikan High School Athletic Field; Trap and Skeet Shooting, 10 a.m. Friday and Saturday at Watson's Gun Club, 23000 Alameda, Carson; and Volleyball competition at Rogers Jr. High School, 265 Monrovia on Saturday.

Competition will be keen and enthusiasm is running high as the women peace officers spend more and more time practicing their specific sport — whether skeet shooting or golf.

But, they are all winners whether they take home a medal or not!

You can help

Each week in the I P-T Women's Section a list of volunteer opportunities. Those interested may contact the Community Volunteer Office, an agency of the United Way, at 426-7171, 10 a.m.-3 p.m.

CARE TO SHARE? A group of handicapped teen-agers are saving Betty Crocker coupons in order to buy a bus. They would appreciate any coupons you could spare.

LEND A HAND: An elderly lady who is no longer capable of caring for her yard and is unable to pay for the service needs someone to trim trees and shrubs and do other yard work on a voluntary basis. This would be a good project for a young men's group.

NEED A TUTOR? A retired gentleman is willing to tutor someone, in the evenings or on weekends in mathematics or mechanical drawing. Because of transportation problems it would be more convenient if he could tutor in the North Long Beach area.

GIVE A LIFT: There are many children and elderly people in the Long Beach area who would be unable to make doctor's and other appointments without the assistance of a volunteer driver. If you like to drive (and help others while you're at it) the CVO has the perfect job for you.

BINGO: A nearby hospital needs two people to take charge of a weekly bingo game for patients. Two hours a week is all that would be required.

TYPISTS, AIDES: The Blood Doner Center needs the help of typists and nurses' aides on Mondays and Tuesdays, 3:30-7:30 p.m. and on Wednesdays and Thursdays, 1-5 p.m.

HANDY WITH CRAFTS? An alert patient in a nursing home would appreciate having someone to teach leather craft to him.

ORIENTATION: An agency will be having an orientation for volunteers who are interested in working with adults who have been or are undergoing treatment for emotional disturbance on Aug. 26 at 3 p.m. or Aug. 27 at 7:30 p.m. Many, many volunteers are needed for this kind of work.

Catholic ceremony links Reinders-Thy Names

A honeymoon trip to Lake Tahoe followed the Saturday nuptials of Mary Candice Thy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Anthony Thy of Artesia, and William H. Reinders, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Reinders of Norwalk.

Mrs. Harry Thy, sister-in-law of the bride, was matron of honor in the ceremony which took place in Holy Family Catholic Church in Artesia. Hank Reinders served as his brother's best man.

The bride is a graduate of St. Anthony High School and attended Cerritos College. Her husband was graduated from Cerritos College.

The newlyweds will make their first home in Norwalk.

Trellis eaves

Many of the houses built in the late '40s and early '50s were designed with flat roofs and no projecting roof eaves. In some cases, the house looks like it's missing its lid and overall proportions don't seem quite right.

An inexpensive remedy is to build a trellis at the roof line where it substitutes for eaves. An open pattern like egg crate works well and is easy to create with fir or cedar lumber.

Supporting posts can be attractive, too, if handled as a sort of border for a path around the house or for a deep foundation planting.

AT WIT'S END

Males move to front for their masculinity

By ERMA BOMBECK

It was only a matter of time before a New York advertising man founded a men's liberation movement.

Hoping to find a bit of humor in anything, I called John Zeigler, the new president, in New York. "You're kidding, aren't you?" I giggled.

"We certainly are not," he said. "It's about time men took a good look at themselves and how they discriminate against the civil liberties of others to feel more masculine."

"We are using alimony as an issue in our movement. We want to show the negative force in alimony as the male, not the female... male judges, male legislators, male lawyers and alimony-paying males who favor keeping alimony as a way of degrading women."

"Mr. Zeigler," I interrupted, "on Aug. 26, Betty Friedan is leading the nation of women in a worldwide strike against men. She is urging women to march, demonstrate, sit-in, stop typing, stop vacuuming, stop buying and, if appropriate, stop making love. How do you plan to observe the day?"

Later that evening, my husband and I were talking. "On Wednesday," I said, "I am going on strike with Betty Friedan. I won't be dusting, vacuuming, making beds, cooking or kissing you good-bye in the morning."

"SO WHAT MAKES Wednesday any different than any other day in your year?"

"Don't be cute. You know, if you had an ounce of spirit, you'd join me morally and philosophically."

"I'd burn my shorts in front of the mall if I didn't have to take out the garbage anymore," he said.

"The trouble with us is we don't take these things seriously. Like the man in New York said..."

"New York!" he gasped. "How long did you talk and how much did it cost?"

I got news for you, Mr. Zeigler. Men do too cry.

Los Altos Center of Attraction

DID EVERYBODY have a good time at Fiesta Days? The merchants at Los Altos Shopping Center hope so. They're pretty happy themselves — especially those who took honors in the association-sponsored window display contest. Whittaker Music and Gladys Fowler Fashions shared the first place award with Cathy's Maternity Shop named runner-up.

IT'S PARTY TIME and you're the happy (or harried) hostess for the big event of the season. You say you're tired of a living room that always looks the same? Say no more. Just drop by Los Altos Stationers and pick up a gross of natural cork panelling. At $3.60 for four 12"x12" panels you can't lose. The self-adhesive panels are easy to use and will transform your room into something new and exciting in minutes. Also great for the kids' room (they can stick anything into it) and for your collegiate heading off to school this fall. One package (four panels) makes the perfect bulletin board.

DRAPERIES DINGY? Bedspreads look beaten? Perk them up for the party in no time at Quick 'n Clean. No need to send them out. Just walk right in and deposit them in one of the six coin-operated 20-pound dry cleaning machines. While you're at it, take in the family laundry. With 28 washing machines (two for heavy-duty loads — you can even spruce up your shag rugs), you'll never have to wait your turn in line. When the washing is finished, 14 jumbo dryers are waiting to serve you. Quick, efficient and money-saving, too!

YOU'RE ON YOUR WAY to pick up a few last minute errands and ... you're out of gas. Glide into Cruchley's Los Altos Car Wash (easy access from Stearns Street) and fill 'er up. Since you're already there, take a few more minutes and have your car washed. After all, you get a free wash with any fill-up of 20 gallons ($9c with 15 gal., 99c with 8 gal., wash only, $1.75).

And if you're anxious to show off your car on the big night, stick around a little longer (30 minutes to an hour) and get a summer polish job, too. Just $8.95 for most cars.

THE HOST with the most deserves to look his best, too. What to wear with your mod striped shirt and co-ordinated flares, you ask? Wehrman's Jewelers has the solution with sterling silver PEACE and LOVE rings. Priced at $6.95, they're the perfect conversation starter (especially if you're a 40-year-old executive with Dow Chemical). To match, sterling or gold-filled tie tacks ($3.75) and cuff links ($5.95) in the peace symbol design. Makes a great gift, too.

DRESS UP DAUGHTER in a bright, new pant-suit from Children's Bootery boutique department. More attractive than dungarees and just as easy to take care of, the newly-arrived collection by "Tattle-tale" (in sizes 3-6x) is made of acrilon and is completely washable. Dress ($6.99) and matching capris ($5.50) can be worn together or as separates — perfect for school or parties.

For the perfect compliment to daughter's new outfit, check into the Bootery's collection of StrideRite party pumps and school shoes.

ATTENTION COLLECTORS: The much-talked-about "Moon Plates" have just arrived at Smit's. Made by Royal Copenhagen of Denmark, the beautifully crafted blue and white china plates depict the landing of Apollo 11 on the moon. The mold's been broken for this first edition collector's item and there won't be more when these are sold. Now selling for $15, a reliable source predicts that the value of these few-of-a-kind "Moon Plates" will zoom upwards in the next few weeks.

Rich finale scored for Starlight Serenades

A man who is making a dream come true will be soloist for the final Starlight Serenade of the summer Tuesday in Recreation Park.

He is baritone Hernan Pelayo, a native of Santiago, Chile, citizen of the United States since 1962.

The free concert will begin at 8 p.m. when guest conductor Derek Hudson directs the Long Beach Symphony in the Overture to "Die Meistersinger" by Wagner and "Soirees Musicales" by Rossini-Britten.

Then Pelayo will sing the Prologue from "Pagliacci" by Leoncavallo, Song of the Toreador from "Carmen" by Bizet, Largo al Factotum from "Barber of Seville" by Rossini and "Granada" by Lara.

After intermission, the orchestra will play "Molly on the Shore," "Irish Tune from County Derry" and "Shepherd's Hey" by Grainger, "Pavane" by Faure and "Orpheus in the Underworld" by Offenbach.

Pelayo's concert appearance in Long Beach came through a chance meeting with Alberto Bolet, permanent conductor of the Long Beach Symphony, several months ago. The two men were guests at a dinner party in Los Angeles and Bolet recognized the singer as a frequent performer in Cuba, the conductor's native land.

"We had not met since 1952," said Pelayo. "But in the days when Batista headed the Cuban government, he gave many parties at which he asked me to sing. I was very popular in Cuba through personal appearances and recordings."

PELAYO made his professional debut when he was 14 at a concert given for the then president of Chile, Arturo Alessandri. Son of Count Isidoro Pelayo of Asturias, Spain, and nephew of a former president of Chile, Alfredo Valde Vazquez, Pelayo was trained as a diplomat to be an ambassador for Chile.

Instead, he chose the role of musician and has sung at the Metropolitan Opera, La Scala in Milan, Town Hall and Carnegie Hall in New York and with the San Francisco and New York City opera companies.

The dark-haired, dark-eyed singer hasn't confinied his roles to opera. In more than 1,000 performances, he played the dashing Count of Luxemborg in "The Merry Widow." He made his night club debut in the Dunes Hotel in Las Vegas and has starred in television and radio in this country and in South America.

Called back to Chile by a presidential request, he made a documentary movie which has been designated to be shown on every Independence Day in all theaters in Chile.

Nor are singing and acting Pelayo's only interests. He has sought adventure in India, Africa, along the Amazon, in Tibet and on the Gobi Desert; he learned the secrets of head-shrinking from Indians deep in the jungles of South America, he counts as his friends witch doctors who have shared with him their knowledge of rare herbs and mental powers. His sports are swimming, diving, hunting, boxing, wrestling, skiing, skating, mountain climbing, horseback riding. He speaks English, Spanish, Italian and French and sings in five other languages.

AND THE DREAM that is coming true?

"An opera company for Los Angeles. Already we have a complete staff. Alberto Bolet is one of the conductors. Bill Miles of the Hollywood Reporter and Howard Keel are on the board of directors. We hope to interest many others in the entertainment world. There is no limit to the talent here and we can draw from outstanding young singers of Europe.

"All of my life I have loved opera. I remember when I was 6 years old slipping away from home in Santiago to watch the singers in the Opera House.

"Now we are holding auditions — a young housewife auditioned for me the other day and her voice is fantastic, all she needs is training. There are many more like her who need only the opportunity to perform professionally.

"OUR Performances probably will be given at 'OPERA COMES FIRST' the Wilshire Ebell in Los Angeles.

The inaugural season will begin in March, 1971, Pelayo said. It will include "La Traviata," "Rigoletto," "Tosca" and a little-known opera, "Luiza Fernanda" by Moreno Torroba.

Reminded that several other attempts to create an opera company in Los Angeles have foundered, Pelayo smiled confidently. "We will succeed."

The singer and his wife, an American, have four children ranging in age from 11 to 4. "I do not force music on my children," he said. "As a professional career, music is too difficult. I would rather see them choose anything else!" — ELISE EMERY

Bowl programs rock and opera

A British rock ensemble, a Moscow Tchaikovsky Competition prize-winner, and a world-acclaimed opera star are among guest artists who will appear this week in Hollywood Bowl.

Lawrence Foster will conclude his Bowl engagements this summer by conducting the Los Angeles Philharmonic in concerts Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday nights. Programs begin at 8:30 p.m.

Tuesday, the British rock ensemble, Deep Purple, will share the bill with Pinchas Zukerman, 21-year-old Israeli violinist and his wife, flutist Eugenia Zukerman, and Canadian-born harpsichordist Ralph Grierson. All are making their Bowl debuts.

This is the last of three consecutive Tuesday Bowl concerts designed to bring together popular and classical music and audiences.

DEEP Purple will perform the United States premiere of "Concerto for Group and Orchestra" by Jon Lord, organist-composer who heads the group. Other members are Ritchie Blackmore, lead guitarist; Ian Paice, drummer; Roger Glover, bass guitarist; and Ian Gillan, vocalist. The group also will play a half-hour set of hard rock songs.

Thursday, pianist Misha Dichter, who won second place in the third annual Tchaikovsky Competition in June, 1966, will perform Brahms' "Concerto No. 1." Foster also will conduct Mendelssohn's "Fingal's Cave" Overture and Beethoven's "Symphony No. 2."

PRIMA DONNA and leading soprano of the New York City Opera Beverly Sills will be soloist with Foster and the Philharmonic Saturday night. The program will consist of operatic arias and orchestral show pieces.

Miss Sills made her debut at the Vienna Staatsoper in 1967, at Teatro Colon in Buenos Aires, in 1968, at La Scala Milan in 1961 and at the Teatro San Carlo in Naples this year. In December she will make her first appearance at Covent Garden in London. Miss Sills last sang in Hollywood Bowl in 1962.

Art shows have broad spectrum

By ELISE EMERY Arts Editor

Three major exhibits at Pasadena Art Museum will close next Sunday. "Kandinsky Watercolors," a traveling exhibition organized by the Museum of Modern Art, New York, includes 46 examples of the artist's vision in color and line.

Experimental, both in technical aspects and aesthetic concepts, is the display by 70 California photographers who represent current directions in their art form.

The memorial exhibition in tribute to abstract-expressionist Barnett Newman (1905-1970) will conclude its one-month showing. Considered one of the most influential artists in contemporary American art, Newman is remembered in this collection of his painting, prints and sculpture. Many of the pieces were loaned by the family and friends of the late artist.

IN SHARP contrast to the closing Pasadena exhibits, is the sixth annual art invitational show at Lake San Marcos Art Gallery. Austin Deuel, painter of western oils and watercolors and owner of the gallery, will stage the show Saturday and next Sunday. The theme is the West. Highlights of the show will be work by Robert Freeman, an Indian artist who resides with his family on the Rincon Indian Reservation; Donald Putnam, who communicates with color and the human form; and Sid Burns, sculptor. Work by 75 other painters will be displayed.

"Austin," said an artist friend, "is probably the Don Quixote of our day. Since he can't tilt at windmills, he employs his brush as his lance to advance the cause of realism in art. And, while I know of artists and critics who say that he is too unyielding in his opinions, I don't know of any who claim he is not an artist — and a very good artist."

TO RAISE FUNDS for its demonstration home in Long Beach, the Long Beach League for John Tracy Clinic will hold a champagne art auction Saturday. Original oils, watercolors, drawings, etchings and lithographs, signed and numbered by such artists as Dali, Lautrec, Picasso, Chagall, and Rubin are among the 100 works to be auctioned. The showing will begin at 8 p.m. and the auction at 9:30 p.m. at 8302 Atlanta Ave., Huntington Beach.

Reservations, at $5 a couple, may be made with Mrs. Nick Dvorak, 4501 Guava Ave., Seal Beach.

'WE WILL SUCCEED'

Joffrey Ballet to perform three works new to L.A.

In a revised performance schedule for its engagement in The Music Center's Ahmanson Theater Sept. 8 through 20, City Center Joffrey Ballet has included three works new to the Los Angeles area.

Two, previously designated "New Ballet I" and "New Ballet II," are by Joffrey Bolender.

The first is now titled "The Still Point." The theme is taken from a theme line in "Burnt Norton," first of T. S. Eliot's "Four Quartets." The music is from the first three movements of Debussy's "String Quartet," arranged for orchestra by Frank Black. The present version of the ballet first was presented by the New York City Ballet on March 13, 1956. An earlier version was premiered at Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival in the Berkshires on Aug. 3, 1955.

The second new Bolender production is "Time Cycle." It is danced to Lukas Foss's composition of the same name which Leonard Bernstein conducted with the New York Philharmonic in October, 1960. It is based on W. H. Auden's "We're Late," a line from A. E. Houseman: "When the bells jostle," Kafka's "One Day," and Nietzsche's "Old Men Take Heed."

The third new work is Gerald Arpino's "Trinity," now in rehearsal in Berkeley where it will receive its premiere prior to the Los Angeles engagement. The music by Alan Raph and Lee Holdridge is performed by a rock group, the Virgin Wool, with orchestra and organ. The score derives from Raph's "Seventh Century" ("Saturday" and "Sunday") and from Holdridge's "Summerland."

In order to program the new ballets to best effect, the company has withdrawn "Pas des Deesses" and "Cello Concerto" from the Los Angeles repertory and has added "Secret Places" (Arpino/Mozart) from last year's engagement.

Other ballets scheduled are "Moves," "Confetti," "The Clowns," "The Green Table," "Panfariola," "Astarie," "Trinity," "Solarwind," "Pineapple Poll," "Cake walk," "Olympics" and "Viva Valdi!"

Maverick official spurs board to crack down on water polluters

everyone was dedicated to clearing up the pollution of our county waters.

"For the first time, I was confronted by opposition to what was morally right. At first I was depressed, then I became angry."

"I turned into a fighter when I realized it was going to take a battle to make the public aware it will only get as good an environment as it demands."

Mrs. Harris' headquarters for her war against an "all plastic world" is a large, comfortably-appointed house on a street lined with palm trees.

"It's the trees that got me hooked onto taking direct action whenever I see a problem," said the youthful mother of two teenagers.

"Several years ago, I quite innocently called the city when the trees were badly in need of a trimming. Each department head put me off onto another bureaucrat until I threatened to serve a petition on City Hall."

"The trees were trimmed the next day."

It was in 1966 that Mrs. Harris was notified the Santa Monica Mountains were under scrutiny of developers who envisioned the recreational area as a new site for cement and asphalt edifices.

She traveled to Sacramento as a lobbyist for the Friends of the Santa Monica Mountains and subsequently caught the eye of conservationists who recommended her appointment to the water quality control board.

THE FACT that she was the only woman on the seven member board did not intimidate Mrs. Harris from raising persistent questions on her colleagues' decisions to grant waste disposal permits. She often was joined by John Lowery, representing recreation and wildlife, to form a minority bloc of two.

Other members representing interests of industry, agriculture and municipalities are:

Lester Loudon, supervisor for the Department of Water and Power; Arthur Brington, Los Angeles County representative; Mayor Edward J. LeClair of La Mirada; Thomas Gaines of Union Oil Co., and W. David Wigley, Santa Paula rancher.

On July 8 the board was expanded to nine members with the appointment of UCLA history professor Dr. Beverly Moeller and Woodland Hills attorney Burton J. Gindler.

In the tradition of non-salaried appointive posts, members met irregularly and did not seek publicity.

"Getting the public to attend those meetings was half the battle," Mrs. Harris recalled.

"At first the only people who went to the board sessions were the polluters. A fisherman who drove from San Pedro was out a day's wages... whereas industrial firms paid their employees to attend and ensure the continuation of their right to pollute."

THAT'S WHEN the dynamic idealist discovered the key to getting the issues before the public eye was to personally invite the news media to board hearings.

"It's like magic," she exclaimed. "When board proceedings are filmed on a TV camera or recorded by a reporter, the fear of adverse public opinion tends to make members vote the right way."

"Going on record" is important to Mrs. Harris who follows up her radio and TV interviews by taking careful notes when they are aired.

"I have a built-in fortification against being misquoted by knowing precisely what I said."

Mrs. Harris expressed her delight over politicians who have jumped onto the "ecology bandwagon."

"To a man, they've gone on record as being deeply concerned over pollution. Now we have the opportunity to see how their records jibe with their legislation."

"It's unrealistic for the public to expect elected officials to vote against their own personal interests. Nor will we have truly responsive legislators until campaign practices and funding methods are changed."

"No politician in his right mind is going to vote for meaningful legislation when he knows the industries opposing it will put their money behind his opponent in the next election."

Less determined people might have stumbled beneath the verbal blows that came from batteries of industrial attorneys. But not Mrs. Harris who went on record as the sole dissenter to a compliance extension for a company that had been dumping vegetable oil waste into Los Angeles Harbor for three years.

"We don't need a study, we need to stop the muck from pouring in" was her pithy retort to a company attorney.

Nor has she been afraid to take on the petroleum industry and the numerous companies who have dumped their refinery wastes into the Dominguez Channel.

"As a result, the Los Angeles Harbor has become a cesspool instead of a recreational and aesthetic asset."

Nor does she permit the feminine trait of compassion to sway her from demanding the unconditional surrender of an enemy.

Mrs. Harris showed no mercy on July 8 when the board slapped Union Pacific Railroad Co. with a cease-and-desist order against discharging its wastes into Long Beach Harbor and a possible $6,000 a day fine for further violations.

When a seven-month extension was requested by Union Pacific to allow for installation of a new discharge system, Mrs. Harris replied:

"Meeting the requirements is all this board is concerned with. How you do this is your problem."

As she watched the encroachment of housing, sewage, power and refineries upon her state, Mrs. Harris took arms against further exploitation by founding the Council for Planning and Conservation two years ago.

More than 60 organizations involved in conservation and fighting pollution belong to the CPC which Mrs. Harris runs from her home.

The heart of her CPC activities is a hard-hitting newsletter mailed once a month to subscribers who pay a $10 a year membership. The publication serves as a vehicle to announce new threats to the environment, dates of hearings and editorials on possible actions business and government might take to halt pollution.

Mrs. Harris never launches an attack before gaining ammunition through technological briefings from sympathetic physicists, engineers, chemists and geologists.

"Voters are beginning to take a second look at the conditions they've allowed to come about and show a willingness to take action on reversing them."

When caution might urge her to tread lightly to insure her reappointment, the maverick member of the board requested an investigation of a gasoline spill that turned up in the underground water supply in Glendale.

At the Aug. 10 hearing, Mrs. Harris was cut short in her criticism of the board for withholding the name of the oil company that failed to report the leak.

"What good does it do to hold an investigation if the culprit isn't identified?" she protested. "A law is no better than the means of enforcing it. If no company admits guilt, no one is responsible for the full extent of damages."

In view of her triumph in turning the tide of unchecked misuse of the county harbor and ground water supplies, it is surprising to learn Mrs. Harris is not certain she will be reappointed to the board.

"I've received no word as yet," she murmured.

"But in as much as Governor Reagan has reappointed the Union Oil Co. and water and power representatives initially chosen by Governor Brown, I'm hoping he will find me equally competent to continue in my post as the representative of the public."

Pouch cooking

It's not enough to just wipe off the pan after heating the popular "boil-in-the-bag" frozen foods. It takes regular washing in hot soap or detergent suds to wash away residue from the plastic pouch, and bits of food which may drop when the bag is opened.

DEAR ABBY

Maybe guests aren't unwelcome

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I have a friend who complains constantly to me because she lives in a clammy neighborhood. She says that her neighbors come over for coffee every morning even before she has her last one off to school. And a few of them stay until it's time for lunch and she can't get her housework done.

They don't want to be offered coffee -- they help themselves. (She uses five pounds of coffee a week and she is the only adult in her family who drinks it.)

I told her to put a sign outside her door, "SORRY, NO TIME FOR COFFEE TODAY," but she says she hasn't got the nerve.

Her husband travels, and when he's home the neighbors are there having coffee right with him. How can I help my friend get rid of these pests? I'm afraid she'll have a nervous breakdown. WEST SIDER

DEAR WEST: Many people complain that they are constantly being "imposed upon" by unwelcome guests, but for some strange reason they never do anything about it. This leads me to suspect that the "victim" not only secretly enjoys these drop-in guests, but enjoys complaining about them. It's her coffee, her time and her problem. When she complains to me, I'll recommend a foolproof pest exterminator.

DEAR ABBY: My husband is a great person -- except for one thing: HIS TEMPER. He has never hit me, but I'm starting to get scared. He gets mad over the least little thing. He broke the leg off the TV because he couldn't get a clear picture, and if somebody happens to get a wrong number and rings our place by mistake, he yells at them like they committed some kind of crime.

He has always had a hot temper but he used to cool down fast. Now he gets mad at the least little thing and he stays mad for hours -- and sometimes days. Could something be wrong with him? SCARED is what your husband needs in order to determine if his fits of anger are symptoms of a serious illness or if he is just overreacting in a childish way.

DEAR ABBY: "X" and I are getting married soon at a formal wedding in a church. Three out of the four ushers have long hair. This will look terrible with tuxes. I think those three should either cut their hair or wear one of those short stretch wigs they have for men now.

"X" says we have no right to ask them to do either. My mother is having a fit.

If these boys show up in the wedding party with their long hair, I know there will be a lot of criticism from my relatives. What is your opinion? "B"

DEAR "B": You have no right to ask the ushers to pose as short-haired types. I doubt if they would agree to do it, anyway. It seems to me that everyone should be accustomed to seeing long hair on men by now. If it's clean and well cared for, what is there to criticize?

DEAR ABBY: Is it considered good manners to comment on a lady's jewelry? I mean, if the comment is meant as a compliment? SYRACUSE

DEAR SYRACUSE: Certainly. It's a fairly safe bet that the lady who adorns herself with jewelry does so in the hope that it will be noticed.

'Last paradise land' tested

By STAN DELAPLANE

We are ending a month of Mission Impossible: Is Mexico the last Paradise? Land of low prices? Unlimited servants? Eternal spring for a Social Security check? We rented a house on Lake Chapala — in the central highlands just outside Guadalajara — to find out.

The retired people on fixed incomes are not feeling the inflation squeeze. Not as much as in the States. If they've invested money in Mexico, it pays them twice what they'd get at home. Costs are rising. But it's not a runaway. The climate is splendid. Nothing you've read about it was overdone. All-year spring between 4000 and 5000 feet. And in the winter find warm summer down at the golden Pacific beaches.

We still have to put this on an adding machine, but our food is much cheaper. Liquor and cigarettes are half U.S. prices. Gasoline is 38 cents a gallon. Bus transportation is cheap. Air transport seems high. To fly from here to Mexico City is about double Los Angeles-San Francisco or Boston-New York which seem comparable. Clothing is cheaper.

We've run into people who do half the time in the States, half in Mexico. Finding that lower costs in Mexico for six months make up for the cost of round-tripping.

"What about driving down to Mexico? Is it safe?"

I think so. I've done a lot of driving — right now I'm driving a little Datsun on very bad roads. You never drive at night. Simply because cows and burros come out of nowhere onto the road.

Your U.S. auto insurance is no good in Mexico. You buy Mexican insurance by the day for the number of days you expect to be in the country.

Auto accidents are serious. If there are injuries or damage to public property, it's almost certain they'll put you in stony-lonesome for 12 hours while they sort things out.

Mexican law considers you guilty until you prove you're not. And kids coming down for summer school find a marijuana bust is not like running a red light. First, they keep you in jail six months to one year while the judge gets around to hearing your case. No bail. No papa, no mama, no U.S. Consul can do a thing to change that.

"What about hitch-hiking in Mexico?"

Haven't really checked this enough to know. But I don't see hitch-hikers on Mexican highways. There are 3000 summer school students in Guadalajara, 45 minutes from here. You'd think there would be a few hitching to the lake on weekends. But no. So I get the feeling it just doesn't work.

"How about bikes? Or motorcycles?"

A lot of both. But they seem to be local transportation. I haven't seen any carrying extra clothes and camping gear.

"What about hotels? How much do they cost? Any really cheap ones?"

The brand-new hotel here is the Camino Real. (The big Western International chain.) Opened a couple of days ago. Very modern, $22 a day double. Posada Ajijic is charming, colonial style in the village. Wonderful gardens. At $9 single, $12 double. (Maybe bumped up $1 by the time this is printed. They're asking Tourist Board permission.)

Couple of guest houses in Chapala at $6 with meals. When you get down to this scale in Mexico, the division becomes sharp. Probably OK if you are young and adventurous. I used to do it, but somewhere along the line I softened up. And haven't we all?

"How about the health problem we hear so much about?"

So far (three adults, two children) we've had one child mildly upset for two days. One infected insect bite. A few itchy mosquito bites. That's all.

Japan increases tour promotion

The Los Angeles office of the Japan National Tourist Organization has increased its areas of representation on the West Coast.

Apart from Los Angeles County, the new territories include the following California counties: Imperial, Kern, Orange, Riverside, San Bernardino, San Diego, San Luis Obispo, Santa Barbara and Ventura.

JNTO will also be handling travel inquiries for Clark County in Nevada, and the State of Arizona.

JNTO carries out various activities for tourist promotion including presentation of travel information, distribution of travel brochures, showing of travelog films, participation in fairs and exhibitions, furnishing of news and articles, and surveys of the international travel market. The Los Angeles office is located at 727 West Seventh Street and is under the direction of Albert Ninomiya, assisted by Takeshi Sakaki.

Mr. Ninomiya said, "The JNTO staff members not only disseminate information on Japan but also make a great effort to learn about the culture and customs of the United States in order to create a better understanding between Americans and Japanese. This creates a more favorable environment in which to promote tourism and ultimately has some impact on how tourists are treated in Japan."

MALAY CALLS VISITORS

Penang Is One Asian Isle That Retains Its Serenity

By LEWIS M. SIMONS

Associated Press Writer
In troubled Southeast Asia, Penang still is an isle of serenity.

Wearied by the frenetic pace of Tokyo, the hustle of Hong Kong, the new vitality of Singapore, a visitor to this tiny island just off the coast of the Malay Peninsula can be dozing on golden beaches half an hour after landing at the airport.

The sea is calm and clear, the sun warm, the breezes lulling, and even the rain, which usually falls at night, is gentle.

The way of life is gentle too. About half the island's 700,000 people are Chinese, but their energetic influence is stamped almost exclusively on the shops and streets of George Town, Penang's only city.

In the rural areas — and most of the island is rural — the culture is strictly Malay, and languorous.

Behind graceful coconut palms the onion-shaped domes of mosques catch the sunlight. Malay houses, gangling on stilts and garnished with gingerbread cutouts, are reflected in the knee-deep waters of neat, rectangular rice paddies.

In the noonday heat the rice farmer lays aside his hand tools and takes a long nap in the shade of his stilt-house.

Pulau Pinang, as Penang is called in Malay, means "betel nut island" and betel nuts are only one of the seeming hundreds of fruits, nuts, vegetables and spices with which Penang is bursting.

Plantations abound with mango, jackfruit, durian, rambutan, papaya, pineapple, banana, pomelo, mangosteen, cloves, nutmeg and coconut as well as oil palm and rubber trees.

With the land so bountiful and the waters teeming with fish, the Malays find no pressure to keep up with the hardworking, business-minded Chinese in George Town.

Religion is an important part of life to most Malays and many of the men pause five times a day for Islamic prayers.

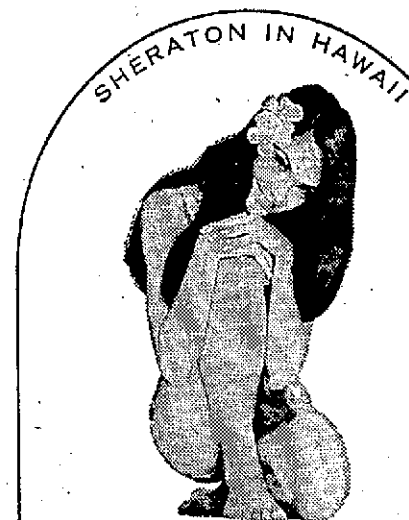

In addition to mosques, Penang's 100-square miles are heavily sprinkled with Buddhist and Hindu temples and Christian churches — an estimated two houses of worship to every square mile.

If he tires of temples and beaches, the foreign visitor has a choice of more traditional tourist fare. Two attractions touted most by the Penang Tourist Association are the Buddhist Snake Temple and the funicular railway.

As it inevitably must, progress is coming to Penang. The Malaysian government has long promised the island a bridge to link it with the mainland.

Even so, Penang is just far enough off the beaten path to provide a haven for the travel-weary tourist for years to come.

The Aces on bridge

TEAM CAPTAIN

Here is a new kind of bidding quiz. It should be more helpful than any other you have taken.

You will be allowed to see both the opener's and the responder's hand, and you must construct your own sequence to fit the two hands. Then check your bidding against the The Aces and see how many mistakes they have made:

Hand 1
Opener: ♠AK874, ♥A1043, ♦K847, ♣2
Responder: ♠3, ♥J7, ♦Q643, ♣KJ10873

Hand 2
Opener: ♠3, ♥Q76, ♦AJ6, ♣AJ10876
Responder: ♠AKQ95, ♥54, ♦3, ♣KQ543

Hand 3
Opener: ♠3, ♥Q76, ♦AJ6, ♣AJ10876
Responder: ♠AKQ95, ♥4, ♦52, ♣KQ543

Hand 4
Opener: ♠AQ876, ♥AK654, ♦4, ♣32
Responder: ♠5, ♥Q72, ♦AJ984, ♣KQ87

Suggested Sequences

Hand 1
Opener: 1♠, 2♥, 3♦, 4♣, 5♥
Responder: 1NT, 3♣

Responder shows a long club suit (at least six cards) and a hand too weak to respond with two clubs originally. Opener must give up.

Hand 2
Opener: 1♠, 3♥, 4♦, 5♣
Responder: 2♠, 4♥, 4♠, 5♣, Pass

Responder makes a light jump shift because of his club fit. Neither hand has first- or second-round control of hearts, so neither hand should use Blackwood. The cue bidding sequence reveals the lack of heart control, and the bidding stops short of slam.

Hand 3
Opener: 1♠, 3♥, 4♦, 5♣
Responder: 2♠, 4♥, 4NT, 5♣

This time the key to the hand is responder's singleton heart. Responder can now bid Blackwood and the laydown slam is reached. Notice that the opener should not use Blackwood with Q-x-x in an unbid suit.

Hand 4
Opener: 1♠, 2♥, 3♦, 4♣
Responder: 2♠, 2NT, 4♥

Responder should not raise to three hearts immediately. A direct raise of a second suit promises four trumps. Two no-trump by the responder shows 10-12 points and is not forcing. Opener's three-heart rebid completes the picture of his distribution and the proper contract is reached.

For those who don't like light jump shifts on hands two and three, the bidding could proceed as follows:

Hand 2
Opener: 1♠, 2♥, 3♦, 4♣, 5♥
Responder: 1♠, 1♥, 1♦, 1♣, Pass

Hand 3
Opener: 1♠, 2♥, 3♦, 4♣, 5♥
Responder: 1♠, 1♥, 1♦, 1♣, 4NT, 6♣

NO PLACE TO PLAY THE BIG ONES

49er Football Has Outgrown Long Beach

The whole nation's football populace was astir when the word came out that this "little" school (enrollment 28,000) from Long Beach would meet a perennial titan from the Southeastern Conference, Mississippi.

The confrontation won't take place until 1971, but the question in everyone's mind was, simply, how did Cal State Long Beach manage to hook Ole Miss?

Posed with the question, CSLB athletic director Fred Miller reacted like a bull attacking the matador.

"Why shouldn't we play Ole Miss?" queried Dr. Miller. "We have the men and this is one way we can prove to the country that Cal State Long Beach is here to stay. When I became athletic director four years ago, I said that we'd show excellence. We have done exactly what we said we'd do."

No question there. The 49ers have football, basketball and swimming teams ranked among the nation's finest. Yet, on the football front, scheduling teams like Ole Miss — which is the defending Sugar Bowl champion — isn't an easy chore. How did this happen?

"Let us say," smiled Miller, "that the whole thing was conceived by a long taxi cab ride from the Houston airport last June. The other person in the taxi was John Holley, Mississippi's business manager."

Another question was how could a business manager have any affect upon the situation? After all, business managers ordinarily are concerned only with the simple business of finances, as our Barney Ridder will inform you.

HANK HOLLINGWORTH
Executive Sports Editor

"Ah, but this was a different situation," chuckled Miller. "Holley does most of the schedule contracting for Mississippi. My selling point to him during that long taxi ride was that Long Beach is the fourth largest city in California and that we have a damned good competitive team. That sold him."

AFTER MILLER apprised Holley of the benefits of hosting Cal State Long Beach, Holley took the proposition to the inner sanctum. John Vaught, the asst. athletic director who doubles as head football coach, liked the idea. The word of Vaught, one of the nation's most successful coaches, was enough for athletic director Tad Smith. So the 49ers go back to Mississippi in 1971.

Yet, Ole Miss will not return the favor by coming to Long Beach in 1972.

"This is the first time that Mississippi ever played a West Coast team," remarked Miller, "and you can be certain that the Rebels would have loved to come to California in 1972. But do you think that we could guarantee them $50,000 in Veterans Stadium? Hell, no. Therefore, we have no home-and-home arrangement. They wanted very much to come here to Long Beach, but the only way we could guarantee their proper price would be to charge people $5 at Veterans Stadium to merely park their cars."

DR. FRED MILLER
'Vets Stadium? No Way'

The decrepit stadium, long a target of this author, has been the reverse of Dale Carnegie. It not only has lost friends but failed to influence people. But, don't give up hope. There is a Shangri La.

MILLER PURPOSELY took his best football game this season out of Long Beach. That would be the one against San Diego State. He had a bonafide reason.

"We expect 40,000 for that game," remarked Miller. "There's no way we could hold them in Veterans Stadium. I hate to say this but if we get that kind of crowd in Anaheim Stadium, it might embarrass the Long Beach city fathers enough to realize that we do have a fine product going here. It might also be the turning point for a new stadium."

"THIS IS A DO-OR-DIE YEAR for us," continued Miller. "It's critical. We had great sponsorship during Jim Stangeland's first year at the helm. Our season ticket sale then was just 500, but already we're at the 3,000 figure and our target is 4,000 and more. Simply by taking our big game to Anaheim Stadium, Ticketron has accounted for 2,000 tickets."

The 49er football program this season is critical in this way. For CSLB to produce continuous teams of excellence, community support—which hadn't been too noticeable in past years—is important. Season tickets — the whalebone of any organization — have exceeded even Dr. Miller's fondest expectations. Yet, more is necessary.

Miller, 38, is gung-ho. He should be. He has been associated "off and on" with the 49ers since 1958. He took over full reins four years ago. Before he became a purist, he stuck out two seasons with the Washington Redskins. The mental and physical giant has some somber thoughts, too.

DR. FRED MILLER:

"It's ridiculous that Cal State Long Beach not be in a university status. We're no longer in the bush leagues. We have fantastically good athletes. Outside of USC we have more — six or seven — pro prospects in football than any school in the country."

"It's important to us that we be called Long Beach State University. It's more prestigious. Humboldt State is something else. They're not a university school and they know it. But Long Beach, San Diego and San Jose are something else."

"Our conference level was raised when we scheduled Ole Miss. In fact, if UCLA played us they'd make more money than they'd make meeting Penn State."

"People say we might have been stupid in scheduling Ole Miss, because we could get clobbered. That might be. Yet, if you want to get a major program, you can't sit still. We'll lose 20 seniors, including Leon Burns, in '71, but we also will have 30 lettermen back. Oh, another thing. Ole Miss will lose 20 or more seniors, too. Does that make us even?"

I don't think so, Fred. The game will be played in Mississippi.

Balanced Attack Must for 'New-Look' Bruins

By LOEL SCHIRADER
Staff Writer

There were some innovations Saturday as UCLA's football team romped on Spaulding Field for the benefit of the press and cameramen.

There was a 20x30-yard patch of AstroTurf, installed specifically to help the Bruins prepare for five road games on artificial grass.

The Bruins were attired in new gold pants, replacing the army tan wore for so many years. Columbia Blue jerseys will replace the powder blue of the past.

But coach Tommy Prothro vowed that not many other things will change.

Asked if the neck injury which has sidelined slick running back Mickey Cureton for the season would force the Bruins to employ more of a passing game in 1970, the UCLA coach replied:

"I do not want us to become a throw, throw, throw football team. We'll have a balanced attack."

With a laugh, he added: "Or die trying. Or kill some backs trying."

Pushed to the forefront by the Cureton development have been running backs Marv Kendrick from Riverside City College, senior Arthur Sims and sophomore Rob Scribner.

"I have no idea who will start at running back," said Prothro. "We didn't have Cureton all spring and we had a different face at that position every day."

BRUIN NOTES: Prothro plans to work the Bruins twice daily when practice begins Monday. "We're scheduled for two-a-days through next Saturday," said the UCLA coach. "I expect we'll continue them after that, too."

Dummit believes the Oregon State game could be a key to the Bruin season. "If we can get by that one — a league game — we get PUI and Northwestern after that. We could be 3-0 going into our game with Texas on Oct. 3."

Prothro tabs 6-5, 280-pound Bruce Walton of San Diego as a future star. "He's going to be a great one," said the UCLA coach. Walton's brother, Bill, a 6-11 basketball center, will begin classes at UCLA in October. "Last year was the first time UCLA recruited big guys," said Bruce Walton. "Always before the school had guys like Floyd Reese and Bob Decide, guys who could run a 9.5 100, but when they played USC the linemen they were against were bigger and just as fast."

UCLA's team physician, Dr. Martin Blarney, said Cureton's neck injury will be rechecked "within the next several months." But there is no chance, said Dr. Blarney, that Cureton will play this fall. "The injury is situated in a high-risk area," he added. "Substitute quarterback Jim Nader was absent Saturday because of the flu. . . . Of Cureton, Prothro said: 'He had better moves than anyone I've ever coached. With the possible exception of Bob Davern, he didn't have the power of Mel Farr and others. Mickey is a tough kid. Maybe too tough. He played bigger than maybe his body would let him. He started every game last fall and didn't finish any.'

Barker, 6-2, 200, is a linebacker from Illwaco, Wash., and Logue, 6-3, 200, a tight end-kicker from Paradise, Calif.

It is unlikely he will ever consider comparing Terminal Island to his hometown.

Anderson Hospital & Tumor Institute at Houston for routine checkups.

Steinmark's determination not to let his condition hold him back, or result in too many special favors, shows up in the give-and-take with his former teammates.

Preparing recently to try out water skis for the first time, Steinmark was easing himself into the water when quarterback

With 21 lettermen returning from a 8-1-1 team in 1969, Prothro points to the passing attack as a bright spot.

"We know what Dennis Dummit can do (15 touchdown passes and 1,963 yards via passing)," said Prothro, "and I think we are going to have good receivers."

"Maybe our receivers won't be as good after catching the ball as last year. Gwen Cooper, George Farmer and Mike Garratt all ran well after catching it. But I think we have the people to get open for the ball this year."

Looking ahead to the Bruins' Sept. 12 opener at Oregon State, Prothro was reminded that the Beavers have a reputation for starting slowly.

"I hope it holds," he sighed.

SMILES IN WESTWOOD

Despite loss of running back Mickey Cureton, there were still degree of optimism at Westwood Saturday as UCLA opened drills for coming season. Return of quarterback Dennis Dummit (left), gives Bruin coach Tommy Prothro and UCLA fans plenty to smile about.

BUCKEYES STACK SCHEDULE

McKay Picks Ohio St. No. 1

John McKay was attempting to extricate himself from the deadly embrace of Playboy magazine, which has selected USC team as the No. 1 college football team for 1970.

After noting that Playboy's track record is undistinguished, McKay theorized: "To pick a national champion, you should always select the team without a tremendously difficult schedule."

Two prime candidates, he pointed out, would be Ohio State and Penn State.

"There's a difference between fighting 10 Joe Louises and fighting one Joe Louis and nine stiffs," he said. "Some teams have trouble losing any games with the schedules they have."

"I would hands-down pick Ohio State. I think Ohio State has about seven games at home and might not be challenged until its last game (Michigan)."

Penn State, added McKay "is another with a schedule that isn't difficult."

Having disposed of this house-clearing, McKay turned to his team, which will make an appearance for the press and cameramen today at 2 on Bovard Field, then begin twice-daily workouts on Monday.

"We're a lot like last year," observed the Trojan coach, "only it might be in reverse. We have more experience on offense than defense."

"This is the first time since I've been at USC (10 years) that we've had our starting backfield returning intact. We should be better on offense."

McKay said Quarterback Jimmy Jones will run more.

"He had a back condition most of last season and we couldn't run him," the Trojan coach pointed out. "We also have a good No. 2 running quarterback this year in Mike Rae

JOHN MCKAY

Rounding out the backfield will be Clarence Davis, Charlie Evans and Bob Chandler.

Some switches in personnel are being considered to shore up the defensive unit.

"I won't be inflexible about where I put certain players," said McKay.

John Vella, considered by many to be one of the top offensive tackles in the nation as a sophomore, "will work on both units the first 10 days of practice."

Others who may wind up on defense are talented sophomores Sam Cunningham and Charles Young.

More surprises could be in the offing. The invasion of Birmingham for the Alabama game Sept. 12 poses unusual defensive problems. The Crimson Tide is loaded on offense.

TROY TALK: Alois Thomas, transfer from Arizona Western, has been penciled in as a starting cornerback despite the fact that he has never appeared on a Trojan practice field. "We've watched films of him," said McKay. Another junior, college defensive backfield candidate is Mike McAuley of Ventura. . . . The Trojans still will use a five-man line, said McKay, although Charlie Weaver is listed in the press book as a linebacker. There could, however, be subtle changes in the defense. . . . "If you listen to some coaches," said McKay, "you'll find that they always are rebuilding. But that's college football. Players always are leaving. I'm not interested in how many players are returning. I'm interested in the quality of those who are back."

Trojan coach is high on Vella's defensive ability. "I'm convinced he can be one of the finest defensive players in the country," . . . The USC coach said Jones should be helped by two factors: "He has played a year in the league. It's hard for me to believe a sophomore wouldn't be nervous. But not many sophomores can match his record. He didn't lose. Another thing, he'll be playing with the same receivers. Last year, Jimmy got off to a great start and all of a sudden Chandler was hurt. We had problems on timing after that."

Trojan basketballer Don Granhaw, selected by the Rams in the January draft, has decided to forego football after working during the spring with the Trojans. . . . Approximately $50,000 from the proceeds of the USC-Alabama games in 1970 and 1971 will go to a minority students scholarship program.

49ERS RETURN TO COMBAT

Cal State Long Beach football coach Jim Stangeland greets 30 lettermen among 58 candidates reporting Saturday. The 49ers were 8-3 and runnerup in Pacific Coast Athletic Assn. during Stangeland's first season a year ago.

30 LETTERMEN BACK

49ers Welcome 58, Open Camp At Terminal Island

By JIM McCORMACK
Staff Writer

The reputation of Jim Stangeland's Terminal Island training camp is spreading.

Asked if he was looking forward to Cal State Long Beach's two weeks of drills at Terminal Island, new recruit Jim Kirby answered quickly: "The last day."

Faced with instituting a new program in a short period of time, Stangeland sent his troops through four daily drills during last year's two weeks at Terminal Island and the rookie coach gave those sessions much of the credit for the 49ers' 8-3 record.

Since the program was so successful, Stangeland found no reason to alter it this year.

So Kirby, a transfer from Long Beach City College, was one of 58 slightly reluctant gridders who reported Saturday for picture day at Cal State.

That select 58, and a half-dozen tardy veterans, will check into Terminal Island today and begin drills Monday. The first three days will consist of conditioning workouts only.

Although the practice schedule remains the same as 1969, Stangeland sees his team as much improved.

"We'll be going into camp with 30 lettermen," Stangeland explains, "so we automatically have an edge in experience."

"On paper, we can start a letterman at every position. While we were nearly a new team last year, we are basically a senior team this year."

"Also, this year we'll have more depth."

After two weeks of Terminal Island drills, the 49ers will return to Cal State for daily sessions before opening the season Saturday, Sept. 12, in Great Falls, Mont., against Montana State.

The 49ers open their home season Saturday night, Sept. 26 against the University of Hawaii at Veterans Stadium.

Among the fall transfers welcomed by Stangeland Saturday were Kirby, Reggie Berry, Bruce Barker and Terry Logue.

Berry, whose brother Mike is a tailback at USC, is a highly regarded, 6-foot-1, 190-pound defensive back from Arizona Western.

Barker, 6-2, 200, is a linebacker from Illwaco, Wash., and Logue, 6-3, 200, a tight end-kicker from Paradise, Calif.

Steinmark Stands On Own One Foot

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — A University of Texas safety who lost his left leg to cancer, is amazing his friends while adjusting to his new life.

He jumps waves on a water ski with one leg. He shoots nine holes of golf in 45.

In short, the 21-year-old Steinmark does most things that young men his age do.

Since his left leg was cut off eight months ago, Steinmark has relied on a strong spirit, deep religious faith and cockeyed humor to regain his place in a world that sometimes grows impatient with invalids.

"It was a little setback," says Steinmark, who will coach Texas' freshmen defensive backs this season and take on a full academic load in school, with a little piano practice — a boyhood talent — on the side.

The former Denver, Colo., schoolboy star has told friends too much has been made out of his courage — "it doesn't take courage to have your leg cut off."

He knows better than most the seriousness of bone cancer, and he grills his doctors on his condition every two months when he goes back to M.D.

Anderson Hospital & Tumor Institute at Houston for routine checkups.

Steinmark's determination not to let his condition hold him back, or result in too many special favors, shows up in the give-and-take with his former teammates.

Preparing recently to try out water skis for the first time, Steinmark was easing himself into the water when quarterback

James Street shouted, "Hey, Freddie, don't you know, you're supposed to use two skis while learning?"

Deryl Comer, the big end Longhorn coaches call the best athlete on the team, has had two serious knee operations.

After the second, Steinmark said, "I've got a cure for your knee, right about the hip."

Gallery Bugs Casper, Lead Cut to Stroke

SUTTON, Mass. (UPI) — Pressure-tested Billy Casper lost his concentration briefly and soared to a one-over par 73 Saturday but managed to withstand charges by five challengers to forge a one-stroke lead through three rounds of the $160,000 Avco Gold Classic.

The 39-year-old Casper, who had started the round with a three-stroke lead, successfully repelled attacks by Chuck Courtney, Dave Hill, Dan Sikes, Tom Weiskopf and Jim Colbert while lengthening his bid for his fourth tournament victory of the season and the 47th of his 15-year career.

Courtney, in second place going into the third round at Pleasant Valley Country Club, was the first to mount his attack and briefly drew even with Casper in the early going before falling back on a 2-over-par 74 to drop four strokes off the pace.

Hill, with an impressive

five-under 67, turned on the pressure with an early finish while opening-round leader Sikes and Colbert both made their unsuccessful move in the late stages before Casper sank a 12-foot birdie putt on the 18th hole to regain the top spot in the race for the $32,000 first prize.

With one round remaining, Casper's 54-hole total stood at 208, eight strokes under par.

Casper said he ran into difficulty with photographers and spectators on four different holes and noted, "In all my years of tournament golf I never experienced a day like today."

He said he putted poorly and hit "a lot of bad shots" and cited such problems as "slamming outhouse doors" as bothering him and other players. "There was always something going on that wasn't connected with golf," he said.

"After things happen a certain number of times," you actually are waiting for them to happen."

He said the noise and people in the way helped break his concentration.

Several other golfers commented in contrast to Casper that they had no difficulty with the gallery that was announced at 30,370.

Colbert said he experienced no problems though insisting the gallery was the "largest I've seen in five years on the tour."

Whittier Gal New Champion

DARIEN, Conn. (UPI) — Martha Wilkinson of Whittier charged from behind Saturday to down Curtis Cup teammate Cynthia Hill of St. Petersburg, Fla., 3 and 2, and capture the U.S. Golf Assn.'s Women's Amateur championship.

Miss Wilkinson, the medalist in the week-long match play tournament over the 6,240-yard, par-74 Wee Burn Country Club course, trailed Miss Curtis by one hole as they made the turn on the 19th hole of the scheduled 36-hole playoff.

The match came to an end on the 16th hole — a hole which proved to be the downfall of Miss Hill, a University of Miami graduate, as she double bogeyed the hole twice Saturday.

Miss Hill said after the match she played the best she could.

"It was a great thrill just to be in the finals," said the Florida golfer.

At conclusion of the week-long tournament, the USGA announced that Miss Wilkinson, Miss Hill and Jane Bastanchury of Whittier, a semifinal loser to Miss Hill, would represent the U.S. in the world women's amateur team championships to be held in Spain, Sept. 30 through Oct. 3.

The day's best round was a 67 by Donna Caponi, two time U.S. Open champion, who said it was her finest competitive round as a professional. It left her tied with five others for second place at 144.

Donohue Turns Easy 165 as Ontario Practice Opens

ONTARIO (Special)—Mark Donohue of Media, Pa., turned in the fastest lap of the first day of practice over the new Ontario Motor Speedway Saturday when he drove his Turbo Ford 165.14 mph.

Donohue's speed was well under the 174-mph clocking he recorded during tire tests last month. The track's unofficial record is by Indianapolis 500 champion Al Unser at 174.81 mph.

Most of the top drivers are competing in races around the nation this weekend and will not arrive for serious practice until Monday.

Kevin Bartlett, a rookie driver from Sydney, Australia, became the first man to hit the track and the first man to spin out when his car went out of control. He was unhurt.

Others out were Al Loquasto, Easton, Pa.; John Cannon, Montreal; Swede Savage, Santa Ana; Jim Hurtubise, North Tonawanda, N.Y.; and Les Scott, Livonia, Mich.

A CROWD of 27,852 attended the open house but from now on it's pay-as-you-watch. Fifteen persons were treated for heat prostration as temperatures soared into the 90s.

The California 500 for Indianapolis-type cars is slated for Sept. 6 and until then there will be preliminaries.

Hulme Qualifies 1st for Today's Fifth Can-Am

MANSFIELD, Ohio (U)—Denis Hulme of New Zealand launched a strong bid for his second straight Buckeye Cup Canadian-American road racing victory at the Mid-Ohio sports car course, winning the pole position in Saturday's qualifying.

Hulme will be the favorite to win his third successive race today in the 1970 Can-Am series. A starting grid of 24 Formula 7 cars will start the 80-lap, 192-mile race for $89,500.

Hulme, the leading driver at the Can-Am series this year, piloted his McLaren M8D Chevrolet around the twisting 2.4-mile asphalt course in 98.405 miles per hour for one lap.

That was well under his record qualifying time of 100.58 mph here last year but was safely ahead of No. 2 qualifier, Lothar Motschenbacher of Hollywood, Calif. Motschenbacher, driving an older McLaren Chevrolet, was clocked at 97.627.

Third in the qualifying was Peter Revson of New York City, who drove his Lola T220, to a time of 97.517.

Fourth was Peter Gethin of England, who formed the McLaren factory team with Hulme. His qualifying time was 96.321.

Most of the drivers passed up the last 30 minutes of qualifying time when rain hit the course. All times were unofficial.

Hendrick on Trenton Pole

TRENTON, N.J. (UPI)—Ray Hendrick of Richmond, Va., won the pole position Saturday for today's Trenton 200-mile race for modified stock cars by speeding over the 1½-mile course in a track record speed of 136.074 mph.

Hendrick's qualifying run in a 1968 Camaro broke the 1½-mile mark set at Trenton last year by Bobby Isaac in a Grand National stock car race.

The field will have 50 cars with a prize purse of $28,000 and a record $10,400 to the winner.

Volks-Porsche Wins 86-Hour Marathon

Heritage Cup

Hopes Fade After Defeat

New York Times Service

NEWPORT, R.I. — If happiness is Valiant, as the name-tags and banners of that yacht's syndicate insist, then unhappiness is beginning to look very much like Heritage.

Saturday's bad news for Charlie Morgan Jr.'s beautiful but often-defeated yacht was a loss to Valiant, a decisive beating that pushed Heritage to the brink of elimination in the final trials to pick an America's Cup defender.

Valiant, gaining momentum as a defense candidate, waltzed home in front on a sunny day of smooth seas and light to moderate air by 2 minutes 49 seconds.

Along the docks, the speculation was that Heritage was down to her last out. That final chance supposedly could come Monday when the new Florida 12-meter is scheduled to race Intrepid.

Today is an off-day both for the defense candidates and the challenge contenders, Australia and France.

Heritage, with an 0-2 record in June and a 2-7 mark in the July observation trials, is faster now than she was then. But she still isn't fast enough to hold her own with either Valiant or Intrepid.

Meanwhile, Valiant has improved dramatically. She has now won four races while losing only one in these final trials.

Intrepid also has looked good, though, with a 3-1 mark, and a showdown between these two for the rule of cup defender appears likely.

Unser Victorious in Bettenhausen

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (UPI)—Indianapolis 500 champion Al Unser defeated a field of 27 Saturday to win the 100-mile Tony Bettenhausen Memorial race before a crowd of 22,000 at the Illinois State Fair. He received $10,000.

Only six of the participants finished — Carl Williams, Glandview, Mo.; Jim McElreath, Arlington, Tex.; Bruce Jacovi, Indianapolis, Ind.; Bentley Warren, Gloucester, Mass.; and Tom Bigelow, Whitewater, Wis.

No time trials were held due to heavy rain. Therefore, all 27 of the cars were allowed to enter the race which is normally limited to the top 18 qualifiers.

Insurance Man Bama 200 Victor

TALLADEGA, Ala. (U)—Bill Ward, an Alabama insurance executive making only the third start in a career that began when he was 35, drove a Mustang to victory Saturday in the Bama 200 for NASCAR Grand American cars.

The race at Alabama International Speedway was a warmup for today's $130,000 Talladega 500.

Ward, 38, drove like a veteran, averaging 145.382 mph to pick up $3,475. Second was Jim Paschal in a Javelin.

Court Captures Crown; Ruffels Reaches Finals

HAVERFORD, Pa. (AP) — Mrs. Margaret Court, the tennis whiz from Australia, needed only 36 minutes to win her third Pennsylvania Lawn Tennis Championship Saturday, while her countryman, Ray Ruffels, ripped through New Zealand's Brian Fairlie to reach the finals of the men's tournament.

Mrs. Court, her seemingly effortless game at its best, blitzed little Miss Pat Walkden of Rhodesia, 6-1, 6-0.

The 24-year-old Ruffels, who earlier upset top-seeded Cliff Richey, won his best-of-five set match over Fairlie, 6-3, 6-3, 7-5, the last set in a nine-point tie-breaker. He meets Jaime Fillol of Chile in today's final.

Miss Walkden, asked how it was to play the machine-like Mrs. Court, commented, "She puts pressure on you, hits the ball so hard it's difficult to do anything with it. I played as well as I was allowed to play."

Laver, Emerson Gain Net Final

FORT WORTH, Tex. (AP) — Australians Rod Laver and Roy Emerson powered their way into the finals Saturday night of the Colonial National Invitation tennis tournament.

Laver, the defending champion and tournament favorite, stormed past Spain's Andres Gimeno, 6-4, 6-4, in one semifinal contest while the fourth-seeded Emerson drew revenge for a heart-breaking Wimbledon setback with a long, tough, rain-delayed 6-6, 7-5 triumph over power-driving countryman John Newcombe.

Kathy Advances in Marlboro Open

SHORT HILLS, N.J. (UPI) — Kathy Harter of Seal Beach, Pamela Teeguarden of Los Angeles, Chris Evert of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., and Lany Kaliga of Indonesia won their matches Saturday and qualified for the $25,000 Marlboro Open tennis championships, which start Monday at South Orange, N.J.

Miss Harter defeated Becky Vest of Jackson, Miss., 8-6, 6-4.

Combined News Services

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N.Y. — Loud, closing with a rush in the stretch, wore down pacesetter Judgale to score a major upset in the 101st running of the $12,900 Travers Stakes Saturday at Saratoga.

Loud, ridden for the first time by Jacinto Vasquez, outgamed Judgale in the closing strides to win by a neck in the 1 1/4 mile test for 3-year-olds. Plymouth finished third in the field of nine starters. The entry of Preakness winner Personality and Belmont Stakes victor High Echelon finished fourth and fifth, respectively.

131 Impost Can't Stop Kaweah Bar

Kaweah Bar successfully carried a record 131 pounds to victory in winning the $8,000 Hard Twist Saturday night at Los Alamitos barely defeating Top Rockette by a nose in the 350-yard event run in 17.9 seconds.

The victory was the fourth in a row without a loss for the flashy palomino this year, and in carrying the heavy impost, became the first horse in the 20-year-history of Los Alamitos to win with more than 130 pounds. The triumph also was the 21st in 26 career starts.

Because of the small field, there was win and place betting only on the race, the first time that there was no show betting in a race at the Orange County track.

Robert Adair was aboard the four-year-old Alamitos Bar gelding for his 56th winner of the meeting, and also, he continues the only jockey to ride Kaweah Bar to victory.

Terry Liphm's chances of overtaking Bobby Adair in the Los Alamitos jockey standings received a serious jolt Saturday when the stewards handed the meeting's second leading rider a five-night suspension.

The stewards ruled that Liphm failed to maintain a straight course while aboard No Restraint in the second division of the Kindergarten Trials Friday evening.

Liphm, who trailed Adair by 10 winners going into Saturday night's races, will begin his "vacation" Wednesday evening and will be sidelined through Monday, Aug. 31.

RAMS ROMP OVER RAIDERS—

the Raider 2 before the drive sputtered and Ray kicked a nine-yard field goal. Key gain in the march was a 32-yard screen pass from Gabriel to Josephson which found Willie Brown rolling Lester out of bounds on the Raider 16. A block from Tucker and Josephson would have scored.

During the period the Rams ran off 20 plays to Oakland's 10.

Raiders 13, Rams 12: La-

Raiders 13, Rams 12: Darryle Lamonia, who has a reputation for throwing the bomb, rallied the Raiders in the final seconds of half to pull ahead. Trailing 12-6, the Raiders surged 58 yards in 4 plays with the AFL's most valuable player in 1969 combining with Fred Biletnikoff on a 44-yard scoring pass. Biletnikoff got behind Williams and made a finger-tip catch inside the five as the clock showed 10 seconds remaining. George Blanda, who earlier muffed the extra point when his attempt hit the cross-bar following a high snap of center, put the visitors ahead with his kick.

Oakland dominated the second period, countering with its first TD when Larry Todd punched over from the one-yard line to cap a 77-yard drive spanning 12 plays. Lamonia, who completed only one pass in the first period, found Eldridge Dickey for 21 yards and the Raiders were on their way. Another Lamonia-to-Biletnikoff completion stationed the Raiders on the Ram one and two plays later Todd sliced into the end zone with 3:33 elapsed.

With young quarterback John Walton at the controls, the Rams had one scoring opportunity but a holding penalty foiled the drive which had carried to Oakland's 20. Ray's 42-yard field goal sailed wide with 2:45 left in the half.

THIRD QUARTER

Rams 26, Oakland 16.

With backup quarterback Kenny Stabler called home to Alabama earlier in the day because of the sudden death of his father, coach John Madden turned the QB duties over to Blanda. The 43-year-old signal-caller didn't waste time, completing 40 and 30-yard passes to Warren Wells, which positioned the ancient one for a 20-yard field goal.

The Rams regained the lead when Gabriel passed 13 yards to Tucker, who got by rookie cornerback Alvin Wyatt to make the grab in the end zone.

The Rams opened up a 10-point lead, 26-16, with 4:43 left in the period when Gabriel pitched his third TD pass, an 8-yard strike to Josephson. Key play in the swift 51-yard, four-play drive was a 35-yard pass to Jordan.

FOURTH QUARTER

Rams 34, Raiders 23. After Eddie Meador intercepted Todd's halfback pass, Gabriel passed 37 yards to Josephson to set up Ray's 38-yard field goal as the Rams stretched their lead to 29-16. The score came at 3:11.

Buehler was guilty of another center snap out of the end zone, giving the Rams a second gift two-point safety at 3:05, hiking the Angelinos' lead to 31-16.

Following Alvin Haymond's 38-yard return of Elscheid's free kick, Ray pumped through another 38-yarder, increasing the Rams' margin to 34-16.

Blanda, in his 21st season as a pro, marched the Raiders 81 yards, climaxing the drive with a perfect 31-yard TD toss to Wells, who made the catch despite an interference call on Kermit Alexander in the end zone. Mike Clemon's PAT cut the Ram lead to 34-23.

RAIDERS IMPRESSED RAMS

Allen Happy at Comeback

"I was proud of the way we played in the second half," George Allen said while reflecting on the Rams' come-from-behind 34-23 conquest of the Oakland Raiders Saturday night at the Coliseum.

Oakland is probably the best team we've played this year. I felt they were at a great disadvantage playing Monday night in Philadelphia. It only gave them two full days of practice for us."

Asked what impressed him most about the Raiders, Allen answered: "We had a tough time getting to both (Darryle) Lamonia and (George) Blanda. Also their receivers are great. They have much more speed than we do."

"Roman (Gabriel) was sharp in the second half," Allen told well-wishers after the Rams had improved their summer pre-season record to 3-0.

Allen was distressed about the injury report.

Team Statistics

	Raiders	Rams
First downs	16	20
Rushing yardage	57	100
Passing yardage	271	269
Return yardage	19	17
Passes	20-41-1	13-26-1
Punts	4-37	5-47

Yards penalized	154	124

"We had only three healthy running backs and I don't expect either Mike Dennis or Larry Smith to be ready for San Diego next week. We lost Rick Cash for six to eight weeks tonight with a broken arm, Diron Talbert had to come out when he sustained a concussion and Richie Pettition was forced out with a bruised shoulder. They really gave us a pounding."

Deacon Jones also was impressed with the Raiders.

"What bothered us was the fact their quarterbacks set up about 11 yards deep (most NFL QBs drop back only seven yards) so it was tough to get 'em. I've never seen a team that runs such deep pass patterns."

Les Josephson, who fielded five passes for 119 yards and one touchdown as well as netting 34 yards on 13 rushes, cradled his game ball presented by team captain Joe Scibelli.

Questioned if he was mad when the Rams called time out with seconds to go and the Smogville group stationed on the Raider one-yard line, Madden said: "Not especially. Allen likes to get points and that's the way it should be."

Ed Meador, who came out of the retirement ranks six days ago, was a surprise starter at free safety and played nearly the entire game. The Rams' all-time interception leader didn't disappoint, picking off a Blanda pass in the fourth period.

HR Paces Truckers Win

By DAVE FLORES

CAMARILLO — A towering two-run homer by Ted Brown in the bottom of the first inning set the pace for the V.B. Morgan Truckers of Lakewood as they downed Associated Plumbing of San Diego, 5-2, in the opening game of the ASA Southern California Regionals Saturday night.

Brown's blast over the leftfield fence was the crushing blow for San Diego, which had repeatedly threatened but failed to score until the sixth inning.

Pitcher Ed Klecker fanned 12 and rapped two hits and two RBI in his own behalf.

Brown also sparked the Trucker rally in the sixth with a single, as Jim Vickers, Klecker and Gary Hunt followed with two-out doubles.

In the field, Lakewood's Max Mallet stayed off San Diego outbursts with a number of excellent defensive plays at third base.

WIFE GIVES BIRTH TO TWIN DAUGHTERS

Clay Now Outnumbered, 4-1

CLAY

on's family doubled Friday night with the arrival of twin daughters.

The twins, Reeshamah and Jamillah, were placed in incubators but are doing well. Surrounded by the four women, Clay was asked how he felt about the women's liberation movement.

"I don't give it a thought," he said. "In the Islamic faith, man is boss."

Baeza was knocked over the inner track hedge and suffered a broken collarbone, bruised ribs and mild concussion.

VINCE LOMBARDI is still confined to a hospital and, though he isn't at the helm of the Washington Redskins, apparently his winning attitude has rubbed off.

"We all want to make coach Lombardi very proud of us," says defensive back Mike Bass.

WORLD junior lightweight champion Hiroshi Kobayashi is determined to become the first Japa-

AFTER IT was all over

Friday night, Jim Bouton said he was glad to finally be able to get a lot of fun out of baseball.

Pitching semipro ball in New Jersey, Bouton said, "I had fun. I really did," after pitching a 7-5 victory for the Pat Pavers in the Bridgeton Invitational.

'Not Made for Marriage,' Says Delon

NEW YORK — "You know what is monogamy?" French movie star Alain Delon asked me, pronouncing the last syllable as in "mammy."

Yes, I understand what is monogamy: marriage with one person at a time. "I am completely against monogamy," he said. "I am for bigammy, trigammy, quadragammy. I want to be free. I am not made for marriage. I'm not a pleasure to be married to. Just the opposite. That's the way I am and I think it's my privilege to lead and live my life the way I want to, OK?"

The handsome, 6-foot French star, sitting at the Pierre Hotel on a recent afternoon, was probably stating the aims of the French masculine liberation movement, though French men have always been considered the most liberated males alive. Delon's 35, enormously successful as an actor and producer, and he enjoys a wild popularity in Japan and South America, where women rip at his tie and try to tear his clothes off. He admits that after one marriage, he plans to go through life wifeless but far from womanless.

"I SAY TO the woman liberationists, 'So, OK, if you want to be like a man and be equal, go in the army.' Oh, no, they won't. I am not looking for a girl who looks like a boy, I don't want a boy, I want a girl."

"But for me, I cannot have anybody living with me in my home permanently," he frowned.

"I can't be stuck with somebody 24 hours a day. I can't stand to be with the same person all the time. I want to do whatever I want to do whenever I want to do it. I guess that's not nice but that's the way I am."

Delon and Jean-Paul Belmondo, 37, the French Humphrey Bogart and long-time beau of Ursula Andress, have come together in a French gangster movie, "Borsalino," done in English. They are two favorites of French audiences whom French audiences seem to want to see together, fighting it out. And this focused attention on Delon, whom Americans remember mostly as the one-time almost husband of Romy Schneider.

"But I don't know what you mean by 'almost.' We just didn't," Delon said. "I just got married once and once is enough. Yes, I am positive! One hundred percent positive! TWO HUNDRED PER CENT!"

HUGH O'BRIEN never seemed to get married, either, nor does Maximilian Schell. Maximilian once told me he had to make it clear to the girls that he was not the marrying type.

"Do you find many girls who want to go along in that negative way?" I asked Delon.

"It's harder to find them now but you find some," he answered. "You have to settle it all before. You say to her, 'Look, I'm this way and that way, and you're not forced to accept it, but if you do accept it, that's the way it is.'"

"I might fall in love some day but it didn't happen yet. I am not a gift," he said again, "to any girl."

Kirk Sees Actor's Test in 'How Many'

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Before passing judgment on the staying power and star quality of such as Peter Fonda and Candy Bergen, let them accumulate a few dozen movies.

That's the attitude of one of the screen's more durable stars, Kirk Douglas.

"A performer should be judged on a body of work, not a single picture, or even two or three," the dimple-chinned actor said in the patio of his home, hard by the swimming pool and tennis court.

"I've been lucky because I've made a variety of motion pictures and a lot of them. I think I've done about 50 pictures in 22 years."

body of work in horse operas, gangster films, fantasy, costume epics, war pictures, contemporary hero and villain roles.

"On top of it all my chances of living to the end of the picture are about 50-50," he said, grinning. "I get killed a lot in movies."

Goodwill Unit Wins Award

An award for "outstanding rehabilitation services" has been won by Goodwill Industries of Orange County in competition with 141 other Goodwill units across America.

Word of the award to the Orange County unit was received from national headquarters, which said the designation "was made at the national assembly of Goodwill delegates at Buffalo, N.Y."

First place honors resulted from a display of Goodwill activities last November when the Industrial Exposition opened at the Anaheim Convention Center. Another first place award was won for best news letter, dealing with Goodwill affairs.

The award for rehabilitation services was based on a booklet outlining the rehabilitation and evaluation services in Goodwill's new rehabilitation center in Santa Ana.

MALCOLM EPLEY

A FAVORITE exercise in absurdity these days is the casual suggestion that the current economic recession is comparable with the great depression of the early thirties.

Anybody who was around then can think of innumerable refuting factors. I'll give you just one.

I applied some old math to something I found in the sports pages the past few days and came up with this.

In five days, beginning Saturday, a week ago, the sum of $8,897,165 was "wagered" at the two "race tracks" currently operating in our area.

Heck, in 1931-32 it would have been tough to pay for hay for as many horses as ran in those races at Del Mar and Los Alamitos.

But this last week some 104,000 persons bet nearly $9 million on an activity that couldn't possibly be regarded as necessary or as a sound investment.

Now I'm not knocking horse race bettors. I like to do it myself. But in 1931-32 I couldn't have spared the money for one minimum bet, and mighty few people I knew then could — or would if they could.

AN interesting nocturnal sight in the Los Altos area is that of a man who walks a big English sheep dog and a raccoon about the streets out there.

He's Dr. Ronald McComb of the staff of the VA Hospital. I'm told he keeps a radio bug in his car to keep up with news and entertainment while exercising his oddly assorted animal companions.

Observer who told me about it opined that one of these nights somebody is going to come out of the neighborhood bar, run into the good doctor and friends, and forswear drink forever.

SOME good news on the water front this week.

One startling item — a tax rate that won't be increased. Metropolitan Water District, which supplies our Colorado River Water and will distribute that from the north, announced it would hold firm on a property tax rate of 17 cents. In 1949, the MWD rate was 50 cents.

The other concerns supply. Water for this region was increased by more than 130,000,000 gallons a day when Los Angeles recently completed its second aqueduct from the Owens River. This reduces L.A. use of Colorado River water supplied by the MWD, releasing that for use of other communities in the MWD district, including us. It removes any danger of our region's running short before water arrives from Northern California in late '71.

Most of us tend to take for granted this great blessing of an ample water supply in a semi-arid region. Speaking of environment, which has everybody excited, think of what water does for ours.

NOW Mrs. Beach Vasey, the wife of the Superior Judge, is dignified and generally conservative in her choice of attire.

When the Vaseys went on a little evening outing with a professional group, she surprised her husband by donning a pant-suit of striking red. The judge frowned, and here's what he said:

"How come those Stanford colors?"

His Honor is a USC man.

READERS of last Sunday's column who see the new John Wayne western, Chisum, will surely remember what was said about people falling forward, unrealistically, instead of backward when hit by a gun slug.

In Chisum, men keep getting shot and falling forward out of windows all evening. They also fall forward off of balconies, another point made by the critic I quoted.

It's a good show, though.

CALIFORNIA'S therapeutic abortion statute became law on Nov. 8, 1967. Today operations and requests and inquiries are spiraling throughout the Long Beach area despite the pill, the cost of surgery, and the pending court challenges of the law's constitutionality.

In four hospitals here, surgeries for abortion have jumped markedly since the first of this year; the cumulative increases ranging from 80 to 1300 per cent above all previous records.

City Health Department spokesmen say they are answering queries at the rate of ten a day, about twice the volume they had last year. Another 250 inquiries are processed each month at the Long Beach Free Clinic, approximately twice as many as at any time prior to Jan. 1. Potential patients are referred to local physicians and hospitals.

At the 331-bed Pacific Hospital, 77 abortions have been performed since January 1 compared with 24 between November 1967 and the beginning of this year. At the 300-bed Community Hospital this year's tally to date is 231, compared with 17 before. Long Beach Memorial, a 545-bed facility, has recorded 410 surgeries to date this year compared with 190 for 1967-69. Harbor General's 712-bed hospital reports 258 operations since the first of the year compared with 144 prior to that.

Applications exceed abortions performed, officials add.

The California law, already challenged on constitutional grounds in five courts, is scheduled for a Los Angeles federal court hearing Nov. 2.

The 1967 statute specifies prerequisites similar to those in 14 other states. These include the risk of grave impairment of mental or physical health of the mother, pregnancies which result from rape or incest; other grounds need approval by a medical staff committee at a hospital. The California law also specifies that the operation must be performed by the 20th week of pregnancy.

Why the big increase in operations and inquiries this year?

The lag between legalization and actual availability probably results from reluctance by some physicians to perform the operation — regardless of legality — and a lack of information by prospective patients.

Says a prominent obstetrician, head of a hospital-staff screening committee:

"The physician who specializes in delivering babies is the least prepared emotionally and psychologically to perform an abortion. This is especially true with the 16-20 week pregnancy when the fetus has developed into a recognizable miniature baby and shows signs of life," he says.

Yet the obstetrician-gynecologist is most frequently consulted by prospective patients, he adds.

Youngest patient to date in this area was 13 years old, the oldest 43.

About 90 per cent of all abortions are for emotional health; the remainder result from rape or for physical health reasons, hospitals report. The emotional health grounds must be certified by the medical staff.

Says Free Clinic counselor, Mrs. Sue Stolzberg, 29-year-old mother of two and volunteer director of a staff of four other volunteers:

"THE WOMEN we see cross every socio-economic level, but the vast majority are young, white, middle class. About 80 per cent of them require Medi-Cal aid, 15 per cent already have saved partial payment. So far we've had only two who returned with second pregnancies.

"We refer them to obstetricians and surgeons in the community. We also hold birth control clinics and render psychological help to cut down on death fears and feelings of alienation, depression, confusion. We strongly encourage them to stay pregnant if at all practical," she says.

How expensive and how dangerous is a therapeutic abortion?

Hospitalization is usually between two and five days, depending on the term of pregnancy and physical condition of the woman. Bills average a little over $100 a day. Doctors' fees vary from a local average of $100-200 to as high as $500 in Beverly Hills.

If the pregnancy is 12 weeks or less, usual procedure involves a D & C (dilatation and curettage) or a uterine aspirator. The period between 12 and 16 weeks is difficult and operations are not usually performed then. Between 16-20 weeks, removal of the fetus is accomplished with a saline solution or surgical procedure.

None of these procedures is normally difficult or hazardous.

Indeed, State Supreme Court Justice Raymond E. Peters recently wrote that "therapeutic abortion is often safer than childbirth."

Hospitalization costs and doctors fees are paid by most medical plans where members have obstetrical or surgical benefits. Blue Cross and Blue Shield spokesmen say payments may run from $50 to the entire hospital bill, depending on the policy. Physicians' fee payments may run from $50 to $200. Both say all Medi-Cal costs are covered.

Court challenges to the present law, and a possible reintroduction of a Senate bill (defeated in committee last month) which would legalize any abortion per-

Sam Gravely... He's the Skipper, Period!

By BUCK LANIER
Military Editor

"Often the spirit of great events strides on before, and in today already walks tomorrow."
—Cicero

What would be the fate of the first Negro sailor to appear before the captain on a disciplinary matter?

A few people in Pearl Harbor asked themselves the question eight years ago when then Lt. Cmdr. Sam Gravely Jr., took over the destroyer escort USS Falgout.

He was the first Negro officer to command a Navy ship since the Civil War.

"It was nothing sensational," Gravely, 47, now a captain, recalled Saturday aboard the missile frigate USS Jouett in the Long Beach Naval Shipyard.

"I command a ship, not manage it. That's what the sailors want. They all have a good idea what will happen on most cases and a 'Santa Claus' skipper can lose respect in a hurry.

"All of my concern has always been about today, for there is where the action is," he said.

Capt. Gravely's today philosophy has taken him to full commander, skipper of the destroyer Tausig and commanding officer of the Jouett for the last three months.

He is the Navy's senior Negro line officer.

In between his ship assignments Capt. Gravely has worked in key jobs in the Defense Communications Agency.

TODAY there are 539 Negro officers above the rank of ensign. Ten hold commands, Capt. Gravely's the highest.

California Computer Products' Robert Lloyd of Anaheim who roomed with then Lt. Gravely for six months aboard the cruiser USS Toledo, said Saturday:

"When I reported aboard the herthing officer told me I would be in with Lt. Gravely. Then he hesitated.

"He's colored, by the way," I said it made no difference to me.

"It was the best decision I ever made," Lloyd said. "Sam was a hell of a worker and when he got pinged for something, he did not run and start hitching about 'prejudice.' Both white and colored junior officers goofed then and still goof today. When they do, they deserve to be called on it.

"There is no room for softies in the Navy and a man who plays it right down the line can do well. The important thing is to do the job.

"Sam did his well. I remember him working around the clock as communications officer while we were evacuating the Tochin Islands during the Quemoy-Matsu problems.

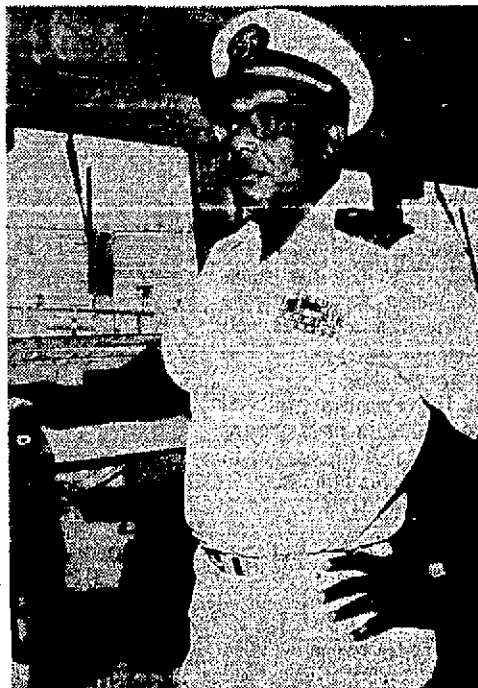

"He had reams of crypto to decode and really missed the sleep. At the same time he could find time to counsel his sailors," Lloyd said.

Aboard the Jouett the enlisted men seem unconcerned. They instinctively know the mark of the man in the captain's chair in short order.

Radioman Seaman Ed Reyes, of Wilmington, admitted he "was curious to see what would happen when Capt. Gravely look over."

Reyes said the captain "treated everybody the same" and that Jouett was a "happy ship."

A first class petty officer James Bruce said, "Capt. Gravely calls things right down the line."

Bruce, a native of Arkansas who lives in Long Beach, added, "It takes the guys in the first class mess, about four or five days to tell whether a captain is 'the captain' or just another four-striper.

"He is definitely 'the captain.'"

One of the ship's barbers, Don Forehand of Virginia Beach, Va., said, "You get all the workings of the ship in the barber shop and the sailors know the captain better than he knows himself. They all like him."

Two other Jouett sailors volunteered the comment that "he's quite a man."

Chief Electrician Bob Slade, San Diego, one of Jouett's Negro chiefs, called Capt. Gravely a "take charge guy." He said his last two skippers had made admiral and he hoped he would be good luck to Capt. Gravely.

It was in 1942, after attending Virginia Union University for two years, Gravely joined the Navy as an apprentice seaman. He was commissioned an ensign in the Naval Reserve in 1944 after attending midshipmen's school at Columbia University.

Leaving the Navy in 1946, he finished college.

Parent-Child Gap Bridged in Clinic

By MIKE KRUGLAK
Staff Writer

"Words," says Long Beach psychiatrist W.W. Broadbent, "are like porcupine quills — used to keep others at a distance."

"When I was your age..." you explain to your teen-age son, telling him why he can't have the car tonight.

"Because I say so..." you add in a further attempt to make him understand your point of view.

"After all the sacrifices we've made for you..." adds your wife as Tommy stalks out of the room to sulk.

The current phrase for it is the communication gap, and if you have children — or parents — the chances are the above nondialogue sounds horribly familiar.

"PARENTS AND children cooperate with each other to produce their discord," observes Dr. Broadbent. Each side has its favorite roadblocks designed to kill any chance of understanding or two-way conversation, he maintains.

To help identify and remove these roadblocks, he runs a two-hour-a-week, 10-week communications clinic at 3740 Long Beach Blvd. for families who want to learn to speak and listen to each other.

At one recent clinic session a young boy played the role of a son with problems in school. His father (one of the other parents in the clinic; not his real father) responded in a dialogue that went something like this:

Son: "Am I doing this report right?" (Tone begs for reassurance, understanding, confidence-bolstering.)

Father: "I don't know. (Tone implies, 'I'm tired, I don't really care.')

The dialogue continued as each played his part, and the other 20 members of the clinic soon recognized it as an example of precisely how not to handle your child as he cries out for reassurance.

"I'm convinced parents don't listen either to their

ELECTION CLOUDS FUTURE

Redevelopment Plans for Seal Beach Shaky

By BILL HOMER
Staff Writer

The Seal Beach Redevelopment Agency was born in 1969 in an attempt to meet the future head-on and to at least partially control it.

Based on projections that the city's population — now about 24,000 — would double by 1985, planners of the agency and its Riverfront Redevelopment Project were convinced their course was right.

Now, after an election that brought three new councilmen into office and a political upheaval resulting from the recent firing of the city manager and city attorney, the future is no longer so crystal clear.

THE AGENCY'S board of directors may face an overhaul following action at Monday night's council meeting. In fact, the agency may be at the crossroads of life and death.

Scheduled for a required "second reading" is a motion made by Mayor Morton Baum last Monday to name private citizens as replacements for the present directors — the city council itself.

The motion passed its "first reading" by a 3-2 vote, with Councilmen Conway J. Fuhrman and Thomas Hogard joining Baum.

Opposed were Lloyd E. Gunmore and Harold Holden, who, aside from their council posts, are, respectively, chairman and vice chairman of the agency's board.

Baum, Fuhrman and Hogard are board members, interim City Manager Dennis Courtemarche is the agency's executive secretary-director, and Eugene Jacobs, a Los Angeles attorney, is the organization's special counsel.

Under Baum's plan only Courtemarche and Jacobs would remain on the board, Seal Beach citizens not currently holding municipal office replacing the councilmen.

If passed by the council the measure will become effective in 30 days, giving Baum the power to replace the directors — with council approval — at one time or piecemeal.

Last Monday's vote marked the latest chapter in the stormy history of the redevelopment agency, which was formed in April, 1969, after about two years of study.

The agency is charged with carrying out the city's Riverfront Redevelopment Plan, which was formulated for two main purposes:

—To guide the course of development of vacant land, including the construction of high-rise apartments.

—To help finance such capital improvement projects as a new sewage treatment facility — estimated to cost $2 million — which would serve the city's riverfront, ocean and Marina Hill areas.

In tracing the history of the agency and Riverfront Redevelopment Project, one must look at the city's general plan, adopted in August 1968.

The general plan, which included the efforts of a citizens committee, Design Associates, Inc., of Monterey, and the real estate

Hippies gain a friend

JOHN FISHER IS A physician, a Republican and a Florida state senator. So it is a little surprising that he is also a hippie sympathizer.

He became one when he took his family to Yosemite National Park this summer.

"The choice of camping sites was limited," Dr. Fisher said in a letter to President Nixon. "I admit I was dismayed to find ourselves assigned to one in which we were surrounded by those youth whom we have, in our American way, labeled 'hippies'."

The dismay vanished, Dr. Fisher said, when he found the hippies neat and friendly. But Dr. Fisher said his dismay returned and was directed at park officials, rangers, U.S. marshals and highway patrolmen when they staged a 3 a.m. raid to clear the area of the young people. Objectors were beaten, the Foridian reported.

OBSERVING THE RAID from the cab of his truck-camper, Dr. Fisher said he found himself the target of a patrol that shined six flashlights in his face, demanded to see his auto registration and refused to produce any credentials of their own.

Dr. Fisher complied and was let alone. His hair was short. He is 47 years old.

He is angry anyway.

"Please explain to me how this, which now seems like an awful dream, can happen in our place, in our time," he wrote the President. "And tell me how you and I can make this nation the America you say it is and, until now, I thought it was."

IT WOULD BE EASY to say, "Dr. Fisher, mind your own business. No one hurt you. No one threw you out of the park. Only the hippies were mistreated, and then only if they refused to go quietly. They had to go, for even if you don't mind sharing a campground with them, others do."

But we hope the President doesn't give that answer.

We like to think America gives equal protection of the laws to the unconventional as well as the establishment, the young as well as the middle-aged, the uneducated as well as the physicians, the powerless as well as the state senators.

We hope the President and all of us join Dr. Fisher in making sure the American ideal lives, even in troubled times even for hippies.

Hole in the specifications

We will bet you dollars to doughnuts the Rockford, Illinois, school district is writing its purchase specifications more carefully these days.

The Rockford schools ran into a problem when they published their specifications for baked goods. The specs told how much the bread should weigh and how big the buns should be. But whoever wrote them hadn't taken the calipers to a doughnut. That left him with specifications that were full of holes.

An Iowa company seized on the omission to turn in a low bid by offering what Rockford bakers sniffed were "mini-size" doughnuts.

The school board rejected the low bid. It will seek new bids when its cafeteria commandant decides how big a doughnut Rockford needs.

The lesson is that the bidding process is a useful way to save taxpayers money — but only if specifications are sufficiently detailed to guarantee the buyer will get what he needs.

CANADA'S WHITE PAPER projects important shifts in foreign policy priorities, but it is reassuring on three points about which there has been some concern in this country: it is not anti-American, it is not neoisolationist, and it does not envision a Canadian withdrawal from the Atlantic Alliance.

Yet, while saying that "the United States is Canada's closest friend and ally and will remain so," the paper poses candidly the problems arising from this relationship and from the impact of American economic and technological ascendancy.

IT SEES A "constant danger that sovereignty, independence and cultural identity may be impaired" by this close tie and it wisely proposes for Canada an active pursuit of trade diversification and technological cooperation with "European and other developed countries" as a counterweight.

We regret that the White Paper did not conclude that Canada should maintain at least at present strength its army and air units in Europe, by way of preserving Ottawa's influence in NATO. It does, however, reaffirm Canada's continuing participation and rebuffs those who see the Atlantic Alliance as a cold war relic.

CANADA'S PLEDGE to increase foreign aid, its preparation for closer ties with Latin America (though it still hangs back from the Organization of American States), and its efforts to establish relations with Peking by way of helping to draw China out of dangerous isolation — these constructive projects should get only encouragement from this side of the border.

In sum, there is nothing to which Americans can legitimately object in Canada's White Paper. There is indeed, much that Americans, including those in high office, can wholeheartedly approve and discreetly support in this document for the 1970s that bears so clearly the imprint of Prime Minister Trudeau.

MEMOIRS 1885-1967. By Andre Maurois. Translated from the French by Denver Lindley. Harper and Row, $10.

It is hard to say in which field Andre Maurois has most distinguished himself. As novelist (beginning with "The Silence of Colonel Brnabac"), as biographer of George Sand, Balzac, Dumas, Hugo he has been in the top ranks. "Memoirs" now crowns a distinguished career, with its beautiful evocation of a happy French-Jewish family background; school and university influences; days as a young soldier in World War I; his life as a writer, and again as soldier (with the British) in World War II, and later war years in this country.—N.

ABOARD THE USS MONITOR: 1862. ABOARD THE USS FLORIDA: 1863-65. Both by William F. Keeler. United States Naval Institute, $6.50 and $8.50 respectively.

Keeler, Illinois merchant who became a Navy officer, narrowly escaped when that first seagoing ironclad sank in a storm on the last day of 1862. He served aboard her from her first day to her last and his "Dear Anna" letters to his wife describe, vividly, life aboard the new "wonder," and the historic battle with the Merrimac. The Monitor's captain asked that Keeler go with him on his new command, USS Florida, and paymaster Keeler continued his "Dear Anna" letters, describing, among other exciting experiences, the chase after a blockade-runner.—N.

THE UPPER CRUST: An Informal History of New York's Highest Society. By Allen Churchill. Prentice-Hall, $12.95.

In 1733, New York's "haute monde" organized cockfights. In 1750 a contemporary wrote that one social leader took snuff "as often as she takes salt at meals." Allen Churchill, whose pen has long had a sprightly touch in writing of American manners and mores, in this lavish and not in the least worshipful volume, traces the foibles of New York's high society from colonial days, through the development of the "Four Hundred," to the death of high society at the hands of Cafe Society.—N.

Conference for nonrevolutionaries

WASHINGTON, D.C. — A youngish (37) member of Spiro Agnew's 1968 campaign staff, Stephen Hess, has cut out for himself an almost impossible task in trying to organize on behalf of President Nixon what is called the "White House Conference on Youth" to be held next February.

It probably will be held, too, and that will be a miracle in itself. Hess is one of those who have for a long time been trying to define some kind of a new G.O.P. doctrine.

Reading the lines and between the lines of a recent speech by Hess in which he announced the conference, one of its primary aims can readily be deduced. This is that people should pay a lot more attention to the problems of youth other than those who are bored to death in the universities and eagerly desire, they think, a revolution. Of course, Hess gives a great deal of attention to this element.

But the suspicion arises, and this is apparently shared by some of the young militants, that the White House really desires to inform the country through this conference that the red-hot bomb makers are few and the bulk of youth, with all its problems, is good at heart and somewhere near the sympathetic reach of the Establishment.

How a meaningful conference on youth is to be held without including the revolutionaries and those who personify Nixon as the all-time bad guy of the Establishment is hard to understand.

But Hess has excluded an explosive young Negro woman, Eva Jefferson, president of the Northwestern University student body, merely because she advises the impeachment of Nixon as a beginning step on the road to reform. Miss Jefferson, it can be guessed, could cause a great deal of trouble at the youth conference of the kind that Hess does not want, in spite of all his professions of fully exploring the complaints of youth.

Why merely have another meeting like the recent gathering of the National Students Association in St. Paul where students can exceed each other in revolutionary fervor and draw farther away from adult opinion?

Of the youth population there are nearly twice as many who are regularly employed for a living as there are going to college, and they have problems of a more immediate nature than that of the liberal arts student who is trying to find himself by smoking pot and pretending to read Marcuse.

THIS 12 MILLION, if Hess' figures are right, is the youth corps of the hard-hat class and it is just as thoroughly alienated from the collegiate idle and the indigent poor as those two classes are from the rest of society.

Some political analysts have been trying to make this point also. These young people work because they have to or want to work, and if the political analysts are right they are more attracted by the George Wallace philosophy than by the doctrines of the college rebels.

Youth alienation has many meanings. The alienation of young kids who desire jobs but can't get them. The alienation of young blacks, Mexicans, Indians, who would be glad to trade places with the subsidized young whites of the middle class in colleges and universities. The alienation of serious-minded college students whose education is interrupted by disorders with which they do not sympathize and who are offended by the freaky life-styles of their contemporaries. The alienation of working youth from both the pampered middle class and the pampered poor.

Ending the Vietnam war won't end those alienations. Sexual and drug go-offs, fads in diet, dress and rhetoric, won't end them either.

Eva Jefferson, Tom Hayden, Angela Davis, and the rest, have had rather a long run for the content of the drama they are trying to enact, and it will be refreshing if Hess can finally organize his White House conference so that there is a broader perspective of the problems of 40 million young people who will soon inherit the earth.

LETTERS TO EDITOR

Starlet of revolution

EDITOR:

The Angela Davis decision to become a "fugitive" embodies the insurgent's strategic need to create a visible "victim" of Establishment "oppression".

As a refugee, Miss Davis — the militant Communist — is no longer a person. She is just another tactic of the radical left.

Had she submitted to police questioning, only two choices would have been open to her. If she claimed her newly purchased guns had been stolen, she would have been discredited by her Communist cohorts and gleeful ivory tower apologists alike.

Had she admitted involvement in the apparent conspiracy, only momentary notoriety would have been hers. The obscurity of prison isolation would have soon removed her name from the public spotlight. And no revolutionary starlet wants to be inconspicuous.

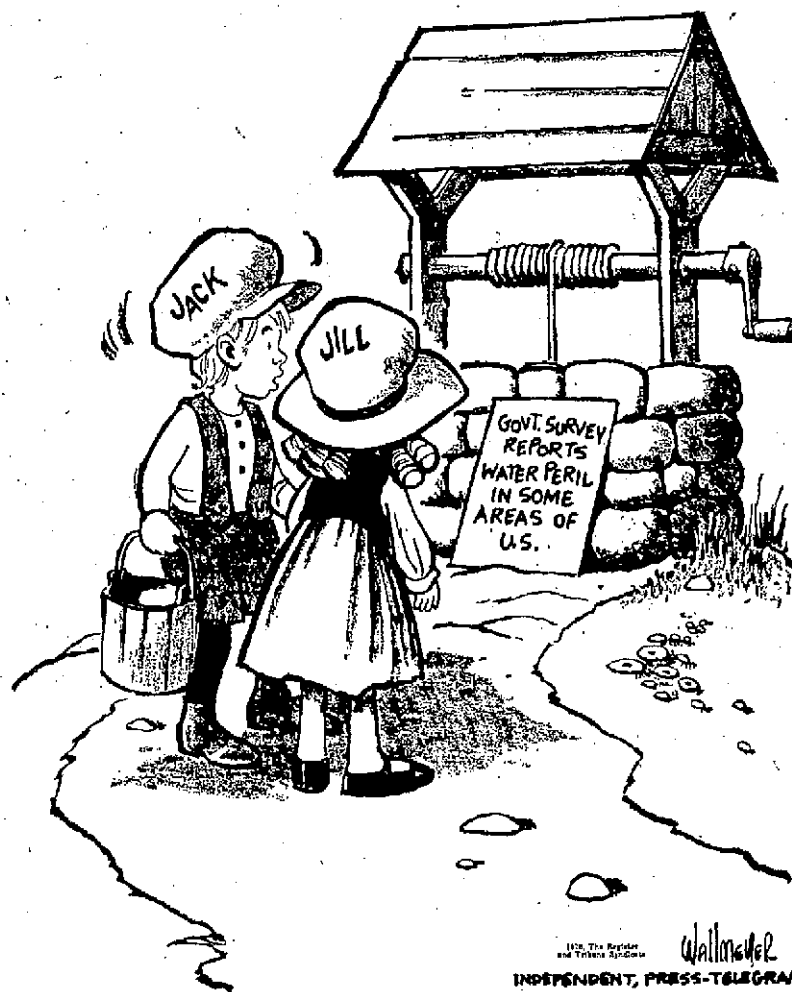

The tragedy of an Angela Davis is not what she could have accomplished for her people had she not put self-interest above social service.

It is, rather, that the idealistic young who rally around her cannot win, while she in turn cannot lose.

National political power will never come from the barrel of a gun in the United States because the middle-class majority is somewhat indifferent to the social and economic struggles of the less privileged minority.

"IF THE FALL DOESN'T GET US, THE WATER MIGHT..."

Within atomic age, new era starts

TOKYO — This was a month of grim anniversaries, a month that changed the face of Asia 25 years ago. The atomic age made its debut at Hiroshima. The Soviet Union declared war on Japan and claimed its reward. Japan surrendered.

It was four years later, in 1949, that the Communist revolution won China. But that too resulted from the long upheaval which reached its climax in August 1945. That was the beginning of an era.

NOW THERE IS a sense of a new era beginning, hopefully without going through cataclysmic climax first. Its silhouette is unformed yet. Everybody involved is groping to find an assured place. The one thing certain is that whatever else may shift or dissolve, the atomic age will remain.

In one way, it is extraordinary how much the world has adjusted to the discovery of the means for its total self-destruction. Everyday life has changed, but for other reasons which would most probably be there is no one had ever been atomized. International tensions have shifted and shifted again, but Hiroshima may well have influenced the tides of conflict much less than is supposed.

It wasn't the atom bomb which spawned the cold war among the victors of World War II, and there is at least an argument that the cautious movement now to coexistence might have come sooner rather than later without it.

Nonetheless the weapon exists, and there is no reason to think it can ever be made to go away.

THERE IS A tendency among many to equate it with original sin, the source of all guilt in virtually the same biblical sense as Eve's succumbing to the temptation of an apple.

Thus, in this view, the United States is forever tainted and must forever atone because it used the first atom bomb, as some view the myth of Genesis as proof of woman's essential moral weakness to be repressed but never overcome.

Yet the bomb was the fruit of war, not of a special worm in the American heart nor even of the American economic and social system. The battle of Okinawa claimed as many lives. In the same day that Hiroshima was atomized, a family I know named Okumura who lived in the countryside near Kobe lost everything in a raid of fire-bombs which ravaged the whole area. That was the technique the United States was using to destroy Japan's stubborn will to fight, and was going to keep on using till the end, had the atom bomb not worked.

Now Japan has an intense atomic energy program and expects the atom to provide one-third of its soaring need for electric power by 1975. Its people who sought conquest, now despise war. But they have begun to find themselves burdened with a terrifying new menace which is entirely the product of peace and laborious progress. That is pollution, becoming so grave a problem here that it is developing into the single dominant political issue, superseding all others.

ALONG WITH the atom, war sped the advent of antibiotics, radar, electronics. Selfless peacetime research is threatening to bring us into the biochemical age, with possibilities of mass mental and genetic manipulation which would destroy our most basic concepts of what a human being is.

It isn't enough to say the bomb is bad. It isn't enough to say war is bad. It isn't enough to say an establishment or a system is bad. It isn't enough to say disruption is bad. Despite the claims for "commitment" and "activism," these are all really escapist trusts seeking to dump the blame for unprecedented new problems and challenges on someone else. They flee the burden by focusing on a single strand in the tangle.

In the attempt to find a new, more satisfying and more effective base for moral judgment in this new era, a quarter of a century after the first demonstration that man has acquired responsibility for nature, it is necessary to seek much broader vision.

THERE IS NOTHING new about the problem of moral responsibility. In essence, it hasn't changed. But in the history of man it has never before been put so universally, with so many conflicting claims which must all be given due account. For otherwise, the effort to achieve morality degenerates into fanaticism and self-defeating righteousness.

In this anniversary month, we find that we have somehow learned to live with the incredible atom. The human will to survive and prosper persist. Now it is a matter of reconciling the will, the possibilities and the sense of human purpose.

My Freddie does love his drinky-poo before din-din!

So she went ahead and used subway

LONDON — This is a strange city.

During the evening rush yesterday, for example, an old woman hailed a taxicab in Oxford Street. It stopped. No one thought the event remarkable enough to deserve a comment. The driver did not race past the old woman laughing. He did not wave at her a sign that said "on call" or "off duty." He stopped.

When the old woman opened the door of the stopped cab, she was not thrust aside by strong men who wanted her cab. A number of strong men, in fact, watched passively while the old woman entered the cab and closed the door.

"She's going to get away with it!" That was the startled thought that ran through one astounded urban American mind. "Those men are not going to beat her and take her taxi-cab!"

THEY DIDN'T either. What a strange city. Cars everywhere and not a single one in all London seems to have a Union Jack decal in the windshield or a bumper sticker making hortatory noises in traffic. No "Love Britain or Leave it." No "Free Oscar." No "Boycott France."

Last night a woman used the subway. At least she seemed to be using the subway. She entered the High-bury & Islington Station and did not come out again. A policeman strolled by. It seemed only civilized to report the incident.

"Officer, a woman just went down to the subway platform, I believe."

"Is that a fact, sir?" He seemed not about to take action.

"Yes, it is a fact, officer. Moreover, she was unescorted."

The officer winked and passed on. Later, friends said that this was not indifference to duty. Women and even children constantly used the subway without dread, these friends asserted.

THESE VERY FRIENDS made a curious scene at the end of the evening when time came for their American guest to leave. Before stepping into the street, he removed his 38 calibre revolver from his arm holster and placed it in his jacket pocket for quick availability, as he habitually did at home.

His hosts were appalled. London, they insisted, was not Dodge City. "Nobody is going to hurt you here," the hostess said.

"Only a fool goes into a city street after sundown without his gun."

"Nonsense," said the hostess. "Look, I'll walk you to the corner myself." And she did. Then she walked back to her house alone. It was nearly 200 yards away. Nobody mugged her.

A very strange place to call a city.

WELL, HERE'S an example. On the buses if you do not have the correct fare they will make change for you. Crazy? No sir. They really make change for you right there on the bus. And then, believe it or not, the fellow who has just done this great thing for you — want to guess what he does? He thanks you.

Another odd thing about the buses. They don't all go to the garage when it starts raining and wait there for 45 minutes. There must be some reason why they don't but the local bus company, when telephoned, could not supply one and, in fact, expressed the opinion that the caller had a dumb question.

He did not say right out, as they do in cities, "That's a stupid question, Stupid!" He asked permission of the potential insultee. "If I may say so, sir, that's an odd question," he said.

THIS HESITATION about loudly abusing absolute strangers for trivial reasons is one of the oddest of London's characteristics and can be noted even in short-order eating places.

If, for example, one enters the typical urban short-order eating place 7 a.m. and asks for a cup of soup and a glass of tomato juice, what reply is to be expected? We all know it:

"At 7 o'clock in the morning this creep wants a cup of soup and a glass of tomato juice. Here!" The "here" is always accompanied, of course, by a bowl of oatmeal and a cup of coffee.

In London they quickly give you — Scout's honor, now — A CUP OF SOUP AND GLASS OF TOMATO JUICE.

Isn't that something to happen in a city?

Boredom blamed for student revolt

STEVE KELMAN of the class of '70 has written a devastating analysis of the student movement in his book based on his years at Harvard, "Push Comes to Shove: The Escalation of Student Protest" (Houghton Mifflin). First he says that what makes students radical is not social injustice ("it would be hard to argue that America in the sixties is a more unjust society than it was in the Eisenhower-McCarthy fifties"), not oppression, but boredom.

"Students are today's idle rich. Being idle, well fed, and generally satisfied give us a chance to do a great deal of solitary thinking and soul-searching. . . . The first non-negotiable demand of the oppressed student class is therefore for a rapidly changing stream of sensations. . . . And the hostility of the oppressed student class is directed against its oppressors: institutions which require routinized behavior (such as going to classes every day) or which discourage experimentation with new sensations such as drugs. The three most serious oppressors: University, Law, Family."

S. I. HAYAKAWA
President, San Francisco State College

Kelman's observations are certainly consistent with my own. It is above all the idle, bright, but purposeless student who is the source of campus unrest.

Also inherent in student radicalism is elitism—a profound contempt for ordinary people — which Kelman calls the "rotten kernel" of SDS radicalism. Hence the tactics of confrontation. If radical students respected their fellow citizens, they would reason with them. But no, they cannot be bothered with reasoning because they know what is right—so they will shut down with force whatever they object to.

Elitism is certainly the curse of student political life. As Kelman says, the usually decent liberal agrees with a radical that "most Americans are ignorant and reactionary" and that "intellectuals know best how to rule the country." Actuated by this moral arrogance the liberal elitist gives assent to the radical elitist's rape of the democratic process. This is why the student movement is so much like Nazism. Like the Nazis the New Left rebels against "das system," knows far better than the majority what is good for the country, and believes that it is morally justifiable to use any means whatsoever to attain its objectives.

"The elitist must be fought and fought hard," writes Kelman, "because . . . the bloody history of the twentieth century has taught us that democracy, majority rule, and civil liberties are not luxuries, but the alternatives to mass murder and suffering. They are the necessary preconditions for any decent society."

MANY PUBLIC OFFICIALS, educators and college administrators who should be wiser than the 22-year-old Mr. Kelman continue to worry lest their reaction to student radicalism results in "repression" — and hence do nothing. But it does not seem to me that reasoned and effective opposition to an incipient Nazism is "repression" in their sense at all. It is merely the reassertion of democracy and freedom of speech cherished by the vast majority of Americans, conservatives and liberals alike.

Finally Kelman's view of student violence is extremely perceptive. To be of the elite, one must remain ahead of the masses — one must remain "one up." The antiwar movement at first was simply against war and for negotiations with the enemy. But as more and more people began to agree with this position, student radicals abandoned the idea of negotiations in favor of a Viet Cong victory. To be pro-Viet Cong or Maoist or to march the streets crying "Ho, Ho, Ho Chi Minh," therefore, was not a thoughtful conclusion arrived at after the study of historical evidence, but merely a matter of "one-upmanship" — of keeping ahead of the fashion.

However, Kelman continues, "an ideology can become only so extreme before it falls off the political spectrum entirely." Violence, then, is the step beyond theoretical extremism, and the law of one-upmanship is bound to keep it escalating, first, sit-ins, then vandalism, then guns on campus, then the destruction of buildings.

It might seem from Kelman's critical view of the New Left that he is a conservative. This is far from being the case. He was a leader of the Young People's Socialist League and for a time an energetic participant in SDS. His own background is democratic socialism in the Norman Thomas tradition. With an ideological framework, rational and democratic, which his fellow students lacked, Kelman was able to see through the self-deceptions of radical rhetoric and to muster the moral courage to combat it.

L. A. C. SAYS Worldwide rush for oil reserves

By L.A. COLLINS Sr.
THE "CEASE FIRE" arrangement in the Arab-Israeli war — it is hoped — will provide a plan to protect the state of Israel from the Arab attempts to take over that little nation. But a major factor is the over 300 billion barrel oil reserves in that area. This is a major factor in the Russian aid given to the Arabs — and an added reason for the United States interest because at present much of the production there is done by U.S. companies.

It is all a part of the world-wide efforts to find and develop more oil reserves. According to the Oil and Gas Journal present proven oil reserves are estimated to be 317 billion barrels in the Middle East, 54BB in Alaska, 38BB in the U.S., 22BB in So. America, 9BB in Mexico and 2.5BB in Australia.

Total known reserves are estimated at about 464BB world-wide. But many times that amount are expected to be discovered in the present world-wide search. A U.S. News chart and survey estimate over $100 billion will be spent in these efforts. The frantic search is due to the estimates that these known reserves will be exhausted within 15 to 20 years at our present rate of 15 billion barrels a year, which is expected to increase in each succeeding year.

THE ALASKAN discoveries are expected to be a potential of 80BB. But the cost of transportation will be enormous. Very large reserves are reported in the North Sea waters belonging to Norway and Holland. The jungles of South America are expected to be major oil fields. These are examples of the search in about every part of the world.

Columnists on the opinion pages are chosen to represent diverse viewpoints and do not necessarily reflect the editorial position of this newspaper.

Of importance to the U.S. is its "Ace in the Hole" in Colorado, Utah and Wyoming. These vast oil shale fields are estimated to hold oil reserves of almost 1800 billion barrels of oil — almost four times as much as present known reserves. The problem of these reserves is the high cost of production.

These reserves are not subject to drilling and production as are those under present production systems. The shale beds are great masses of oil shale. The shale is mined and then heated to release the oil. The government and private oil companies have spent millions of dollars in endeavoring to produce oil at competitive costs, but to date have not done so.

TEST PLANTS have been constructed and proven to be effective. Most oil shale land is federally owned with some of it under lease by private companies. It is hoped there may be a breakthrough in technological development that will make it possible to utilize these reserves at costs competitive with oil drilled wells.

With this reserve available to the U.S. it would appear we are secure in the supply of oil for many generations ahead. It would be costly to use them while cheaper oil is available. But even if it cost twice as much to produce it is reassuring to know we have it.

WWII General Blasts Film Treatment of Patton

By JOHN LUNGREN
Staff Writer

The Nazis couldn't capture Gen. George S. Patton in battle — and Hollywood hasn't done any better on film, says a retired World War II commander who served under "Old Blood and Guts."

Maj. Gen. Ernest N. Harmon wheeled up his heavy armor and loosed critical salvos at "Patton," which is now playing in Long Beach.

Harmon, who commanded the Second Armored Division in the Battle of the Bulge, said the film caricatures Patton "as a 'braggadocio,' which he really was not — if you knew him."

And as for the celebrated incident in Italy when the crusty, two-gun Patton slapped a soldier patient in a hospital:

"It was way overplayed because Patton only flicked the soldier's face with his glove."

"Patton," Harmon said, "was genuinely concerned about his men but he had an obsession about soldiers getting out of combat by faking combat fatigue."

Although Harmon's "Hell on Wheels" Second Armored Division achieved distinction in battle, his name never became a household word in the manner of Patton, Omar Bradley or Dwight D. Eisenhower, his superiors in rank and publicity.

But the easy-mannered, two-star

New Englander must figure prominently in any recounting of World War II feats in battle.

Harmon commanded forces that pushed the Germans back through Kasserine Pass in North Africa. His troops spearheaded the Anzio beachhead and breached the Siegfried Line in the Battle of the Bulge. And he was military governor of a zone containing more than two million persons in Czechoslovakia.

The details of the war history he helped write are relived in Harmon's recently completed autobiography, "Combat Commander," to be published Oct. 14 by Prentice-Hall.

His comrades in arms, the men of the Second Armored Division, got an advance look at the book last week when Harmon was in Long Beach for a division reunion at the Edgewater Hyatt House.

The respect the veterans hold for their World War II commander was evident as they crowded around him to get autographs on their advance copies of the book.

The 76-year-old Harmon was born in Lowell, Mass. Orphaned at 10, he lived with an uncle who sent him to Norwich University, where he returned in 1946 as president.

After his freshman year at Norwich, he was appointed to West Point, where he played halfback on the football team and was the academy's middleweight boxing champion. He was graduated in 1917 and was assigned to the only American cavalry regiment to see combat in World War I.

As a between-the-wars officer he went through the usual routine of Army staff colleges, studied armored warfare and taught at West Point and Norwich. He even found time to represent the United States in the modern pentathlon at the 1924 Olympics in Paris.

Then came World War II, North Africa, the liberation of Rome and the Bulge, and most of the 31 decorations he holds. The war also brought close contact with Gen. Patton, the classic tactician whose hot pursuit of the enemy matched in intensity the heat of his temper.

Patton is dead and the earth of Europe gouged by his hell-for-leather tanks has long since healed over. But Harmon has not forgotten the days when "Old Blood and Guts" drove himself harder than he drove his troops.

He recalls the history he made as he gardens, reads and fishes. He philosophizes about the nation's young people, "confused by poor leadership from the home up through the schools — but the majority of them are fine enough."

And there's time to quote Abraham Lincoln — as Gen. Harmon did in the paragraph that concludes "Combat Commander":

"How much better would things turn out if those who did them would not seek the credit."

Orange County Blasts State's Utility Valuation

Orange County supervisors took a dim view last week of the state's assessment of public utilities, which in this county dropped .8 per cent for the 1970-71 tax year.

Amador County fired the first guns against the state board, claiming that the taxpayers of California are being forced to shoulder a heavier tax burden because of its decision to decrease public utility valuations.

Supervisors in Orange County protested that the State Board of Equalization does not use the same "yardstick" of deciding values for utilities as the county does in assessing homeowners and businesses.

The state board uses "historical costs," the value at time of construction, less depreciation over the years. The county uses the replacement value of a property as basis for its assessment.

Hence, the county supervisors insisted, the state board did not take into account the appreciation of the utility holdings — the fact that all of them are worth more now than when built.

Is There Girl With Heart to Match Debbie's?

By ARLINE SHERER
Staff Writer

Help Wanted — disabled, post-polio student wishes live-in attendant, call 862-8738.

In space limits of a want ad, there is no room to tell of the needs, the spirit and the educational hopes of 19-year-old Debbie Stone of Norwalk.

When she was 6 months old, Debbie, a polio victim, entered Rancho Los Amigos Hospital in Downey.

She is paralyzed except for the use of one of her hands.

She stayed at the hospital until she was 14. In the last few years, she lived in five foster homes. Despite the odds, she finished high school at the Joaquin Miller school for the handicapped in Reseda and was valedictorian of her class. Social workers at Rancho Los Amigos then arranged for her to register at Cerritos College in Norwalk.

They found her an apartment across the street from the college and arranged for a foreign student to share it and take care of her. Recently, the girl had to leave, and Debbie's hope for college may be destroyed unless another one can be found.

Debbie has finished one semester at Cerritos, majoring in English. She gets around campus in an electric wheelchair.

"I want to become a teacher for the physically handicapped," she explained. "Being handicapped myself, I am aware of the adjustment and educational problems they face. For instance, patients at Rancho have to squeeze their education between physical and occupational therapy sessions. Many times, they come into class in the middle of a test."

A friend of Debbie's, Ruth Pelton of Downey, said she is amazed by the young woman's enthusiasm:

"She is hungry for an education and wants so desperately to be self-supporting. She has such a good mind. She almost never watches television, but spends her time reading and writing. She writes by holding a pen in a feeder apparatus attached to her hand. Debbie is a good student, and college would be her salvation."

Friends are eager to help the ambitious brunette. Last week when Debbie was recuperating from a respiratory ailment, Patty Bird, a blind student attending Cerritos, offered to register for her. A family in Bellflower will attempt to care for Debbie until she can find an attendant and return to her own apartment.

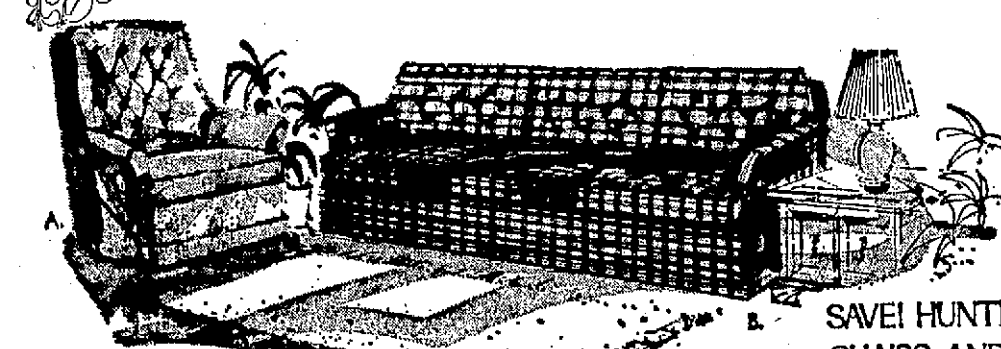

So far the search has been fruitless. Debbie has tried employment bureaus, advertised in newspapers and called some 60 people involved with attendant care. "Debbie is physically helpless," Mrs. Pelton said. She needs a mature, strong person who is familiar with working with the handicapped. The attendant would have to operate a lift to move Debbie in and out of a wheelchair, bathe her and help in countless ways. The problem is that a person able to do all these things can get a much better paying job. Debbie can only afford to pay $215 a month plus room and board.

"What Debbie needs is a dedicated person, who will help her in her goal to get through college."

FOR SHIPYARD PACTS Solon Rips Lack of L.B. Members on Reagan Panel

From Our State Bureau

SACRAMENTO — Gov. Reagan this weekend announced the formation of an advisory committee directed to "bring more shipbuilding and ship repair to California."

But Assemblyman Vincent Thomas, D-San Pedro, immediately questioned the lack of "adequate representation for the great ports of Los Angeles and Long Beach" on the 13-member committee.

JOHN E. HARMER, manager of the California Shipbuilding and Drydock Co., 1601 Water Ave., Long Beach, was named to the committee to represent industry. He was appointed

L.B.-Based Destroyers to Retire

Three destroyers representing 78 years of Naval service leave Long Beach at 10 a.m. Tuesday for Bremerton, Wash., and eventual decommissioning.

The USS Benner, Collett and Walke are the first of 15 Long Beach-based ships to leave for decommissioning as a result of recent fleet cutbacks announced by the Department of Defense.

The Benner, a 26-year veteran, was built by the Bath Iron Works, Bath, Me., and commissioned Feb. 13, 1945. She served in both the Atlantic and Pacific Fleets and saw action in WW II and Vietnam.

She recently returned from her latest tour in Vietnam. The ship is commanded by Cmdr. Roland J. Carr.

THE COLLETT, another Bath ship, was commissioned May 16, 1944. During her 26 years of service, she saw combat action in three wars. A WW II veteran and one of the first ships in the Korean conflict, Collett also supported allied forces in Vietnam. Cmdr. Walter J. Beck of Long Beach is her commanding officer.

USS Walke, commissioned Jan. 21, 1944, was built also in Bath and saw action in both the Atlantic and Pacific during WW II, participating in the invasion of Europe and numerous naval operations against the Japanese and off Vietnam.

She is commanded by Cmdr. Thomas W. Watson. Upon arrival in Bremerton, the ships will be stripped and deactivated at the Inactive Ship's Maintenance Facility.

a vice chairman of the executive committee.

Bryan Sullivan, state director of Commerce, was named chairman of the committee, which was assigned three tasks by the governor:

- To identify the opportunities for additional shipbuilding, modernization and repair within the planned programs and revitalization of our merchant marine and modernization of our Navy;
- To determine the capabilities of California's maritime industry for fulfilling the requirement of these programs.
- To identify those areas in which state government can be of assistance to the industry, working with California's congressional delegation and the national administration in Washington to make certain that our capabilities and capacities are fully utilized in carrying out these national programs.

The governor credits Louis Els-Hokin of San Francisco with "playing a key role in helping to form this committee." Els-Hokin was named senior consultant.

Also named vice chairmen of the executive committee, representing industry, were John Murphy, National Steel and Shipbuilding, San Diego and Robert Mayer, of Todd Shipyards, San Francisco. Executive committee vice chairmen from labor include Thomas Rotell, Marine Metal Trades Union, San Francisco; Berna Breuilotte, IBEW, and Clarence A. Briggs, Plumbers, Carpenters and Electricians Unions.

Other committee members from labor were Freeman Brown, IMA, San Diego; Ed Rainbow, Boilermakers Union, San Francisco, and Joseph Ziff, IBEW, San Francisco.

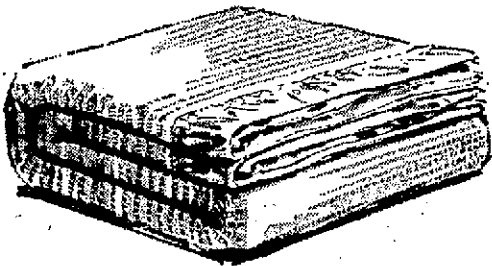

REPRESENTING industry were Wilton Colberg, Colberg Shipyards, Stockton; William C. Brigham, Bethlehem Steel and president of the West Coast Shipbuilders Association and Cliff Legette Triple A Machine Shop, San Francisco and San Diego.

Thomas questioned the absence of Jim Daniels, international west coast representative of Shipyards Workers, International.

"Revitalizing California's shipping industry is a splendid objective," Thomas said. "But for nowhere is revitalization as important as it is in the Los Angeles and Long Beach harbor area. It would seem that this area should have more representation on this advisory commission than it appears to have."

PARENTS, CHILDREN PLAY ROLE

children or each other," says Dr. Broadbent. And not listening, he says, is "a great way to create misery."

The central thesis of the clinic is that parents and children cooperate with each other to produce discord. By role playing and other techniques such as deliberate roadblocking, families are made aware of this.

"Conversation does more to conceal than to clarify," observes Dr. Broadbent.

TO HELP THE clarification process, the clinic teaches "active listening," or how to hear beyond the words, how to listen with more than just your ears.

The clinic starts with children (down to about age 10) and parents in separate sessions. Then, in the final weeks, they get together.

They sit in circles, with the children in an inner circle opposite parents other than their own. Each child presents his new parent with his favorite frustration.

"I don't see why I have to clean my room."

The parent responds with his favorite roadblock.

"(Stop complaining and do it or you get no allowance.)"

The session turns into a comedy routine as parents compete to trot out their favorite communicative roadblock and pet neurosis.

"My feeling is that as soon as one can laugh at his neurotic ways of communicating, the neurosis begins to melt away," says Dr. Broadbent.

THE LAUGHTER is there, but through it parents come to see the viciousness and futility of some of their pet gambits:

"When I was your age..." The distance between parent and child is effectively established in this one.

"Will you come here, dear..." Dear is what semanticist S.I. Hayakawa calls a "purr" word, but is delivered, in this context, with a very audible snarl.

"Parents," says Dr. Broadbent, "are great at reassuring, but they reassure before they know what the problem is. Children sense this. They pick up the ungueness of parents' communication."

Dr. Broadbent, 51, became a psychiatrist in a roundabout way. After graduating from Niagara (N.Y.) University he was concertmaster for the Buffalo Symphony Orchestra.

Moving to Long Beach in 1952, he formed an advertising agency and, later, an investment corporation.

He started taking premedical courses at Cal State Long Beach at age 36, and later received a medical degree from Loma Linda University in Redlands.

HIS DID his psychiatric residency at the University of Southern California, where he is now an assistant clinical professor of psychiatry.

Dr. Broadbent's approach is, he admits, innovative, going far beyond the tenets of classical Freudian psychology.

"The major motivating factor behind human behavior," he says, "is the seeking to belong... the enhancing of self esteem."

His clinical technique is unique. It brings parents and children together, but uses other adults in the role of parents as the real parents look on.

One of the highlights of the session comes when he replays the performances on videotape, to a backdrop of comments, cheers and laughter from the audience.

"We had behavior problems with the children, disagreements we didn't know how to solve. It wasn't what we wanted family life to be," said Bonny E. after a recent session.

She, her husband and four sons, ages eight to 20, have participated in the sessions.

"The main thing now is that it's easier to be open with them, easier for them to be open with us. I think each other feels," she said.

"I LIKE IT," said her stepson John, 13, "because I can kind of understand how they feel when I do something to them. I kind of understand them more. I've felt a lot happier in the last two months."

He thought a bit and added: "My mother understands better."

Although the word "communication" has become overused, Dr. Broadbent feels it is a basic ingredient of happiness.

"How uncomfortable a child is depends on how he feels. How he feels relates to other people." And the kind of feelings a person has relates to how he communicates with other people, he says.

"Every parent would be better off if he knew how to communicate," said one clinic member recently.

"At least now we know how to sit down and listen; we've learned what not to do."

$7,200 Worth of Calculators Stolen

Calculators valued at $7,200 were taken from the Cannon Development Corporation at 1965 Long Beach Blvd. by burglars who forced a rear door to gain entry. Long Beach police reported Saturday.

$133 in Car Stolen

THERAPEUTIC ABORTIONS SOARING IN L.B. AREA

formed by a physician in a hospital — are future legal possibilities for therapeutic abortions in this state.

Underlying reasons for the mushrooming demands for abortions are a matter of conjecture, says a local obstetrician.

One solution, he feels, would be the eventual channeling of all operations to specially trained paramedic teams supervised by physicians in licensed hospitals.

"We need markedly increased facilities and more personnel," says this staff head.

"THE LAW CHANGED but there was no implementation — no providing for hiring personnel and increasing facilities," he adds.

Birth control pills, effective as they are, are not a total answer, he continues.

"Too often women get 'unwanted' pregnancies not by chance. They use pregnancy subconsciously for a motive — to save a marriage or get a husband. It never works... or, they lose their heads in an emotional situation," he says.

Education is the answer, he feels. This plus additional facilities to handle increasing demands are needed.

Gravely was recalled at the outbreak of Korea and promoted to lieutenant in 1955. Assignments have included radio officer, communications officer, operations officer and executive officer of the destroyer Chandler.

HIS SHIPS include the battleship Iowa and attack cargo ship Seminole. He won two Bronze Stars in the Korean War.

Capt. Gravely is also one of the military's top men in communications, having held various key posts between sea assignments.

"My job is being a Naval officer. If I could not live up to it, I would not be here today. People on the ship can be vitally affected by what I do. That is what I think about every day," Capt. Gravely said.

The Wall Street Journal put it this way on May 14, 1952:

"On the sea there is a tradition older even than the traditions of the country itself—it is tradition that with responsibility goes authority and with them both goes accountability."

"It is cruel, this accountability of good and well-intentioned men. But the choice is that or an end to responsibility and finally, as the cruel sea has taught, an end to the confidence and trust in the men who lead, for men will not long trust leaders who feel themselves beyond accountability for what they do."

Shaky Future for Beach Development

consulting firm of Larry Smith & Co., foresaw the possible doubling of Seal Beach's population by 1985.

The general plan called for high rise development along the riverfront, extension of the beach area and capitalization on the natural attractions of the adjacent Long Beach Marina and nearby Huntington Harbour.

No specific mention was made in the general plan of formation of a redevelopment agency. The need for a capital projects program was noted, however.

LEE WISNER became city manager in 1966 (he and City Attorney James Carnes were fired by the city council July 27).

Based on the general plan's projections and the desirability of exercising as much control as possible over the city development of the riverfront area, the council commissioned a redevelopment agency feasibility study, which was carried out by Design Associates.

Prime benefits to the city through establishment of a redevelopment agency, as seen by Wisner and the council, were (1) maximum governmental control of land development within the agency's boundaries; (2) the ability of the agency to retain all taxes, except those levied on the bare land, for use in financing capital improvement projects.

California's Health and Safety Code and the state's redevelopment law govern operation of such agencies. Initially intended to aid cities in slum clearance and redevelopment, the law has been held applicable to the situation in which Wisner found Seal Beach.

A growing city with relatively large parcels of vacant land that needed to be developed in a manner most beneficial to the city.

THUS, in 1969, the city council approved formation of the agency — its lifespan to be 45 years.

Councilmen at that time were Gummere, Fuhrman, John B. Hamilton, Stanley G. Anderson and Mrs. Veda M. Dreis.

A number of privately and governmentally owned parcels along the river, and the Pacific Electric right of way — a mile-long, 100-foot-wide strip of vacant land running down the center of Electric Avenue — comprise the redevelopment area.

Obstacles to the plan seemed few, indeed, until the 1970 election was over.

"When I started campaigning for the city council last January, hardly anyone I talked to had even heard of the redevelopment agency," said Mayor Baum, a staunch foe of many of the agency's objectives, and of the agency itself because of its tax retention powers.

Among the most pressing problems incurred by the agency was opposition by Baum and many other Seal Beach residents to the projected loss of funds needed by the Seal Beach Elementary and other school districts serving Seal Beach.

"The elementary school district wasn't even informed of the tax problem until after the agency was formed," Baum said. "Later on, however, the agency told the district it would pay $1.05 (later upped to $1.09) per $100 in assessed valuation for areas of the project in which children using the district's schools resided."

"THE ONLY trouble was that the valuation of the land was frozen in 1969 for 45 years, and the agency wouldn't pay taxes on structures within its area. That means the agency pays the district tax at a 1969 rate for vacant land."

About 50 children residing in the Suburbia housing tract currently go to district schools. (Suburbia is located on the South side of Pacific Coast Highway just as you enter Seal Beach from Long Beach.)

Additional complaints about the agency were that it would not pay taxes for other city services, that it was a wedge through which builders of high-density residential developments would enter the city and transform it from a "small town" into just another freeway exit amid the urban sprawl of metropolitan Los Angeles, and that the sewage treatment plant, if really needed, could be financed by means other than the redevelopment project.

TAXING agencies which stand to lose by agency-style development of the project area include the city, elementary school district, Orange Coast Junior College District, Huntington Beach High School District, Orange County School District and the county's Sanitation District No. 4.

Landholders of project area property include the city, the Los Angeles Department of Water and Power, Dow Chemical Co., Apollo Development Co., Humble Oil & Refining Co., Gladia Corp., Atlantic-Richfield Co., Edward H. Heller and the Southern California Edison Co.

APPROVAL of construction of apartments has been sought for at least a section of the Pacific Electric right-of-way, along which no building height limit is set by the redevelopment plan.

The agency has the power to issue bonds, but only after entailing a certain amount of debt.

So far, the agency has spent $114,137.21 loaned by the city for capital projects, and an additional $43,405.65 for salaries, which are figured into the city's budget because it utilizes city administrative services.

Of the capital improvement funds, $110,849.02 went toward construction of the Marina Community Center, which was dedicated in December, 1969; $2,818.75 went for appraisal and legal fees concerning a 2.39-acre plot of Department of Water and Power land; $428.86 went for Electric Avenue improvements, and $40.58 went for sewer work on Ocean Avenue, according to Seal Beach Finance Director Dennis Thomas. Baum says he's trying to keep the city's development along already existing lines, and he wants the money-starved taxing share from boosted revenues already serving Seal Beach, to get their city grows.

REALTOR OF THE WEEK

Right-Priced Property is Selling ...

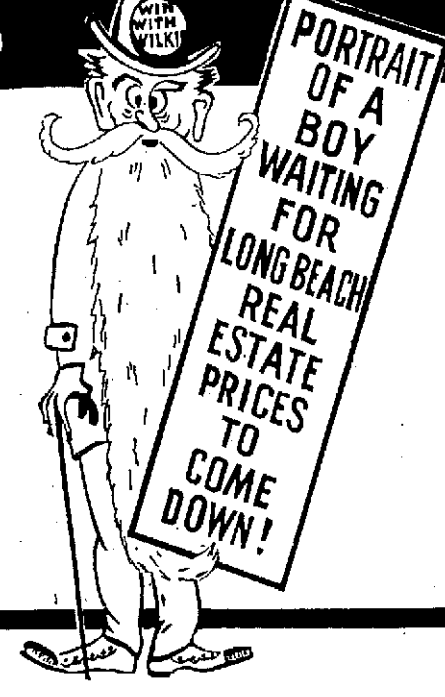

SEE A REALTOR

He'll Save You Trouble!
Selling or buying a home can be a complicated business... and sometimes business and friendship don't mix! Don't risk losing a friend! Sell your home — or buy a new one — through a Realtor. He's a professional who'll smooth over all the details.

He'll Save You Headaches!
Can you imagine taking time off to sell or buy a home the "do-it-yourself" way? That's where the headaches come in. A Realtor is the specialist with training and professionalism regardless of your needs.

He'll Save You Steps!
A Realtor will save your valuable time and use up his own "shoe leather" to locate the kind of home you need for your family... and at the price you want to pay.

Homes Are Not Getting Cheaper
Because of the steady influx of people into the Long Beach area homes are in great demand. Rising material and labor costs indicate that homes will not get any cheaper. All this means that now is the time to buy — you'll not buy a ny cheaper in the foreseeable future. Your Realtor is the one person who knows your needs, and is the one who will go "all out" to help you with your Real Estate transaction.

America's Youth Tell How It Is

Outspoken anthropologist Margaret Mead and a cast of thousands — most of them young people "doing their thing" in New York City's Central Park — are featured on "Anatomy of Youth," to be telecast on the ABC News "Now" series at 10:30 p.m., Monday on Channel 7.

The purpose of the program, says writer-producer-director Arthur Alpert, is "to help explain American youth to older Americans so that the generations can talk to each other more easily."

"The point is not that they are good kids or bad kids, but rather that they are a new breed of young people. And even if they sometimes judge their elders a bit harshly, they do know what we value, what we think and say and do. On the other hand, the older generation frequently doesn't know much about the young and why they act the way they do."

"Anatomy of Youth" was filmed this summer over several Sundays when Central Park was filled with young people

President's Comment Opened Pandora's Box

MANSON 'GUILTY'?

Who'll Censor the President?

By JACK GOULD
New York Times Service

NEW YORK — President Nixon's extemporaneous declaration that Charles Manson, the West Coast cultist, was guilty of murdering eight persons almost predictably has had a television aftermath. The question has been asked whether the President's prejudgment of an accused person on trial could not be minimized by censoring its TV tape recording of the event.

The price of such a procedure would be undeniably high and unworkable as well. It was the White House that set the ground rules for the news conference at which the President made his incredible slip. News of the affair was sent out on the press association wires in a matter of seconds and carried on radio stations across the country before Ronald L. Ziegler, the White House press secretary, could issue a clarification that succeeded only in further magnifying and confusing the incident.

ADMITTEDLY, seeing Nixon make his error carried far more impact than just hearing his voice or reading his words. But in today's world the TV tapes could not be delayed for precautionary review by the White House without imposing the same conditions on reporters for newspapers and radio.

Reporters at the news conference were not allowed to ask questions and

Video Raked With Black Criticisms

(Editor's Note: The following analysis of the Black experience, as it applies to television in the 70s, was written for "Print: 70," a publication assembled by students in a newsman's training program at Columbia University's Graduate School of Journalism in New York City. Lurma Rackley was a member of that program.)

By LURMA RACKLEY

Six eminent Black people — actress, writer, producer, newsman, film maker, playwright — expressed dismay and disgust this week with the American television industry.

"Until we reach the point where a Black point of view is involved in basic decision-making at the very top — and until this presence is felt from the top down, rather than merely from the bottom up — the Black man will not reach the point where he has the impact or makes the contribution he is capable of making to broadcasting in this country," said playwright William Branch.

RUBY DEE
"TV Avoids Truth"

OTHERS interviewed separately on the relationship of minority group members to electronic media were actress Ruby Dee, newscaster Gil Noble, producer Tony Brown, film-maker William Grievens and author John O. Killens.

Miss Dee, now starring off-Broadway in "Boesman and Lena" at Circle in the Square Theater, said she believes movie producers

Alienation Gets Focus of Special

"In The Company Of Strangers," an hour-long special documentary about alienated Americans, will be shown at 7:30 p.m., Tuesday, on Channel 4.

On-camera host is actor E. G. Marshall, star of NBC's "The Bold Ones," who — with producer-director Charles Hill and the KNBC documentary team — travels to Isla Vista, Topanga Canyon, East Los Angeles and Central Los Angeles to examine the feelings of a wide cross-section of today's society to seek out the answers to the problems that are plaguing America.

At MacArthur Park in Central Los Angeles, the heart of the senior citizens' community, elderly persons ponder about their lonely existence in a world that is youth-oriented. Marshall talks with Dr. Arthur Schwartz, a psychologist familiar with some of the problems bothering senior citizens.

Marshall asks what's wrong, what isn't working for us. In East Los Angeles the question is posed: Why do Chicanos feel separated from mainstream America?

COLLEGE QB'S TOP GRID STARS OF '70

"College Football 1970 — The Year of the Quarterback," a special on the great quarterbacks who will be playing college football this season, will be presented in color at 10 p.m., Thursday, on Channel 7.

This one-hour color special will feature clips and interviews with some of the outstanding quarterbacks who will be returning this season, among them Archie Manning of Mississippi, Jim Plunkett of Stanford, Rex Kern of Ohio State and Joe Theismann of Notre Dame.

The 1970 collegiate season promises to produce the greatest crop of quarterbacks in the history of college football. And from this group should come the Heisman Trophy winner.

Chuck Hixson of SMU, Scott Hunter of Alabama, Lynn Dickey of Kansas State, and Pat Sullivan are just a few of the other great quarterbacks who return in 1970.

Venice Film Festival Turns to TV

VENICE — The Venice Film Festival, granddaddy of them all, is trying to pump new blood into its veins this year with the help of television.

The 31-year-old festival, which began on Wednesday, abolished prizes last year after left-wingers charged they were manifestations of crass commercialism. But the absence of competition dimmed much of the glamor generated by the Golden Lion awards, and few stars showed up on the sands of the Lido.

The idea was to put the spotlight on the young movie industries in Africa, Asia and Latin America and on independent talent in Europe and America. But of last year's films, only the veteran Federico Fellini's "Satyricon" attained box office or critical success.

FEW IF ANY critics expect more this year. But Ernesto G. Laura, in his second year as head of the 10-day festival, hopes television will come to the rescue. He has invited two of Italy's top directors, Fellini and Roberto Rossellini, to show films they made for television.

Italian directors and actors are increasingly switching to television. Both Anna Magnani and Marcello Mastroianni are under contract to RAI, the state TV company. Fellini spent five months roaming through Europe filming circuses for "The Clowns," while Rossellini travelled to Spain for his two-hour TV version of "Socrates."

Both films opened the festival "outside of the competition" — although the competition no longer exists.

Laura told a news conference last month that "the prizes at the Venice Festival are that the films are selected to be shown here." Eighteen films, two from U.S. companies, share that honor.

Barbara Lodan's "Wanda" and "Deep End," an American-German coproduction by Jerzy Skolimowski, are the U.S. representatives.

There will be three from Latin America: Glauber Rocha's "The Lion Has Seven Heads" and Miguel Faria's "Mortal Sin," both Brazilian, and "Mr. President" by Marcos Madanes of Argentina.

Communist East Europe is to be represented by five films, and Soviet Cul-

Daytime Television-- It'll Drive You Nuts

EDITOR'S NOTE — Perhaps there are worse punishments that can befall a man, but watching daytime television surely must be high on a list of masochistic adventures. TV while the sun shines, it seems, is a woman's world.

By JERRY BUCK
AP TV-Radio Writer

NEW YORK — When I was home ill recently I did what nearly everyone else would do. I watched daytime television.

I watched the "Today" show from beginning to end for the first time in years, looked in on "Captain Kangaroo" and sat through all of "Love of Life," which is more than I was able to do for any of the game shows.

In the late afternoon Robin, my 4-year-old daughter, joined me for "Sesame Street" and a visit to "Misterogers Neighborhood," two of the most delightful shows on the air.

SEVERAL DAYS of viewing confirmed two beliefs I held about daytime television. One is that outside of a few programs for children, it's strictly a female preserve.

The other is that it's not meant for marathon viewing. Most housewives, I am told, turn it on and catch a glimpse of it as they are in and out of the room, stopping only long enough to view a segment on a game show or to sit down for a soap opera that interests them.

NBC's "Today" show is one of the oldest and most familiar shows on television and is as much a part of the morning scene as cornflakes. Low-keyed host Hugh Downs, a leisurely pace and frequent newscasts strike the right chord in the morning.

If you want just the facts, the "CBS Morning News" repeats the news often, yet gets in enough in-depth pieces to keep it from being a headline service. A big plus is the frequent announcement of the time.

For 14 years, "Captain Kangaroo" has stood out among the bleak shows for young children during the day. Its meager budget shows around the edges, but imagination and the personality of the avuncular captain keeps the show well above water.

THE ONLY jarring note in this program comes when Captain Kangaroo suddenly turns buckster for vitamins or toys. The "Today" show has this same failing of using the host to plug the products.

The networks have large staffs who spend a lot of time worrying about housewives — that is, how to catch their attention. The numbers game is played as vigorously in the daylight as it is after supper, and because of the low budgets the profits are higher.

CBS, which has the upper hand in the ratings, follows an agonizing road to success. It plays one soap opera after another.

NBC seems to have as many game shows as CBS has suders.

A new wrinkle in the game shows is that the contestants are now celebrities. On "It Takes Two," three celebrities and their wives had to guess the odds against a royal flush (649,000-to-1) and the height of an average door (80 inches).

SOME LUCKY housewife is still selected from the audience for the prize, but now all she has to do is guess which celebrity contestant is closest to the correct answer.

Incidentally, the hosts are still as unctuous as ever. Things don't change that much!

A man tunes in the soap operas at his own risk. It's like walking into a ladies' coffee klatch. The soap stories go on interminably, getting more complex by the day, and if you don't have a synopsis and a genealogy report, you're sunk.

I am convinced after watching a few hours that the most essential element in a soap opera — besides lot of agonizing conversation — is the organ. Can you imagine what a soap opera would be like with a guitar? Or a saxophone?

THE ORGAN clues every mood of the story. If the telephone rings, the organ tells you before it's answered that it means bad news. When a visitor drops by to spill secrets in the kitchen, if the hangdog look on her face doesn't tell you she's bringing trouble, the heavy chords of the organ will.

CBS' "Search for Tomorrow" was the busiest sudsor I saw. In just 30 minutes they worked in a major crisis, an ominous telephone call, lots of worried expressions and clipped conversations, a hospital singing and playing guitars, chasing Frisbees, flirting, splashing in fountains, picnicking, smoking pot (and talking about it), listening to rock concerts and riding bicycles, to mention a few of the less esoteric diversions.

Central Park on Sunday, says Dr. Mead, is a "festival," a dramatization of what young people all over the country and the world are thinking and feeling.

Dr. Mead, author of the recently published "Culture and Commitment," a study of the generation gap, is, at 69, one of the most perceptive and controversial observers of the way we live. She traces the generation gap to 1945. Children born after World War II, she feels, are pioneers in a new world shaped by the bomb, television, space exploration and constant, rapid technological change.

"Now," she says, "we're in a society where we have to learn from the children."

In "Anatomy of Youth," Dr. Mead appraises the scene in the park and interprets youthful behavior. She discusses their games, their "costume" clothes, their hair styles, the way they socialize, their approach to drugs, to race, to war.

Speaking to adult viewers, Dr. Mead says, "You have the tendency to believe the world is still something like the world you grew up in and you're kidding yourselves. You have to give up remembering your own youth and thinking that will explain the kids — because it won't."

Instead, she advises, older people should listen. Post-1945 youth will listen "because they're fair."

On Medical Center for weeks ago (July 15), I heard a song performed by Les Brown Jr., and his group. What was the title of it? Is it available on record? Also, could you give me some information on Chad Everett and tell me how to get a picture of him?

"We're sending your inquiry about the song on Medical Center to CBS for an answer, Christine, along with your picture request. Chad Everett is a TV

He also worked as a clothier's model in New York, then gained TV exposure in two series, Bronco and The Dakotas. Married to actress Shelby Grant, Everett worked in such films as "Made in Paris" and "The Singing Nuns." By the way, Chad Everett

FCC STUDY FOCUSES ON REAL ISSUES

Cable TV: The Real Competition Is for TV Networks

By CHRISTOPHER LYDON
New York Times Service

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The Federal Communications Commission's first general forecast of cable television's growth suggests that the broadcasting industry's fear of destructive competition has been focused on the wrong areas and also greatly exaggerated.

The F.C.C. staff study projects the economic rivalry between the two television modes: broadcasting, which transmits its signals over the air; and cable, an alternate delivery system that can carry local broadcast channels and many additional signals through a coaxial cable. From 72 pages of charts, statistics and analysis, these general conclusions emerge:

— Much of cable television's impact will fall on segments of the broadcast industry — including the networks and the VHF stations on channels 2 through 13 — that are now making large profits and can well afford the challenge.

— Many of the currently struggling UHF stations on the sliding dial between channels 14 and 83 will be helped significantly by being carried on cable systems. Where damage is done to UHF stations, it will generally be less than that inflicted on VHF stations.

— Where cable television imposes severe burdens on local broadcasters, the impact can be precisely measured and compensatory arrangements easily made.

The findings will require some shift in tactics and emphasis among the broadcasting spokesmen who have fought cable television, or CATV, as a special threat to marginally profitable stations, and particularly in smaller markets.

Responding to the cable industry's promise of channel diversity, broadcasters have argued that UHF stations, which the F.C.C. and Congress promoted to satisfy the demand for diversity, would suffer first in any expansion of cable.

UHF stations are handicapped by the need for a special tuner on the sets that receive them, and by typically inferior picture quality. Except for those that have network affiliations, few UHF stations make money. Non-affiliated UHF's, it has been argued, would suffer immediately if competitive independent programming were imported from out of town on CATV.

The new F.C.C. study draws a contrary conclusion. Cable television would deliver UHF, with new picture sharpness, on a notched tuner dial. In cities where UHF stations carry network programming, CATV would eliminate their handicaps against VHF competitors and increase their audience share as much as 50 per cent, the study said.

IN CITIES where the network affiliates are all VHF's and the UHF's run independent sports and movie programming, the UHF audience would be diminished as cable widened the range of channel choices, but UHF would not suffer significantly more than the local network stations.

The more serious impact of cable competition falls on the relatively prosperous VHF stations — particularly the non-network or independent VHF's and the network-affiliated VHF's whose local network competition is UHF. VHF stations in those categories could have their audiences cut up to 25 per cent if cable television was sold to half the homes in the local area, the study estimated.

EMINENT BLACKS ANALYZE TELEVISION---AND FIND IT WANTING

and directors are trying to approach the realities of life, but, "In television, the truth about life and people's cultures has been avoided."

She said, "The emphasis for television is making the consumer spend more money. TV has to sell soap and cereal and deodorant. They have avoided the one most important product the country has to develop — human beings."

Miss Dee, speaking softly and deliberately, said television should show how the pursuit of "things" will destroy people:

"Television should show that the most important things cannot be bought with a dollar. They should show that people should have food, even if they can't buy it."

"But how can you expect a medium to cut its own throat?"

Killens, author of "Black Man's Burden" and "Youngblood," agrees that television is well behind reality, especially in its treatment of Black people.

"Television portrays Black people as 'white men in Black skins,'" he said.

"I'm saying that Black people have an existence, a life's experience and a life style all their own in this segregated society. We did not segregate this society. The whites did."

"We have an identity all our own. We have a peoplehood that shouts out for reflection and dramatization. As I have said before, our struggle is not to be white men in Black skins, but to be our own Black selves," he said.

KILLENS, WHO teaches Black culture at Columbia University, explained that the only way to reflect the Black experience in television is to produce some stories and programs that speak "of the Black family, its trials and tribulations, its triumphs and defeats."

"This means, first of all, Black writers," he declared. "But it also means Black producers, Black directors, Black cameramen, Black grips, Black set designers, all along the line. In a word, Black conceptualization."

Killens said he did not imagine "that kind of Black television exposure will come to pass till we achieve some Black control."

Television newscaster Gil Noble of WABC voiced pessimism about the existing medium and its dealings with Black people.

"Black people are not very effective in 'white media.' They should begin doing their own thing," he said.

Noble said Black people are not fairly represented in television because shows are produced by whites. He said Black people do not have enough money to establish the kinds of media they need.

Noble said as long as he is working within the already established media, he would first be "a servant of my people."

"I think Blacks working in the media should further the struggle. They should try to angle the news in favor of Black people in order to equalize the damage that has been done."

"But after they get the skills, they should try to split and establish a totally Black thing. I have a film company in mind and I want to send films overseas so we can internationalize the struggle," he said.

BROWN, AN executive producer of the National Educational Television Network's Black Journal, plans to produce films which will internationalize the struggle of Black people.

Brown, like Killens and Noble, says that Black people should produce their own shows.

"Every Black person in media should work for Black people. If white people can benefit by the things done for Blacks, good, but that is not the primary concern," he said.

"Black Journal is planning to establish a permanent bureau in Addis Ababa, Ethiopia. The purpose is to produce films about the African continent that will be of a positive nature."

Brown said, "We as Africans in America need to see the positive side of Africa — so that we can develop a much needed psychological identity with Africa to develop our roots of identification. All our reporting will be of a positive nature."

"The 'white press' goes to Africa and seeks out sensationalism, and they get pictures of Africa as a Tarzan and Jane land and a constant bed of revolution. This picture we hope to correct."

Brown said there is a need for "permanent dialogue between Africans in Africa and Africans in America because of our mutual ties and our political needs."

Brown, speaking to the National Association of Broadcasters in Chicago in April, said, "Your television programs which portray nurses who saunter around in Dior originals, living in highrise integrated apartment buildings, and the successful 'Negro' syndrome are as disastrous as the absence of Black faces in believable situations which are meaningful to the Black community."

Brown said civil disorders can be attributed in part to the "rage" Black people feel after watching television.

He said, "This rage that brews within the hearts of Black people when they watch television is the rage that sent thousands of Black people into the streets during many long hot summers ... this rage stems from the constant bombardment of no Black situations on the one hand and artificial situations on the other."

ANOTHER BLACK man who does not think television gives Black people fair representation is William Grievess, who recently resigned his job as executive producer of Black Journal. He indicated he resigned to devote full time to his own productions.

He said, "When I first became interested in film production, I had begun to become increasingly aware of the amount of brain damage done on me by the mass media because it was a very racist image that was constantly being thrown off."

Grievess said he first became interested in producing in the late 1940's when he was an actor in New York.

He continued, "All I saw around me were white faces on the television screen and the motion picture screens and magazines and so on. I began to realize that this whole thing was really brutalizing me."

"Then of course when I left this country, I became increasingly aware of the degree to which the Black community is being brutalized in not getting adequate images of itself, that there is very little nourishment of the psychic life, mental health and so on of the Black community from the standpoint of the mass media in this country."

Grievess and writer William Branch produced a film two years ago, "Still a Brother." The film was originally broadcast over National Educational Television.

Branch, like Grievess, has tried for a long time to make television more meaningful to Blacks.

Branch said he came up with an idea for a television show on the Black middle class. He took it to several networks who showed mild interest but were not willing to allow him to either produce it independently or join their staffs to produce it.

He said, "So for three years I tried to interest various production agencies in doing a show on the

TV MOVIE TIPS

SUNDAY — "The Night of the Generals" (9 p.m., Channel 7) isn't much of a whodunit since everyone knows from the outset who is responsible for the murder of the Warsaw prostitute. Still, if you care for Peter O'Toole and Omar Sharif — and some people do — these might keep you up until midnight. If you plan to stay up that late, why not try "The Life and Death of Rudolph Valentino" (10:30 p.m., Channel 11) which has much more excitement plus the ring of truth.

MONDAY — If you'd like a glimpse of Dean Martin before he sought out the soft-out title (and before he became political enough to pledge his heart, mind and soul to Ronald Reagan), check "Scared Stiff" (8:30 p.m., Channel 7) in which Martin and ex-buddy Jerry Lewis cavort. It's a lousy comedy but most of Martin's comedy efforts have been short on laughs. Less likely to put you to sleep is

"What's So Bad About Feeling Good?" (9 p.m., Channel 4), a transparent spoof about both Hippies and Establishment forces.

TUESDAY — If there's an expert on the art of comedy about today, it's Danny Kaye. He's not as good as he has been at times in "Me and the Colonel" (7:30 p.m., Channel 2) but still plenty funny. Curt Jurgens co-stars in World War II spoof of Jew fleeing Nazis and while the subject matter may not seem particularly funny, Danny gets excellent mileage from it. At 9 p.m., you can dig The Beatles in their 1965 hit "Help" (9 p.m., Channel 4) and if senior citizens haven't seen it, they should. It's an excellent primer on where the kids have gone.

WEDNESDAY — Over-sentimentalized, "The Story of Will Rogers" (7:30 p.m., Channel 9) still carries an immense message of an America that knew it needed help. Will Rogers Jr. stars as his dad. Later tonight — after the Smothers Brothers show — you can watch Somerset Maugham's "Trio" (11:30 p.m., Channel 13) for an exciting job of adapting three of that master's works to film.

THURSDAY — Friedrich Duerenmatt's "The Visit" (9 p.m., Channel 2) gets the treatment from Ingrid Bergman and Anthony Quinn, which may not be exactly what Duerenmatt had in mind. Still, Bergman and Quinn can do what they must and in this case it is a rather successful essay. Tonight also has the distinction of being the first time in a couple of weeks for "Track of the Cat" (10 p.m., Channel 9) which, at last count, had been seen 3,875 times on TV. Don't those films ever wear out?

FRIDAY — You might call this National Lousy Movie Night if you were sure the same movies we'll be offered are being seen all over. There's the "McConnell Story" (7:30 p.m., Channel 9) about America's first triple jet ace and featuring a plot about as thick as a Flintstones episode. Then there's "Hotel Paradiso" (9 p.m., Channel 2) with a story about an unfaithful wife (you may have seen something similar elsewhere). It does have Gina Lollobrigida, which makes it less hard to take. And there's a couple of science fiction things which make the other two movies look like award winners. One is "When Worlds Collide" (9 p.m., Channel 7) and the other is "Satellite in the Sky" (11 p.m., Channel 9). Take your pick. Or take your wife to a movie.

BLACKS HIT VIDEO

Black middle class. Eventually I sold the idea to NET and brought in Grievess as my co-producer, and we produced a film — a 90-minute documentary special."

"Still a Brother" stated that although there is a class of affluent Blacks, many in the Black bourgeoisie are still brothers, Noble said.

COMMUNICATING this kind of statement is important, Branch said. He said, "Perhaps the biggest need in broadcasting today, at least of Black people, is to be involved in policy making and administration."

Branch said, "There are hardly any Blacks in this area whatsoever, and until this happens, until Blacks are involved in the corporate structure of stations, networks and what have you, advertising as well, you cannot realistically expect that the Black presence in television is going to be felt to its fullest."

Some Black people express optimism and say that they hope to make the existing media more relevant to Blacks. Others say that separation is the only answer. Miss Dee said that both ways should be pursued.

"I think there is room for both. Some of us should work within the existing media to make it fairer, more inclusive. Some of us should do other things. There is room for more than one approach," she said.

But as for television today, she said, "I guess there are some producers trying to bring some truth in, but it comes in weakly. Only until there are Black and white people dedicated to improving reality, only then will television catch up to what's really going on."

"We are in a time where we Black people are interested in seeing our lives reflected on the screen, as we relate to each other, not as we relate to white people."

Editor:

Hi! Would you believe we're going into our third season on CBS-TV? Neither would I, except that it's true . . .

Anyway, this is just to say thanks for all the generous help you've given us over the past two years. A show doesn't mean a thing if there's no one there to see it—and it's been your logs and photos and captions and stories and columns that have let people know where we are and what we've been doing . . . Again, our thanks—and love.

Doris Day,
Beverly Hills

Thanks for the note, Doris. In answer to your opening question, some one up here did remark on the incredibility of your show's renewal. Right now, we're wondering if perhaps your letter wasn't intended for another newspaper. We assume your show was listed in the logs, but we don't recall any photos or captions or stories or columns dealing with it. Then again, that may be why you're thanking us.

Editor:

Has "It Takes a Thief" been picked up for next season? If so, will it be new shows or re-runs?

F. N.,
Garden Grove

Sorry, F.N., we can't supply the answer, but your query will be forwarded to the show's network for response.

Editor:

"Violin Virtuosi" Henry Roth Producer Commentator Radio KPFK-FM 90.7 Tuesday Aug. 25 1 p.m.

Repeat Thursday Aug. 27, 8 p.m.

Unsigned,
Long Beach

Geez, we wish you'd signed that. It isn't deathless prose, but we can't find fault with the way you got to the point. If you're ever in Long Beach, whoever you are, stop in and inquire about writing editorials.

Editor:

How and when will it be possible to see again Mrs. Jackie Kennedy's White House Show? It was so well done, giving historical excerpts and donors of restored pieces, I should very much like to see it again, in color.

Mrs. C. Falconer,
Long Beach

Just as a rough guess Mrs. Falconer, I wouldn't look for it to repeat before 1972.

Editor:

Regarding the inquiry of Irene Baer in your column of Aug. 16, if she will call the phonograph record section of the Main Library we can give her all the selections that were used at the funeral of John F. Kennedy. We obtained this information by writing to the White House immediately following the services.

Helen Kennedy, Head
Phonograph Record Section

On behalf of Mrs. Baer, many thanks to you, Mrs. Kennedy.

Editor:

I am interested in learning just how many young men are going to take over the role of Dr. Peter Chernak on "Love Is a Many Splendored Thing"? The first one was great, the second was quite acceptable, but this current fellow leaves a lot to be desired.

Barbara Shepard,
Lakewood

Somebody dropped our crystal ball, Mrs. Shepard, so your inquiry goes to the network for a response instead.

Germans Crazy About TV's Ads

By CHARLES RIDLEY

FRANKFURT, Germany (UPI) — What does a foreigner do when he finds the local television mostly dull and unimaginative? Switch over to a new channel? That works in the United States but not so well in Europe.

For example, West German television carries a great amount of deadly earnest political discussion and coverage of straight-faced political figures of all factions. Very heavy going but the West Germans, for whom it is intended and who pay for it with TV license fees, like it that way.

So the foreigner yawns and yearns for a good satire or other light program.

BUT PATIENCE often pays off, if the foreign viewer is not too selective. For the backbone of the peak viewing hours usually consists of old American films and TV series. Currently the Doris Day Show, the western saga "Big Valley," "Flipper" and "77 Sunset Strip" are spicing the TV diet.

About 10 per cent of TV programming is of American origin and TV officials say 30 million viewers watch the Thursday night film and 15 million the Saturday night movies.

There is no U.S.-type commercial television in Germany, though a move has begun to start a commercial station in the Saar region, to be directly mainly by newspaper publishing interests.

There is no interruption of programs for commercial spots and no advertising at all on Sundays.

Existing commercials are screened in between programs for a total of 20 minutes in the hours between 6 p.m. and 8 p.m. These are arranged in short and tasteful "spots", each followed by a two-or-three second cartoon which makes jocular comment on the preceding ad.

PRESENTED in this form the commercials are actually enjoyed by German watchers. "They're crazy about commercials," one German network official said. He said a survey showed that two-thirds of the 10 million set owners reported they enjoyed them.

Under postwar rules governing the corporations, which run West German Television, there is no government control over the networks.

Government policies come under attack freely by opposition politicians and commentators. Sometimes documentaries, in particular those dealing with eastern Europe, seem to convey German viewpoints which clash with Chancellor Willy Brandt's campaign for reconciliation with the East.

NEWS broadcasts and commentaries in the main are well presented. But the non-German watcher detects a tendency to make all things in Germany look good while playing up riots, political upsets and other bad news in other lands, especially the United States.

After the shooting of four American student rioters in Kent, Ohio, one German commentator came out with a heavy diatribe about violence in American society. When a policeman shot and wounded three persons in a West Berlin leftist riot the following weekend, the event was glossed over.

THE FIRST German network, ARD, operates from 4:40 p.m. to midnight (10 a.m.-midnight on weekend) and its time is shared by nine regional stations.

The second German network, ZDF, is a strictly national network which competes with ARD and operates roughly the same hours. ZDF is regarded mainly as an entertainment station and ARD as the more weighty.

The third is a linkup of regional stations operating as a network from about 7 p.m. to around 10 p.m. It specializes in excellent documentaries, educational films and classic or arty movies from various lands. It carries no commercials.

The financing of West German television comes entirely from the monthly license fees paid by 10 million set owners plus revenue from the hard-to-get commercial spots. The monthly license fee is 8.50 deutschmarks (just over $2.32) and includes the cost of a radio license. The fee is the same for color television. There are currently about 800,000 color sets in Germany.

DAYTIME TELEVISION—GOOD REASON FOR GUY TO STAY WELL

scene, a histrionic courtroom confrontation and one woman spent nearly 10 minutes talking about fixing fillet of sole — "fillet of sole, not ordinary flounder" — as a treat for her son. When he came in he said he was too worked up for fillet of sole and he ended up with a peanut butter sandwich and glass of milk.

Somewhere between "Where the Heart Is" and "Search for Tomorrow" I picked up a magazine and started reading.

'Today' Will Salute Women's Rights

An all-woman cast will anchor "Today" on the NBC Television Network at 7 a.m., Wednesday, on Channel 4 in a program marking the 50th anniversary of the adoption of the 19th Amendment — women's right to vote.

The cast will comprise all five NBC News women correspondents: "Today" regular Barbara Walters, Pauline Frederick, Aline Saarinen and Liz Trotta will conduct interviews and report the news from New York, and Nancy Dickerson will present a segment from Washington.

The program will document advances made by women in the past 50 years, but will also include the viewpoint of those who feel much more should be gained.

There's much more on daytime television:

—The old movies, even the bad ones, are fun to watch because you can sit around and try to pick out the bit players who became stars.

—The five-minute newscasts on CBS and NBC are a welcome oasis.

—Mike Douglas leaves the competition behind on the syndicated talk shows.

David Frost, another first-rate show, is seen here at night.

Daytime television isn't something the male would want to experience every day. But it can be a pleasant way to pass the time when you have to stay home. Time, after all, is all that it demands from you.

WELLS REPORT

Professors Are People, Too

He takes off his horn rims, leans back in his chair, looks at me and grins quizzically. He is a professor and he has a professor's manner, a wry self-depreciation and friendly tolerance born of long years of fitting together evidence and qualifying judgments.

"Being a college professor in America today," he says, "is something like being a Jew in Germany immediately prior to Hitler's takeover."

And then he smiles again to indicate he knows I may think he is overstating the case. I do.

"I fail to see the parallel," I say.

"Scapegoats. A vexed and troubled people who see their old assumptions and values breaking down — particularly the assumption that they are the most civilized, most prosperous and most powerful nation in the world. Political street brawling. The young in revolt against the old. Morality breaking down.

"It has to be somebody's fault. You don't think the average citizen is going to shoulder the blame, do you? He has to blame someone else. In Germany it was the Jews. In America it's college professors."

He picks up a sheaf of clippings from his cluttered desk top.

"Here's a quote from what on the whole is a moderate and balanced commentary on campus unrest." He reads:

"... An essential need for the universities is to return, visibly and demonstrably, to those standards of style and content which they have traditionally exemplified; to a sense of moderation and responsibility, of balance and tolerance." He looks up.

"I have been on a university campus almost every day of my life for the past 25 years, and I do not think on the whole we have departed radically from those 'standards of style and content' whatever they may be. There has not been, for example, as radical a change in the style or behavior of the typical college professor as there has been in the vice presidency — another venerable American institution."

He picks up another clipping. "This is an editorial from the June issue of Fortune Magazine: 'The academic community, organized around value-free science, has been ill-prepared — and left the nation ill-prepared — for a present or future politics turning largely upon the intricacies of how moral values apply to practical policies.'"

He grimaces his distaste. "That is a totally phony charge. The academic community since the time of the first atomic explosion has been insisting that America must face up to the moral consequences of its actions in the world. Sometimes, it has seemed, we have been almost alone in urging that moral values as well as enlightened self-interest be considered in the formation of public policies."

Another clipping. "This is from a letter to the editor: ... Many of these educators have proved themselves totally incompetent to manage their own communities. ... The system belongs to the people of California, not just to the faculty or the students. And the people of California could hardly run it more badly than the educators are running it today."

His eyes twinkle: "Fortunately, the letter writer offers a basis for comparison. How does the administration of our colleges compare with the government of our cities, states and nation? We have heard a lot about violence on campus. Actually, there is much less violence on campus than in our city streets. A college campus, for instance, is the only place I know where a woman can still walk at night unescorted with little fear for her safety.

"College administrators are being denounced because a bank was burned near Santa Barbara. But the bank was not on campus. Why isn't the public denouncing the Isla Vista police and city councilmen who, after all, are the officials charged with keeping the peace?"

"The City of Chicago has been the scene of continuing riots since 1968. None of these have been on campus, but city officials have been unable to stop disruption. The governor, the Berkeley City Council, the city police, the Highway Patrol and the National Guard have been no more successful than UC administrators in keeping the peace in Berkeley. If anything, they have been less successful.

"I know of no college administration that has been corrupted by the Mafia. I know of no college researchers with government contracts who claim and collect overrides such as appear to be common among industrial defense contractors.

"Faculty members are taxpayers, too, but they do not receive depletion allowances or most of the deductions considered ordinary and necessary to a business. They haven't even complained too much about helping to subsidize the oil depletion allowance and other deductions by not getting the 5 per cent cost of living increase given other state employees."

He twinkled. "After all, we're extremely grateful we're not yet required to wear a Star of David or academic robes off campus to warn everyone we're coming." □

Pet Set Goes Jet Set

By Bonita Lynch

A silky blond Afghan jogs eagerly into the hotel lobby, his human companion dutifully bringing up the rear with doggy baggage, bedding and assorted squeaky toys. They pause at the desk to confirm his reservation (Room 404) and to register. Yes, Barzaine has arrived early enough for afternoon cookies, and dinner's at 6. The Afghan pads happily into his air-purified patio-apartment, all set for a weekend of de luxe service, barely casting a backward glance toward his wisful owner.

In another section of the hostelry, secluded behind sliding glass doors, a domestic gray and white cat of part Abyssinian lineage stretches luxuriantly on a carpeted stair of his split-level climbing pole, allowing his paws to dangle in feline rapture. Surrounding him in his wall-to-wall carpeted 6-foot-high apartment are his catnip scratching post, sandbox and private enclosed "bedroom." The alley was never like this.

Sound like Shangri-la, per style? Well, almost.

At George Barnes' Van Nuys Pet Hotel, prototype for a whole chain of barkin' Hiltons which will be opening beginning this year, they're reversing the usual concepts of guest relations. Here's one luxury hotel that affords your pet the red carpet treatment, but won't give you a room!

"We cater to four-legged humans," says designer-owner Barnes, with a smile. While you're away on vacation, you can console yourself that your cat or dog is living it up, too, at rates which begin at $2.25 a day for a patio-apartment and range up to $20 a day for a penthouse with private valet, yet.

"Anyway," claims Barnes in all seriousness, "much as he loves you, your pet needs a luxury vacation without you."

While you're still shook up over that idea, the 38-year-old ex-sailor, ex-Arthur Murrayite and former owner of a Montana youth ranch states his little guests seem to concur.

After all, wasn't there this German shepherd and his three-legged mixed terrier brother who, after spending Christmas week at George's original hotel in West Hollywood, tried leaping a fence and then, failing that, proceeded to dig holes underneath the fence, attempting to get back to all that luxury? And who could blame them?

One glance at the hotel's brochure tells you why. Services offered guests include:

"Playtime, cookie time, daily brushing, music piped in, pet store, purified water, senior pets' home, your own bed from home, pet valets to serve you, private apartments and patios (never caged overnight), disinfected fresh air, temperature control, flea and tick proof" . . . not to mention a pet boutique where owner and dog can be fitted either for a matching ski sweater set or matching pairs of bell-bottomed pantsuits. On the premises is a beauty salon where your pooch can be "rejuvenated," slimmered down or given hot oil treatments.

If this seems like a giant put-on, nothing could be further from the truth. Small, thin, intensely dedicated George Barnes firmly believes in what he is doing. He runs a hand through his mod-cut blond hair and says with some feeling: "I hate that word kennel . . . it too often means sloppy, careless and a sick animal when you pick him up. We do everything we advertise. And for a reason. We're as concerned about pleasing the pets as the owners."

His entire operation is based on one theory: "Since pet owners treat their pets from puppyhood and kittenhood on as if they were children, why not use child psychology in training and boarding them?"

It seems to work. At his West Hollywood facility, opened in 1964, such notables as Sen. George Murphy, Dist. Atty. Evelle Younger, Rita Hayworth, Bill Cosby, even some veterinarians entrust their pets to him. Before long, under the banner of Pet Hotels Inc., two more "resort hotels" will be rising — one in Orange County midway between Anaheim and Newport Beach, the other in West Los Angeles. By fall, he intends to launch a management-partnership operation throughout the United States which he would rather not tag as franchises (another verboten word).

To substantiate his claim that pets are like kids, he tells of one beagle who would constantly leap into his water bucket, then slide on his rump atop the spilled water like a Disney character. He did it every morning until reprimanded, then found a new interest in chattering through the fence with his next-door neighbor at the top of his bark.

Another bow-wow had a habit of shaking all over when his owner didn't pay him enough attention. He hadn't persisted in doing it while boarding with George but when the owner came to check him out, the dog began shaking dramatically, in reproach at having been left behind. George sternly called to him, "Cut that out!" and the dog stopped shaking at once. Whereupon the owner pointed one finger at his dog, and cried:

"You've been getting away with that on me for years!"

While, to date, there have been no TV sets installed in any of the 94 rooms of the large red-bricked building at 7004 Hayvenhurst Ave., Van Nuys, which opened its doors last December with a champagne party for groomers and veterinarians, practically nothing else has been left out. Abundant helpings of t.l.c. and kiss-kiss substitute for all the love an absent owner usually provides at home. Any valet who doesn't get the message and resorts to cruelty, however slight, finds himself out on Hayvenhurst Avenue at once.

It's a kind of "Grand Hotel" where plenty of fun and games, mixed with earnest discipline, prevail. There's an hourly check on guests, with an accompanying mop-up operation. Walks, where needed for reassurance, and chatter with neighbors in adjoining apartments keep things lively. If medication is indicated on the guest's registration card, it is faithfully administered. A special diet? If an owner is willing to pay for the extra service, it is given. In one case, a Beverly Hills champion poodle had his top sirloin brought right from the home freezer and prepared "well done" (he refused the steaks done on the rare side). Otherwise, the regular diet is nutritious and quite substantial.

It takes $2,700 a month to open the doors every morning at the Van Nuys hotel. Before all the extras, 600 pounds of food are needed each month, and 16 cases of cat food. Even though most of the clientele are pedigreed, a good many claim mixed parentage, and they're all given the same consideration in basic care.

Once when a 17-year-old common variety of domestic cat was too homesick to eat (he'd never been boarded before), a veterinarian was called. Under the doctor's direction every trick in the book was tried to feed the mouser . . . B12 shots, food on the cat's coat so he'd lick it off, shooting a mixture of warm milk and honey into his mouth (waiting until he yawned to aim it).

Finally, using an emergency phone number that the owner had left, hotel aides had a neighbor go into the house, look through cupboards for any evidence of favored cat food and, sure enough, one can of it was found. They offered it to the cat, and he began to eat.

"But I entered it on his history card, so it could never happen again," says Barnes.

Some boarders arrive singing, specifically two Italian greyhounds owned by a TV actress. They begin yodeling merrily as they drive up in their Rolls Royce. Barnes named them "The Singing Nuns."

"You've heard of the cat's pajamas?" asks Barnes, laughingly. "Once I had to button a poodle into a pair of striped 'jammies' every night. And I also had to massage his gums because he was suffering from gingivitis. But it's all part of our determination to keep the guest happy."

Barnes also provides special services — for example, a day nursery where one 9-year-old poodle has boarded every day since she was six weeks old. Says Barnes:

"She is owned by a 'working mother' who lives alone and doesn't want her pet to be home alone all day. Since she's an older woman, if she hasn't checked him in by a certain hour, we inquire to see if the owner herself is OK."

There is a senior citizen facility for beloved pets who cannot be cared for at home but whose owners refuse to put them to sleep. One such is a Scottie and Dalmatian mix, 19-years-old, whose "parents" had to carry him wherever they went because he became so helpless. After being left at the West Hollywood hotel, he was given a free run of the place.

With a surprising surge of vitality,

Illustration By Joel Barbee understandable to most senior citizens now that he had a new interest in life, he was able to make his rounds three times a day, checking every dog in the place, then go back to his bed near the door and doze the hours away until his next patrol. They dubbed him "Grandpa."

Perhaps George Barnes' most eerie experience was with an overweight and aging beagle with heart trouble who was left to board against George's objections and passed away suddenly from a heart attack. "Several weeks later," he said quietly, "a beagle puppy appeared alone at the door to be let in, wearing only a rabies tag. Tracing it, I discovered he belonged to the same owner. She'd bought him to take the other beagle's place. Evidently he had crossed two major boulevards, Sunset and Santa Monica, through heavy traffic, to get to us."

No more unlikely candidate for pet entrepreneur could be envisioned than George Barnes. While operating his own construction firm, he bought some property in West Hollywood and unwittingly found himself the owner of a run-down kennel when the kennel owner wanted out. Completely without knowledge in the field, George hired a manager to run it. One day when the manager was gone, George answered the phone and learned to his dismay that every call was a complaint regarding service and care. He fired the manager and, on Labor Day, 1964, took it over himself.

"From then on, all I did 14 hours a day, seven days a week was change procedures, analyze and improve and consult veterinarians for ideas and advice," he says.

Before opening the Van Nuys Pet Hotel, he spent eight months at the drafting board, devising a place that would be easy to keep clean, appealing and functional. He corrected faults causing objections to the average kennel, like dogs coming home with diarrhea, newly acquired diseases and covered with fleas or ticks. He insists on any pet having all his shots before checking in. The apartments are designed to be completely indoors together with their runs, purified fresh air is constantly circulating and, on weekends, Barnes does a scrubdown comparable to those done in human hospitals, all to fully protect the animals' health.

Right now he is working with animal research departments at UCLA and Cornell University to help conquer the most stubborn of all dog complaints, the misnamed "kennel cough." He states:

"It's really a virus called tracheobronchitis and received its nickname years ago when it was found mostly in old kennels. But it can be caught in your own backyard, or on nightly walks."

Barnes is constantly in motion, supercharged with plans for the future, such as a big pet complex where everything pertaining to a dog and cat's well-being would be centered: boarding, grooming, pet supplies, clinic, research center — all in one large central location.

In his quick movements and tireless energy there is no remaining evidence of the polio which once paralyzed both his legs and put him in a wheelchair while still in the Navy in 1954. He fought the doctors and refused to give up, learning to lock his knees and walking as much as 10 hours a day.

When someone mentioned dancing as an aid to strengthening his legs, Barnes dropped into an Arthur Murray school in his hometown of Rochester, N.Y., and told them, "If you can teach me to dance, I'll make you a lot of money."

They did — and he did, not only becoming an Arthur Murray instructor of eight years, training other teachers, but it was there he learned the business techniques that he now uses in his pet hotel business.

In effect, Barnes is blending all the best features of the watering spas, health clubs and prestigious inns that humans are enjoying, and he's doing it "pet style."

It's Leisure World with chew bones, Elizabeth Arden's Main Chance with flea soap, two weeks at camp with your own beddy-bye to sleep on . . . and for swingin' canines, it's a Playboy Club, sans bunnies. (After all, no self-respecting rabbit would be caught within a mile of any luxury-loving beagle.)

When you consider there are more than 28 million cats and 25 million pooches in the United States, this thing is bound to catch on.

Next time you want to gather up the kids and the family dog and head out in the car to the beach or mountains, better check with your pet first. He might have other plans! □

IRONCLAD FACTS

Story and Photos by Dick Emery

Some stories mix true things and hot air and impossible things, and possible things which may or may not ever have happened at all.

This is hardly fair to the reader. He may be tired already or have a pain in his neck.

So along the left margins the following chatter will be slugged to clue the reader. "True" means true. Etc.

Over in the big Armco steel plant in Torrance a few weeks ago the L.A. County Sheriff had metalsmiths melt down four tons of rifles and pistols and daggers collected from robberies, murders and other crimes.

In a big electric furnace, weapons crackled and popped, flashed butter-yellow flames and puffed sulfury smoke.

A metal worker said, "What stories those guns could tell!"

Deputies and reporters and TV men and photographers watched and it was plain to everyone that hundreds of stories were being lost forever right there in the furnace.

"Good steel," the metal man said, "really never dies. We use it over and over. Oh, we lose steel into the ocean when a ship sinks, and we lose steel in the trash dumps.

"Mostly, ever since man started using steel, worn-out or broken or obsolete steel products find their way into a scrap pile and are made into new steel. Before steel, there was iron; and men didn't waste iron, either."

One rainy day about 700 AD a blacksmith in Damascus — a husky young fellow named Ali — stayed away too long for lunch. When he returned to his smoking forge, two bars of iron which he had left in the glowing coals had fused together. Ali lifted the red-hot fused piece with tongs and tossed it sizzling into a rain puddle.

He spent the rest of the afternoon hearing customers' complaints about axes that broke, knives that wouldn't cut anything and iron belt buckles that failed.

It was getting dark when he remembered the fused bars. He picked up the dripping piece of iron, rough-surfaced now from carbon and sand. He tried to break the bars apart. He hammered and chopped. The surfaces of the iron bars had become extremely hard.

"Hi-ho!" cried Ali, the Damascus smithy. "A long heating deep in the charcoal, a quick chilling in water — and here's iron fit for the king's sword!"

Ali ran home and told his wife the secret of case-hardening iron. What Ali didn't guess was that his wife later, in a fit of peevishness, confided the secret to a shoestrapping salesman who sold it to a metalsmith in Toledo, far away in the kingdom of Castile in Spain. Soon Damascus became famous for steel swords. And so did Toledo. Knights used to wonder how it happened that two cities so far apart seemed to know the same secrets.

Ali and his sons and their sons, and all down the generations for 700 years, made Damascus ever more famous for the quality of her steel, as they learned more and more about alloys and tempering. There was even the terrible ritual of giving a fine new blade its "taste for blood" by human sacrifice in the final tempering process. But all that ended when Tamerlane took the city.

Steel is a big industry here in the harbor area, in 1970. It runs to mountainous stockpiles — mountains of iron-ore pellets from Riverside County mines, waiting on harbor wharves; mountains of scrap metal — auto bodies, engine blocks, chewed-up fender steel, household metal debris, junked boilers, all in separate mountains; and geometrically stacked mountains of new steel plate, bars, beams and pipe. Armco and many other steel plants produce countless useful things.

In these modern steel plants, metallurgists mix old steel and new, test the mix, take out unwanted minerals, then add small quantities of other minerals, like wizards brewing magic soup.

Their seasonings are chromium and beryllium and molybdenum and a dozen other metals which make steel bright or springy or tough or rust resistant — each seasoning, or each combination, exactly by formula to give a predictable certain character to the new steel.

Away back there in the years of steelmaking by Ali and his descendants in Damascus, formulas for steel — if they had formulas — were kept under the smithy's hat. All through the centuries when knighthood was in flower, the armorers — the smiths who made weapons and body armor — were cherished and honored citizens indeed.

About three years ago a harbor district industrial plant got an unusual request. The plant does plain and fancy sandblasting — anything from a picture frame to a refinery tower. A customer (name known but withheld) brought in a suit of knight's armor, very old, to be cleaned.

Experts at the plant found the armor steel to be extremely hard. E.A. (Ed) Frost, owner of the Harbor Sandblasting Company in Wilmington, said about it a few days ago: "It was harder than 20 mm rifle barrels, harder than turbine buckets, harder even than a deep-sea lab capsule we worked on. It was the hardest steel we have ever seen. It was hard as hell!"

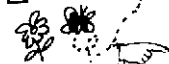

Back we go to Damascus. It's 1398 AD. As day breaks over the sleeping city, an eerie sound can be heard coming from outside the city walls — if it had walls. Sneaking up, out there, comes the terrible Mongol slaughterer of whole populations, Tamerlane, with his hordes of soldiers.

The sounds awakened the 35th generation descendant of that ancient blacksmith mentioned earlier. Ali — it was a family name —

Whatever became of the Hula-Hoop? It may not be the neighborhood craze it once was, but Hula-Hooping still has its devotees... as the photos on this page indicate. You might say it is popular in some of the best of circles. The skills of Hula-Hoopers will be displayed Thursday, beginning at 10 a.m., at Universal Studios in Universal City, when champions from 14 regions throughout the nation will compete in the annual National Hula-Hoop Championships. The competitors range in age from 5 to 14, and they can twirl rings around the ordinary hooper. With one, two, three... or as many as 10... Hula-Hoops, they stand on one leg, lie down, do intricate dance steps, jump up and down - all the time keeping the hoops spinning. With all the action, the hoopla of a championship finals is contagious. Let's hear it for the contestants... hip, hoop, hooray!

was the best steelmaker in all Damascus. He peered over a wall, ducked out of sight, grabbed a few treasured possessions and whistled softly for his girl friend, slave named Nelly whom he had saved from a sword-tempering ceremony.

"Let us scam," he said.

Nelly, not only nifty but nimble with a needle, quickly sewed sheepskins over the two of them and they escaped to the hills in a band of sheep.

Tamerlane and his terrible army tore Damascus up and took away with them, when they finally left, every metalsmith, every armorer, every swordmaker in town. Not one ever came back.

That wiped out Damascus as world capital of swordmaking. The title went to Toledo, in Spain, which to this day in 1970 produces some of the world's finest steels. Damascene steel is heard of no more.

Jumping back and forth from present to past may be so confusing that a simple timetable might come in handy here. These guesses, etc., are stolen from a dozen Ivory Towers, among them the American Iron and Steel Institute, a couple of encyclopedias and dictionaries, H. G. Wells and a museum catalog.

To finish the story about Ali and the nifty little slave-girl friend, however, it should be mentioned that they hitchhiked by boats, mostly, to Spain and arrived safely in Toledo, where Ali got a job in a blacksmith shop which made armor for knights.

"Sure you know what's what with steel?" the old smith asked Ali.

"As sure as I come from Damascus," Ali replied proudly.

"Then make a suit of armor for the king himself," the old smithy said. "I'd make it myself but I burnt my thumb yesterday and it's killing me."

Ali figured correctly that the old fraud feared the king's wrath in case any defect might be found in the armor. Ali measured the king and set to work making steel. He toiled over the forge until sweat cut little paths down his sooty neck. He heated iron under deep charcoal and then hammered it on an anvil, and reheated, and again hammered, dusting the hot metal from time to time with different colored sands he had carried in his pockets all the way from Damascus.

At Armco in 1970 Torrance the metallurgists would snort at all this, but maybe the sands Ali carried contained chromium ore, or maybe molybdenum. Who knows? He finished the armor and the king put it on and whooped for joy. From then on, Ali and Nelly — they had wed long ago — lived happily in Toledo and raised a large family.

There still must be told, in this hot-air part of this less than scientific report, how the king's armor ever happened to reach the sandblasting plant in Wilmington. The chain of events is hard to believe.

What happened was, the king died of old age and his crafty nephew stole the armor and sold it to pay a poker debt. A Toledo playboy he sold it to lost it on a horse bet to a crooked Arab bookmaker who sold it to a Greek bartender who sent it to a numbers racket pal in Italy, whose wife hated it and hid it in the attic.

There it lay gathering dust for 600 years. Then along came an American soldier named Ali—a 65th generation descendant of that first Ali of Damascus — looking for a quiet place to nap between World War II battles.

Ali found the armor, showed it to a pilot who sneaked it into the general's plane, which started it on a roundabout 25-year junket ending in a Hollywood curio shop where a studio genius bought it — a dusty, beautiful, priceless suit of medieval armor. He had it crated and sent to the studio.

By mistake, a studio property man sent it, still crated, to be sandblasted, thinking it was the leading lady's exercising bicycle, which needed painting.

To conceal his mistake, he later buried the armor in a shallow grave on the desert near Lancaster, where hikers may stumble across it any day now. □

IT'S A GAS!

Paradoxically, we humans have slaved to create a comfortable shelter crammed with conveniences only to move outdoors again and create the same lavish comfort with heated swimming pools and heating elements installed to make outdoor living pleasurable on chilly nights.

The instant barbecue, which was intended as a get-out-of-the-super-functional-kitchen-and-into-the-casual-cooking device, has become still another study in the removal of roughing it from the realm of the easy life.

Several years ago two New Zealanders landed in Southern California for a brief visit with some friends. In one week the most exciting and memorable experience was not Disneyland or Hollywood, but the outdoor barbecue. Lavish praise was heaped on a country where special equipment was designed for the cook-out. In New Zealand a cookout still means an open fire with food cooked on the end of a stick!

Special equipment abounds for those who move out of doors. First there is the hibachi which originally was intended to rest on the table top while the food cooked and the diners drooled. Hibachis became the mainstay of outdoor life. They were portable and required little charcoal, but did result in some startling backaches when they were put on the ground for barbecuing.

Then the full-panel barbecue unit made the scene. This usually was a full cooking complement built in a brick or stone facade. The complicated mass generally included outdoor ovens, grills, griddles and the open pit which often ended its days as a trash burner.

The Kamado was still another in the long line of outdoor conveniences, but this was infinitely more comfortable if you were under five feet tall. The pottery base was handsome and the fact that it also was a smoker provided some interesting and tasty food experiments.

The heat in the Kamado is intense and the value again is in the minimal use of charcoal, but refrain from bending over the flaming open top or you will lose hair and eyebrows, as two members of my family did.

Some marvelous ideas have drifted

Overhanging trees, opposite page, provide shade for luncheons and even breakfasts in an outdoor environment.

A young woman stands beside three gas-fueled items that can add to the pleasure of barbecuing—a cooker, an enclosed lamp and a flaring torch.

my way and the most simple are decidedly effective. One family dug a pit two feet deep, encircled it with a one-foot brick wall then topped it first with a grate for cooking then a lath cover. When the fire is out the cover functions as a table or a seat. Additional slat benches allowed the "cookees" to sit and toast marshmallows or whatever and on cold nights just toast themselves.

But no matter, there still is the question of lighting that fire. Two sticks of wood rubbed together might work for a Boy Scout and matches just burn your fingers before the fire starts. Heaven forbid help from gasoline ... you could be the neighborhood firework! Firestarters help some, but outdoor living can be a gas if you like romantic lights, warm air on chilly nights and instant hot for outdoor cooking.

The gas company managed to make outdoors as convenient and attractive as indoors simply by the extension of your gas outlet into lights, heat and cooking.

You still may have the built-in unit for complete meal preparation, but the free-standing gas grills come in all sizes and designs. The portable barbecue has self-cleaning ceramic bricks for even heat at the flick of a switch and, best of all, no messy clean-up chores. According to the experts, it is as easy to connect a gas appliance as it is to plug in a TV.

The better half of the coupling is connected permanently to a natural gas supply line in the home and it protrudes much the same as the outdoor water faucet. If you go the light and heat route on your patio, you might need a permanent underground line extended for more outlets.

To attach the barbecue, all you have to do is fasten the second portion of the coupling and lock into place. If the coupling breaks, the gas supply shuts off automatically.

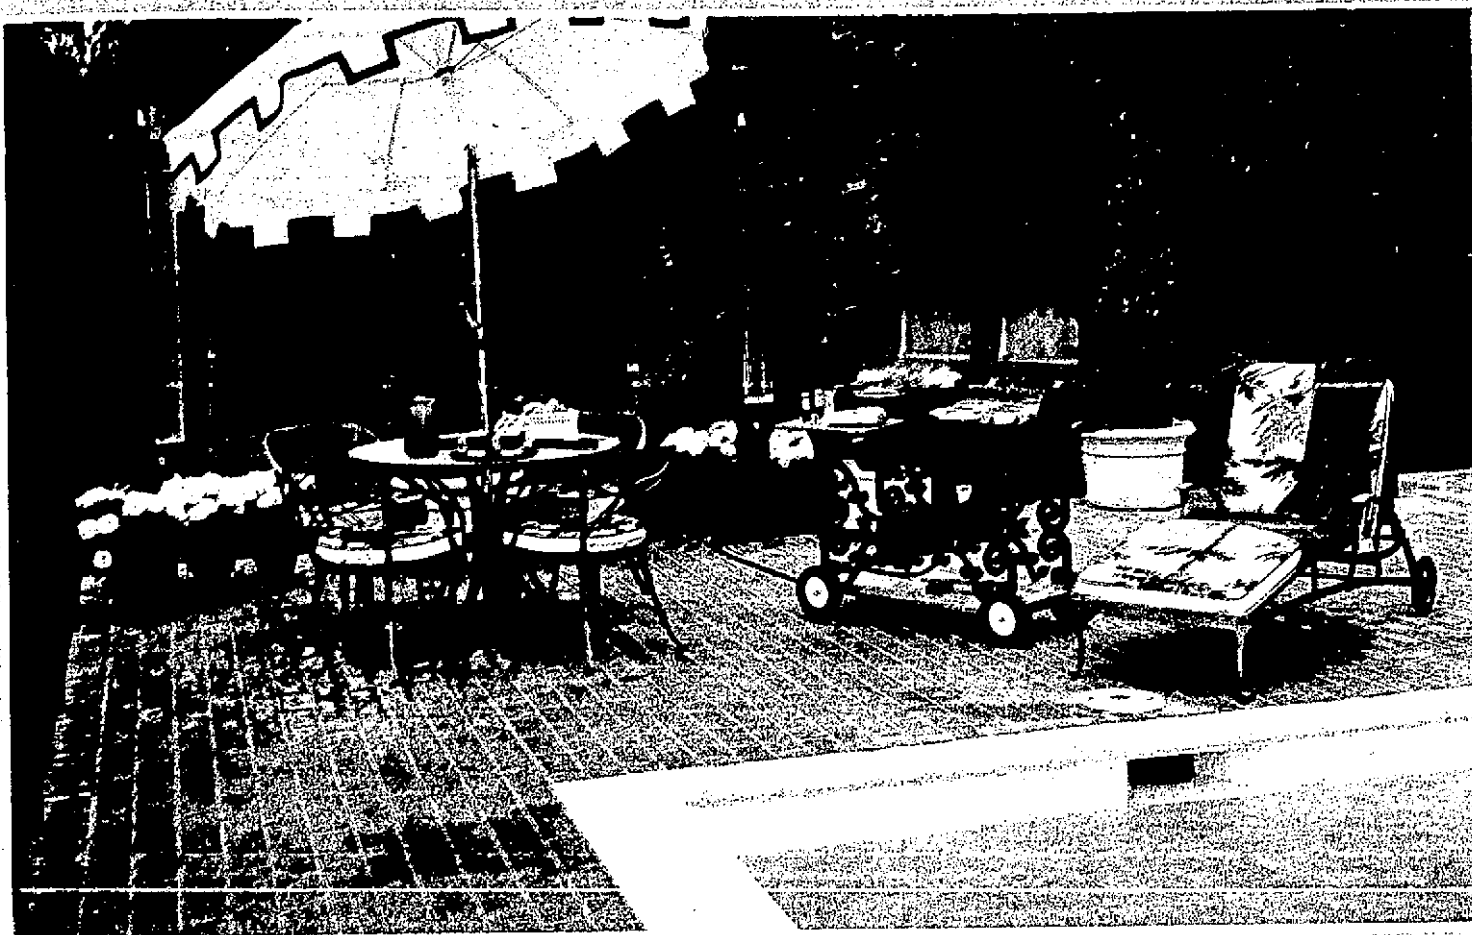

Designs are numerous. Single-hearth models allow 450 square inches of cooking space. Then comes the divided his and hers model. Some come equipped with warming shelves, meat racks, rotisseries, lights and covers. Some have clean contemporary lines while the more rococo barbecues faintly resemble the old wrought-iron Singer sewing machine.

If you need more technical information for gassing up your patio, you should call your friendly gas company people. They have an excellent recipe for barbecue marinade they will include with the details! □

Mobile home dwellers, right, can enjoy patio living. Gas outdoor appliances enhance outdoor entertainment possibilities. For added charm, gas lamps add distinctiveness. In this landscaping design by Armstrong and Sharfman, Los Angeles, a gas grill, area heater and three gas lamps personalize a mobile home.

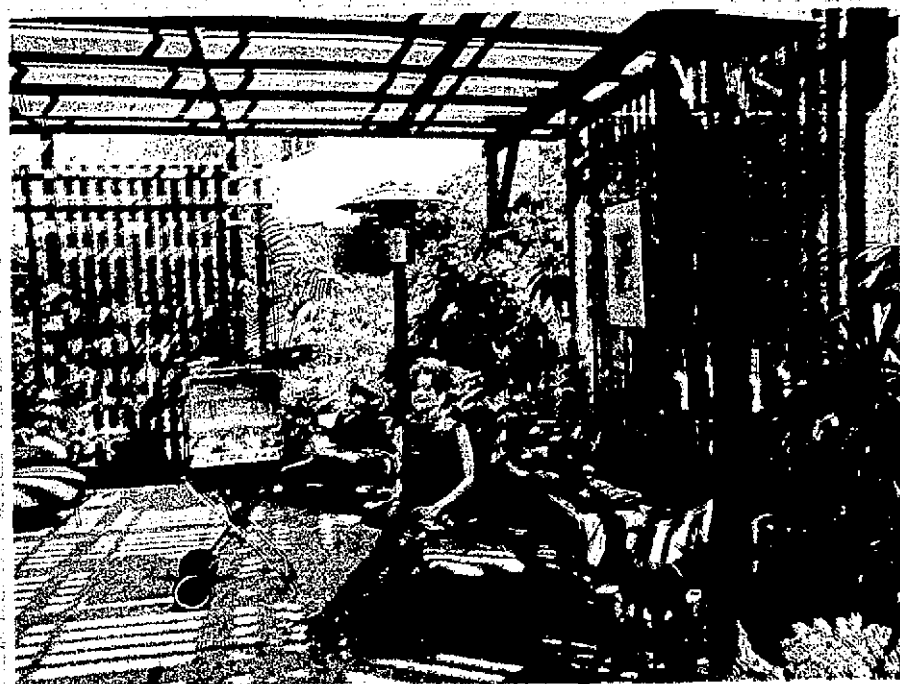

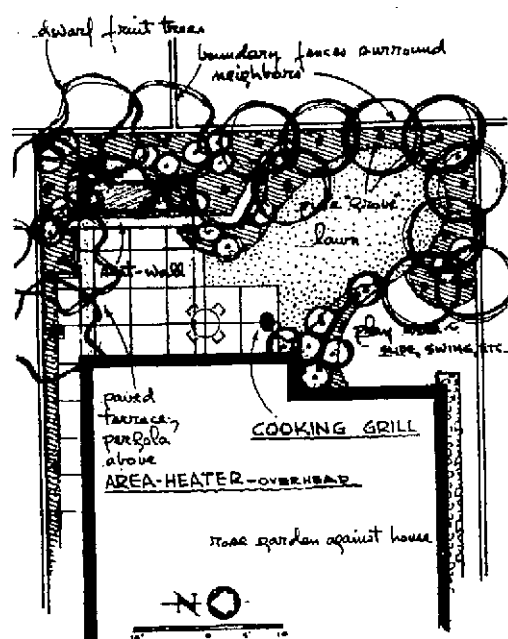

The plan, next right, shows how the suburban home can have overhead heaters and gas grills for pleasant outdoor cooking.

A brick deck beside the pool forms a happy setting for informal outdoor dining. Gas lamps softly illuminate the area.

Trellises, below, form another setting for outdoor dining.

John and Yoko ...
America cool to Frost's guests.

Jimi Hendrix ... new Rbett Butler?

Chiang Kai-shek ...
diary saved his life.

Nikita ... failed to get in Disneyland.

Q: Of all the performers at the July 4th Pop Festival in Atlanta, who was the big hero? — Meg Mauroise, Pittsburgh.

A: My spies report that the Rhett Butler of the March on Georgia was Jimi Hendrix. Hundreds of thousands of squatters gave him a standing ovation — most on their feet (some on their hands!) — but nobody's sure if it was out of respect to the "Star-Spangled Banner," the electrifying way Hendrix played it, or the fireworks and toy bombs bursting in air that inspired the din.

Q: I read that John Lennon was not allowed into the United States. Yet I saw him and Yoko on the David Frost show. How come? — Flo Cohan, Miami.

A: Like many of Frost's hot talk sessions, this one was taped in England.

Q: While on a visit here about 10 years ago, Nikita Khrushchev wanted to see Disneyland but was refused permission. Why? — Grace McCue, Jersey City.

A: This was one of the rare occasions on which the security officers of both nations agreed the risk would be too great. That Disneyland was just too big and spread-out to police properly.

Q: Anything to the story that Chiang Kai-shek's life was once saved when his diary stopped an assassin's bullet? — Col. H.R.F., Houston.

A: The way John Gunther told it, Chiang had kept a diary for years and usually carried it on his person. Once, munitiers kidnaped him at Sian, plotting to kill him. They read the diary, were touched by some of the Generalissimo's tender letters to his wife—and released him, instead, unharmed. The diary, no doubt, will be published posthumously.

Q: There was a big boner on a "Bonanza" episode titled "The Medal." Lorne Greene read a telegram from the War Department awarding the Medal of Honor to Dean Stockwell for his courage during the battle of Chancellorsville, July 2, 1863. Impossible. That battle was fought a long way from Chancellorsville which was the site of another battle fought between May 1 and 5, 1863. Weren't they wrong? — John G. Kuespert, South Bend, Ind.

A: "We have received quite a few letters pointing out that the author was in error," admits "Bonanza" producer Richard Collins. "We have no research staff at all and the writer is responsible for the historical accuracy of his script. The associate producer and I are supposed to check on such facts, but we slipped up." (Editor's note: I personally award a medal to Mr. Collins for candor beyond the call of duty.)

Q: I read that Columbia Pictures paid $100,000 for a first novel by an unknown named Jacqueline Brislin. It's got to be another of those sex-saturated stories—right? — Shelbourne Schuster, Long Beach.

A: Only slightly right. However, the author is honest enough to make this confession, that her book, "California Generation," does "include a number of pages that do not deal with sex—but not enough to really handicap the reader."

VIRGO THE VIRGIN

August 24th through September 23rd

VIRGO

HOW TO RECOGNIZE VIRGO

Virgo is the sign of the virgin, but you can't take the symbolism too literally. I can assure you that a September birthday is no guarantee of virginity. Although lots of Virgos remain bachelors and spinsters, there are also plenty who finally settle into conubial bliss.

Married or single, it's fairly simple to spot the Virgo in public. For one thing, he won't be making much noise. He's not exactly gregarious, and he'll stand out as a loner.

You're more likely to find Virgos working late at the office than being gregarious at a cocktail party. It's not easy for Virgos to relax sufficiently to enjoy the carefree social swim, because they're basically uncomfortable in crowds.

You can generally look for a rather wiry build, and unusually lovely, quiet eyes.

Virgo eyes are often so astonishingly clear. Most Virgos are extremely attractive, with delicate noses, ears and lips. There's certainly no lack of grace and charm, and there may be a bit of vanity which pops up at odd moments.

The Virgo is normally a small person, certainly no giant, but he's muscular, and he has far more strength than his fragile appearance suggests. These people can stand more intense work over a longer period of time than the tougher, more brawny signs.

Virgos are unquestionably dependable and sincere. Nevertheless, they're capable of pretending to be sick when they don't want to go somewhere or do something.

Your neat Virgo friend who looks as if he just stepped out of the shower probably just did. He takes more baths and showers than any four people you know put together.

Of course, you shouldn't get the idea that everyone born in late August or September is fussy, prissy and dogmatic. Lots of Virginians shine with a clever Mercury wit — if you catch their side remarks — and they project a bright, Mercurial charm that's hard to resist.

When they're annoyed by vulgarity, stupidity or carelessness, Virgos can suddenly become cranky, irritable, scolding and nervous. But most of the time they're gentle folk, and quite nice to have around.

A Virgo may criticize your statements with hairsplitting arguments which drive you wild, but if you are in a jam he'll also quickly step in to turn things right side up again with no motive except to serve.

You won't find those people lavish in affection or in spending money. They're normally prudent in both areas, giving their love quietly and steadily with little demonstrativeness, and handling cash just as conservatively.

If you were born between Aug. 24 and Sept. 23 inclusive, the Sun was in the zone of the Zodiac called Virgo, the Virgin, and Virgo is your "Sun sign."

Noted astrologer Linda Goodman explores the signs of the Zodiac and tells you what to expect from people born under the various signs and how to deal with them. Her articles will help you better to understand your husband, wife, lover or child through astrology. This article deals with the traits of Virgo people.

Watch for Miss Goodman's next article, which will deal with Libra people, those born between Sept. 24 and Oct. 23 inclusive.

Virgos like cats, birds and small, helpless creatures. They also like truth, punctuality, economy, prudence and discreet selectivity. They hate gushy sentiment, dirt, vulgarity, sloppiness and idleness. There is a practical nature, with excessive discrimination — the true individualists, whose keen perception keeps their desires clear of muddy, wishful thinking.

THE VIRGO MAN

Don't pin your hopes on a Virgo man if your heart is hungry for romantic dreams and fairy tales, or you'll find yourself on a starvation diet.

This man lives almost entirely on a practical, material level, and he has little use for the abstractions of storybook romance. Actually, Virgos are deeply involved with love from earliest childhood, but not the Romeo-Juliet kind of love. His chief way of expressing the word is concerned with unselfish devotion to family, friends and those weaker or more disorganized than himself.

Virgos seek quality rather than quantity in romance. They have few real love affairs, and the few they do have are destined to be unlucky or sad in some way, more often than not. Virgo's reaction to such a disappointment is normally to bury himself in the hardest work he can find, stay away from society in general, and be twice as cautious at the next opportunity.

He'll take his own precious time about finding a love object, because he's as critical and painstaking in the selection of a woman as he is in his eating, grooming, health and work habits. He is difficult man to stir emotionally. He can go for a long time without feeling any burning need for a permanent mate.

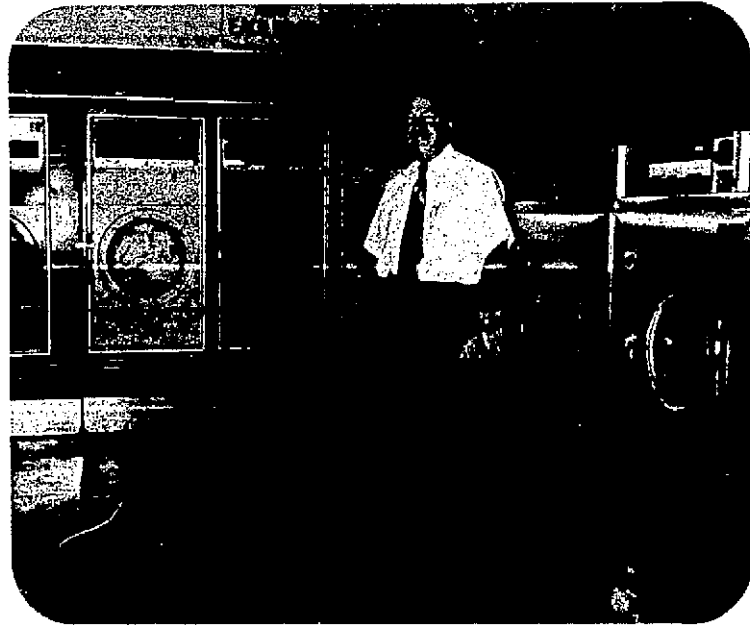

Now and then a curious, frustrated Virgo may try a fling at deliberate promis-

ZEST OF THE WEST

By Mildred K. Flanary
Home Economics Editor

The spirited cuisine of the American Southwest is dominated by the corn and chili-based cooking of the Indians. It's renowned for being hot and spicy, but the food, like the scenery, is doubly interesting because of sharp contrasts — hot chili served with mild-mannered avocado and crisp lettuce, for example. Spicy barbecued lamb spareribs cooled around the foods of the Southwest is a good idea no matter what part of the country you're in, because the food lends itself to casual entertaining.

Your menu might feature Chili Barbecued Lamb Spareribs as a main course — the Southwest is lamb country, so it suits the mood. To make life easier for the barbecue chef, simmer the ribs in a lime juice-chili marinade early in the day or the day before. Then, at barbecue time, thread the lamb spareribs on skewers with some green pepper and grill until deeply browned and crisp.

And, speaking of grills, the new gas barbecue is a dandy — easy to use, easy to clean and the food tastes great.

Put tomato wedges on the end of the skewers to heat a minute or two before you're ready to serve. Beans are typical and a good go-along with the lamb. Serve them hot or chilled with chopped raw onion in a vinegar-oil dressing. Serve tortillas liberally brushed with melted butter and dusted with garlic salt. Or you may prefer a garlic bread.

Just the proper cooling touch for this barbecue is a pitcher of clear, fresh-tasting iced tea to drink before, during and after the barbecue. It's truly a refreshing, thirst-quenching drink, and, of course, it's a boon to the calorie counter, so you can drink all you want.

For dessert, serve fresh fruit. Pineapple, oranges, mangos, apricots, bananas — whatever is in season — would be fine.

CHILI BARBECUED LAMB SPARERIBS

(Makes 4 to 6 servings)

- 2 cups water
- 1/2 cup lime or lemon juice
- Salt
- 2 teaspoons chili powder
- 1 teaspoon cumin seed
- 1/2 teaspoon dry mustard
- 1/2 teaspoon pepper
- 1/4 teaspoon oregano leaves
- 3 cloves garlic
- 4 pounds lamb spareribs
- 2 small green peppers, quartered
- Salad oil
- 2 medium tomatoes, cut in wedges

Combine water, lime juice, 2 teaspoons salt and seasonings in large saucepan. Bring to a boil and add lamb. Cover and simmer 1 hour, or until meat is tender. Drain spareribs and place on skewers with green pepper. Brush peppers with oil and sprinkle with salt. Grill or broil 6 or 7 inches from source of heat 10 to 15 minutes per side, or until meat is well browned. Just before serving, place tomato wedges on ends of skewers to heat.

MIXED BEAN SALAD

(Makes 4 to 6 servings)

- 1 can (20 ounces) red kidney beans
- 1 can (16 ounces) pinto beans
- 1/2 cup chopped green onion
- 1 tablespoon chopped parsley
- 1/2 cup olive or salad oil
- 1/2 cup wine vinegar
- 1/2 teaspoon instant minced garlic
- Dash each: salt and pepper
- Lettuce

Drain beans; rinse and drain again. Combine beans, onion and parsley in bowl. Blend oil, vinegar, garlic, salt and pepper; pour over bean mixture and mix lightly. Chill. Serve salad in lettuce-lined bowl.

ICED TEA BY THE PITCHERFUL

(Makes 10 servings)

Bring 1 quart of freshly drawn cold water to a full rolling boil in a saucepan. Remove from the heat and, while water is still bubbling, add 15 teabags or 1/3 measuring cup loose tea.

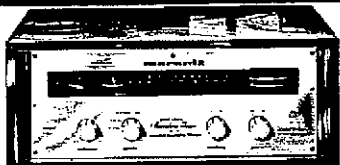

Stir, cover and let stand 5 minutes.

cuous behavior, simply to see if he's lacking in masculinity. He's not, of course, and as soon as he discovers it, he seeks no more artificial experiences to prove himself.

Once he's decided it's for real, however, he'll declare himself with touching simplicity. His love will burn with a steady flame.

After you've caught him, he'll seldom, if ever, invite your jealousy, and he'll be determined to overcome any rough spots caused by financial problems, relatives or outside interference.

A Virgo man is invariably kindly and thoughtful about all those little things which matter to women. He probably won't forget special dates. He won't be wildly, passionately jealous, yet Virgo males are possessive in the extreme.

If your heart is set on a Virgo man, you'd better brush up your thinking cap and wear it when he's around. Virgos hate ignorance, stupidity and sloppy thinking almost as much as they hate dirt and vulgarity, and that's a lot.

Virgo men have no strong yearning for fatherhood, as a rule. Their particular kind of ego doesn't seem to require children for emotional fulfillment, and Virgos tend to have small families.

A Virgo will expect you to fuss a bit over his health, but he'll wait on you when you're sick, too, and allow you to be a regular Camille.

Now that you know what you're in for, if you're still in love with that Virgo man, you can look forward to a pretty contented future. You'll have a husband who's alert and well-informed, who won't expect you to wait on him hand and foot or expect you to run around looking sexy all the time.

THE VIRGO WOMAN

snow? You may be about to get some illusions shattered.

A Virgo woman can leave her husband for a man she met beside some faraway ocean, bear her lover's child before the benefit of marriage, and face a hostile world with her head held high. That's not very maidenly or virginal. There's a lot to learn about this tender, fragile little symbol of spotless womanhood. For one thing, her spine is made of stainless steel.

It's quite true that she's basically shy. No argument there. But a Virgo woman is a woman. She has all the necessary wiles and weapons, including a determination to pursue happiness wherever the path happens to lead her.

There's a white heat to Virgo love, once it's ignited, that can put the passions of other Sun signs to shame by its very intensity and singleness of purpose. Igniting it may take some time, however.

The Virgo woman is a perfectionist, but that doesn't mean that she herself is perfect. She has her negative traits, and they can be very trying. Virgo females have this dogged belief that no one can do things as orderly and as efficiently as they can.

This girl has a mental block when it comes to admitting she's wrong — like a block of wood right in front of her brain.

If you can bear the wound to your male ego, you might profit from taking her financial advice, or letting her handle the budget. She's concise and practical, and she catches tiny errors even a CPA might overlook.

Brush up on your manners and your grammar if you're dating a Virgo female. She won't take kindly to abuse of the language, swearing or drinking from the fingerbowl.

Don't overpower her with your physical charms and don't rush the goodnight kiss on the first or even the tenth date — wait for better things. In general, underplay the whole scene. Move in slowly, with grace and taste.

She loves plays, concerts and books, but she's severely critical of the content. She's just as critical of your tie and how you wear your hair, what you do and what you say. To criticize is as natural to her as breathing is to you.

The Virgo girl is annoyingly meticulous about small things, but she can also be the kindest, most generous and affectionate little creature in the world. Consider her perfectionism a virtue, instead of a vice.

She has no illusions, so don't try to sell her any phony ideas. To her, truth is beauty — and beauty is truth. The quiet courage and deep sense of responsibility of Virgo women often acts as a magic glue to hold large families together.

Virgo women seldom have more than one or two children, and don't seem to need motherhood to satisfy their femininity. But once baby has bounced into her life, she'll never neglect his physical, moral or educational needs.

Remember the poem that says you shouldn't buy bread with your last sixpence, but "hyacinths for the soul?" Give this woman both. You'll get every ounce of loyalty and devotion you deserve.

VIRGO CHILD

They may be fussy eaters on have an occasional spell or fretful indigestion, but raising a Virgo youngster is a pleasant experience, with little conflict and a few tantrums. Even when they're very small, these children are inclined to be neat and put away their toys cheerfully.

Your Virgo youngster may be bashful and quiet in company or crowds, but around family and friends the cat certainly won't get his tongue. He'll probably talk early and fluently, except in front of strangers.

A Virgo child is seldom troublesome, and he's a wonderful companion as mother does her housework. He'll happily imitate whatever she is doing and he'll usually mind the first time he's told, with little scolding necessary.

In school, Virgos are apt to be teacher's pets, simply because they're the easiest boys and girls to discipline and the ones who study their lessons carefully.

Criticism, however, should be used sparingly. Too much stress on mistakes will cause them to worry unduly, sometimes to the point of actual illness.

It's best to ignore the Virgo teen-ager when he begins to notice the opposite sex. Teasing a girl about her first boy friend can give her a permanent emotional scar, and probing into a boy's dates can head him toward bachelorhood. Virgos don't easily accept close relationships leading to marriage, and the path should be made as smooth as possible.

These children should have a kitten or a bird, so they can learn the lessons of love quietly and unobtrusively, by caring for the helpless.

Give them all the lovely dreams you can crowd into their hearts. Such bright moments of fantasy will guarantee them a much-needed emotional balance when they grow up. Be sure they have a secret star to wish on.

culent roast prime rib au jus ($6) or whole flaming duck ($14 for two persons.)

Those table d' hote dinners are unusually scrumptious. Among the entrees are chicken cacciatore, stuffed fresh mushrooms, veal piccata with rigatoni, halibut with almonds, chicken saute Manhattan, luscious beef Stroganoff and lobster thermidor that melts in your mouth. Included are hors d'oeuvres platter (liver pate, garbanzos, pickled beets and onions, kosher pickles, carrots, peppers), soup in a steaming tureen, tossed salad or spaghetti, baked potato or rice, ice cream or sherbet and superb coffee.

The Manhattan (closed Mondays) is also popular for luncheon, attracting housewives and feminine executives as well as businessmen, lawyers and physicians. The banquet room, available for luncheon or dinner, has seating for up to 40 guests.

There's only one small thing wrong with Francois Manhattan restaurant. It's closed today.

But do not despair, gourmets and epicures. The Manhattan, 1909 E. Fourth St. — closed two weeks for vacation — will reopen Tuesday. So once again those lost souls, who've been wandering around town with dazed expressions for 14 days and nights, will be able to have luncheon and dinner at their favorite Long Beach restaurant.

I've been writing enthusiastic little essays about Francois Manhattan for many years. I enjoy composing them, because merely thinking about the Manhattan gives me pleasure. As for dining there — well, of course that's one of life's great rewards.

The cuisine at the Manhattan is marvelous, rich with flavor, prepared with imagination and flair by executive chef Ulysses K. Yanis and his staff of cooks in crisp whites. The rest of the crew, directed by Sad Sadler (recently promoted to general manager), includes waiters and waitresses who are remarkably gifted in their profession. They are attentive and intuitive. They enjoy their work so much that they add greatly to the enjoyment of each guest. Like Sad, who's been on the staff 20 years, many of the waiters have worked there for decades.

The Manhattan isn't as expensive as most great restaurants. Its large, colorful table d' hote dinners start at $3. About half are in the $3.25 to $3.75 range. If you're in the mood for gourmet spectacles, the Manhattan has 'em all — such as thick, suc-

GUIDE by Tedd Thomey

Here's more good news. Chez Cary in the city of Orange is now open on Sundays, serving its exquisite dinners from 5 to 10 p.m.

The Chez, 571 S. Main St., has in only five years become one of the world's great restaurants. And when I say "world," I'm not exaggerating. Recently the Chez received its second Holiday magazine award, recognition comparable to the highest categories of the renowned Michelin restaurant guide in Europe. Only a handful of Los Angeles restaurants have ever received the Holiday award, and Chez Cary is the only Orange County restaurant to be so honored.

The restaurant's guiding genius is tall, handsome Geril Muller, who is an interior decorator and artist as well as a connoisseur of the great European dishes and wines. He designed the restaurant, which is stunningly beautiful, and hand-picked its staff, including master chef Fred Hossli and the European-trained captains, waiters and waiter's assistants.

The Chez's service is complete to the most thoughtful detail. The guests are treated like members of visiting royalty, each wish or whim granted by staff men dressed like diplomats at a formal reception. Yet, despite its grandeur, the Chez is a friendly place, noted for its hospitality and graciousness.

The haute cuisine is a la carte, ranging from elaborate hors d'oeuvres, soups and consommés to elegant salads and desserts not found in ordinary restaurants. The entrees are mostly continental, including such classics as beef tournedoes saute grand duc, supreme de volaille Jerusalem (breast of chicken), lobster in the shell with cream sauce glace, scampi sauteed in garlic butter, filet of sole Veronique, veal scallopini zucchini dore, chateaubriand gastonome and the choicest steaks.

Chef Hossli's sauces are so delectable that he receives constant compliments. Each night he prepares beautiful plats du jour, $5.75 to $9.75, including entree with appropriate fresh vegetables. He also welcomes suggestions from guests who may wish something unusual which is not on the menu. When given notice a day or so in advance, he will happily prepare any exotic item to the exact specifications desired.

The Chez's luncheons are Monday through Friday. Hors d'oeuvres are served during the cocktail hour, starting at 4 p.m.

Philadelphia researchers say they can spot persons who will later develop coronary heart disease.

The technique calls for use of a tiny radio to transmit electrocardiograms (heart-action tracings) while the subject is exercising.

Tests conducted so far show that incidence of coronary heart disease is nearly 10 times greater among those with positive test findings.

A positive finding, however, does not predict the severity of illness which later develops. Yet researchers say the technique can be immensely valuable in detecting persons in danger of heart attack.

Dr. Samuel Bellet, professor of clinical cardiology at University of Pennsylvania, says that "preventive measures ... are the best way we now have of slowing the evolution of coronary heart disease."

series of diathermy sessions, the patient improved significantly.

Dr. Z. M. Asfoury of the tropical diseases department of Ain-Shams University in Cairo then tried diathermy on a large group of patients. One electrode was placed on the abdomen, another on the back.

Before treatment, patients complained of bladder symptoms along with abdominal pain, diarrhea and rectal bleeding. Within a few days, symptoms were relieved. After six months, 73 of 95 patients who received diathermy were considered free of disease. And after one year, 52 remained free of disease.

Schistosomiasis is widespread in many countries of the world.

Medical researchers, in studying the relationship of animal disease to human ailments, have come up with the estimate that there is one dog for every seven humans in the United States. The estimate is that of University of Kentucky College of Medicine investigators in a report in Archives of Environmental Health, a publication of the American Medical Association.

With one exception, there is little likelihood that animal hearts can ever be transplanted successfully into man.

Researchers have found that the red corpuscles in man's blood are too large to pass through the capillaries — tiny blood vessels — of transplanted organs.

Only the ape has red blood cells about the same size as man's.

The report is from researchers at Loyola University Stritch School of Medicine in the Journal of Thoracic and Cardiovascular Surgery.

Another problem that must be overcome is that of rejection. But when the rejection problem is solved, the new research indicates that the donor will have to be a related species with red-blood cells compatible in diameter.

A treatment that employs administration of deep heat is proving effective in the treatment of schistosomiasis, common parasitic infection caused by infestation of blood flukes.

The technique is that of diathermy — use of high frequency currents to generate deep heat within a part of the body.

The effectiveness of the approach was discovered by accident. Diathermy had been prescribed as a palliative for the bladder inflammation resulting from the disease. Within a few days after a Immunization by inhalation appears to be the best way to cope with biological warfare attack, suggests a retired Army officer in a report in the Journal of the Oklahoma State Medical Association.

Several studies have already shown that induced immunity following contact with diseased or immunized persons was probably conferred by the inhalation route.

A Portland, Ore., doctor suggests one way to muzzle antivivisectionists — those persons who object to the use of animals in medical research.

Says the doctor:

"Make a statement that animal experimentation will be discontinued if members of antivivisection groups will volunteer to take the place of the animals used in research.

"Of course, it would be necessary for their children to be used in these experiments also."

WALTER SCOTT'S Personality Parade

Want the facts? Want to spike rumors? Want to learn the truth about prominent personalities? Write Walter Scott, Parade, 733 3rd Ave., New York, N.Y., 10017. Your full name will be used unless otherwise requested. Volume of mail received makes personal replies impossible.

Q. The American taxpayer paid $32 million for 2000 non-combat Filipino troops in South Vietnam. I now understand all that money went—not to Filipino troops—but into the pockets of thieving Filipino politicians. Do you dare tell the American people the truth about this?—R. W., Oakland, Calif.

A. The scandalous truth is that approximately $4 million of the $32 million earmarked by the U.S. for payment of non-combat Filipino troops in South Vietnam was skimmed by various Philippine government officials. For diplomatic reasons the U.S. State Department declines to acknowledge that fact or to permit even its disclosure in Congress.

Q. Who was the Radziwill involved with Cecil Rhodes, the great Englishman who exploited South Africa and founded the Rhodes Scholarships?—Cora Ann Thorpe, Seattle, Wash.

A. She was Catherine Radziwill, a Polish courtesan who insisted she was a Polish princess. She tried to pressure Rhodes into marrying her, claiming falsely that they had lived together. She was jailed on a forgery charge for two years. She died in New York in 1941.

Q. I know that Darryl Zanuck gave his new girlfriend, Genevieve Gilles, the leading role in a film called Hello-Goodbye. How is the film?—Ursula Ives, Chicago, Ill.

A. A treat for imbeciles.

Q. How did Kissinger and Secretary of State Rogers advise Nixon on the Cambodia invasion? Also, was the U.S. invasion of Cambodia a failure or a success? What is the informed opinion?—N. McIntyre, Baltimore, Md.

A. Rogers was against the Cambodian incursion. Kissinger was in favor of it.

Overall, the invasion was a military success and a political failure. Our military closed the port of Si-hanoukville (now Kompong Som) to the enemy, captured enemy matériel. But politically, one-third of Cambodia, the northern shelf, is now completely under Communist control. Cambodia is at war, and the U.S. indirectly through South Vietnam and perhaps Thailand, if we pay the Thais enough, will have to support the war.

Q. I've been told that there is a magazine called "EMK," the Edward M. Kennedy quarterly, published in New York. What can you tell me about it?—Dean Richard, Boston, Mass.

A. "The Edward M. Kennedy Quarterly" is published independently by James Spada, 675 Tysens Lane, Staten Island, N.Y., consists mostly of reprints of the Senator's speeches and articles about him. The magazine receives no support from Senator Kennedy.

Q. How liberal is Robert Finch?—E. T., Sacramento, Calif.

A. Basically, Finch is to the right of Nixon. He just appears and sounds more liberal to newsmen.

Q. Diahann Carroll and David Frost—an integrated marriage upcoming?—V.T. Unger, Newark, N.J.

A. Frost dates almost everyone, has dated Diahann Carroll. No marriage is in the offing.

WELCOME GUEST: DIAHANN ON DAVID'S TV SHOW.

Q. Does anyone know why Lyndon Johnson sent the amazing total of 540,000 American boys to fight in Vietnam?—Dan Hawley, Houston, Tex.

A. Johnson was advised by the military in 1965 that he could win the war in Vietnam on the cheap. He was gradually suckered into further troop escalations as military victory eluded him. He alone was not at fault. His civilian advisers—McNamara, Rostow, Rusk, Bundy—they all went along with the military year by year, promise by promise. The above is the opinion of Jack Valenti, a White House aide under Johnson and now president of the Motion Picture Association of America.

Q. Actor Rory Calhoun was accused by his wife Lita Baron of adultery with 79 different women. Have the Calhouns been divorced, and if so has Rory married Betty Grable?—Evelyn Hicks, N. Las Vegas, Nev.

A. A divorce was granted to the Calhouns in July, 1970. The custody of the three Calhoun children was awarded to the mother. Neither party to the divorce has as yet chosen a new mate.

Q. Does David Eisenhower know what he wants to be when he grows up?—Louis Schwartz, New Rochelle, N.Y.

A. Not yet. Perhaps a talent scout for the Washington Senators.

Q. I am thinking of emigrating to Australia. What is the average wage there?—Knox Knowles, Boston, Mass.

A. $56 per week.

Q. How many members of the John Birch Society, if any, are in the U.S. Congress?—Edwina York, Chapel Hill, N.C.

A. Two newly elected representatives, Rousselot and Schmitz, both from Southern California, are Birchites.

Q. Prince Sihanouk of Cambodia—his Italian wife, Monique, which wife is she? True that she seduced in her time the entire Cambodian court?—P.T., Leesburg, Va.

A. Monique is Sihanouk's fourth wife. Formerly she was his mistress. She was born in Saigon of an Italian father and a Cambodian mother who worked in the Saigon post office. As a teenager Monique won a beauty contest. Sihanouk, with an eye for beauty, thereupon placed her under his protective and sexual wing. Monique has been accused of having engaged in an extramarital affair with Bruno Forcinati, the Cambodian protocol officer, but with no others.

MALE-FEMALE WORK ROLES

Are we in the midst of a sexual revolution in this country?

Has the American male been reduced to an apron-wearing, emasculated, hen-pecked husband? Why is he wearing his hair long, and why have clothes become uni-sexual? Is there any hard evidence that men and women are exchanging their traditional roles in our society?

If work roles are any indication, the answer is no.

A recent study of 1296 families in Syracuse, N.Y., reveals that wives--whether they work outside the home or not--continue to do most of the housework including laundry, cooking, and child-care.

Dr. Kathryn E. Walker carefully investigated the work habits of these families, representing all ages, incomes, and sizes, and discovered that husbands contributed an average of 1.6 hours of daily household work. It made no difference whether their wives worked or not; the male share averaged out to 1.6 hours.

What this means is that women who choose a paying job outside the home do not abandon housework. They merely postpone it. Such women, especially those with children, average a total work week of 70 hours.

Their husbands who average 1.6 hours of housework confine such labor for the most part to yard work and home maintenance. They shun cooking and cleaning like the plague.

Time- and labor-saving machines have also failed to add appreciably to family leisure time. Both males and females still put in long work weeks whether at home or office--63 to 64 hours on the average. Only 11 percent of the husbands surveyed held jobs requiring less than 40 hours per week, while 66 percent worked more than 40. Five percent put in more than 70 hours a week in paid labor.

POPULAR ENVOY

When John Freeman was appointed British Ambassador to Washington by a Labor government, tongues wagged. As editor of The New Statesman, a liberal English magazine, Freeman had raked Richard Nixon over the literary coals on many an occasion. Washington and London both worried therefore how Nixon would accept Freeman.

In the past six months, Freeman has established warm and friendly relations not only with Nixon but also with Henry Kissinger and Secretary of State Rogers. The result is that President Nixon does not want Freeman exchanged for a new ambassador from Great

MONEY-MAKERS

Persons who plan to invest in the stock market or have already would do well to consult a recent 58-page Federal Trade Commission study on the profitability of some 35 manufacturing industries in this country.

The commission reviewed 304 corporations. studied their 1968 earnings reports, concluded that the most profitable manufacturing fields in 1968 were:

- (1) Drugs and medicines--18.8% profit return on investment.
- (2) Typewriters, computers, and office machines--17.7%
- (3) Pumps and compressors--16.7%
- (4) Motor vehicles--15.4%
- (5) Radio and TV equipment--15.0%
- (6) Footwear except rubber--14.8%
- (7) Tobacco products--13.8%.

Leading individual corporate money-makers and their profit rates in 1968 were:

- (1) Clary Corp. (office machinery)--28.7%

- (2) Magnavox Co.--28.3%
- (3) Monroe Auto Equipment--28.3%
- (4) Smith, Kline & French--25.9%
- (5) Melville Shoe Corp.--25.8%.

The least profitable industries were distilled liquors, sugar, and the manufacturing of hydraulic cement.

The Federal Trade Commission study also includes companies with no special industrial classification. The commission studied 30 of these diversified corporations, each with assets of $500 million or more, decided that in 1968 Minnesota Mining & Manufacturing was number one with a profit return of 19.5%.

The FTC defines profits as net income after taxes. The net income is divided by shareholders' investment to give the rate of return.

The FTC report is entitled "Rates of Return on Selected Manufacturing Industries from 1959 through 1968."

PROSTITUTION IN FRANCE

Each year an estimated 16,000 women disappear in France. More than half are minors. Where do they go?

One possible answer: into the streets and brothels. Prostitution in France, Britain even though Conservative Edward Heath won the recent British election and may prefer a Conservative as ambassador.

The word has been passed along to London, and most likely John Freeman will remain in Washington for some time to come.

although outlawed, is big business. It shows an annual profit of about $650 million.

Determined to make inroads on, if not to eradicate, this oldest of enterprises, the French government recently recognized a group called, "Action Teams Against White Slavery," empowering it as an official public service organization to protect young girls.

The main target of the agency is the procurer who ensnares and entraps innocent young girls into a life of vice and then lives handsomely on their earnings.

The headquarters of "Action Teams" is Paris where its files are loaded with countless case histories of white slavery. A typical one tells of a 16-year-old who fell into the hands of a procurer in the southern port of Toulon. The girl learned that she was about to be sold into a brothel in the Ivory Coast city of Abidjan and managed to scribble this information to a friend. Her note was passed on to a member of an action team who promptly alerted Jean Scelles, 70, head of the agency and for many years a prominent French politician.

Scelles telephoned the French Embassy in Abidjan, and when the procurer landed at the airport with the two captive girls, he was arrested, and the girls returned to France.

Action Teams, organized 14 years ago, conducts a national campaign to educate youth groups, students, and parents on the methods of procurers. The agency sends lecturers to rural areas and small provincial towns from which procurers generally recruit.

The agency also tries to pressure French authorities into enforcing the existing vice laws, but in France, as in many other countries, this is most difficult, since local police frequently share in the favors and finances of prostitutes.

SECRET FLIGHTS Without fanfare of any sort the Soviet Union has secretly been testing its TU-144 supersonic airliner for the past four months.

On May 11th, the 120-seat airliner, captained by test pilot Eduard Yel'yan, took off from an airfield near Moscow, flew at a speed of 1256 miles per hour. On May 26th Yel'yan again tested the TU-144, this time at an altitude of 50,000 feet, flew at 1344 mph, more than twice the speed of sound.

The Soviet airliner has a top speed of 1560 miles an hour, will probably carry its first load of passengers later in the year.

It is for sale to the West.

FACT OF LIFE American consumers complain most about (1) their automobiles (2) home appliances (3) food products.

According to Elizabeth Hanford, executive director of the President's Committee on Consumer Interests, of the 30,522 complaints received by the agency in a year, the overwhelming preponderance concerned cars. Gripes included assertions that the vehicles complained about were no good to begin with, their warranties were a joke, their craftsmanship was miserable, the repair charges exorbitant.

HANDS TELL THE STORY QUICKLY ON NEW HEART-TEST MACHINE.

15-SECOND TEST A new heart-test machine designed to screen large populations for undiscovered or potential heart disease in 15 seconds, at a cost of 10 cents per patient, is now in operation in some Cleveland, Ohio, hospitals.

The test is provided by an electrocardiometer, a portable device which supports the electrocardiograph (ECG), which is still the single most efficient device for the indication of heart disease.

Unlike the ECG, this simple test involves no disrobing, no straps, no taping of electrodes to the body. The patient merely places his hands on two smooth gold plates linked to an electronic device which registers the patient's heart action. If the action is abnormal the machine's read-out screen flashes a red arrow indicating the need for the patient to take a full ECG test.

"The electrocardiometer," says Dr. Daniel K. Bloomfield, 43, the heart specialist who invented it along with engineer Harry Zieske, "is not perfect, but its margin for error is slight. For example, 8000 persons can be screened by a single technician in a 40-hour week. Of this number, there will most likely be 1200 with abnormal ECG's. Our electrocardiometer will correctly identify 960 of these and probably miss 240, or 3 percent.

"This indicates that we can properly screen about 95 percent of the total population if we use the device on a mass basis. That's pretty good."

In addition to mass screening, the electrocardiometer can be used to test airline pilots, some of whom now fly 350 to 400 persons on the new 747's. These pilots can take the hand test before each flight, can determine quickly if there has been any change in their previous electrocardiograms.

Dr. Bloomfield, a graduate of Case Western Reserve Medical School and now with the division of medicine at Mt. Sinai Hospital in Cleveland, will become dean of the University of Illinois Medical School when it opens in Urbana, Ill., in 1971. He hopes that by then his $1000 machine will be on the market.

"If this country is genuinely interested in mass screening the public for heart disease," he declares, "this machine or something like it is the way to do it."

WORLD'S FIRST SPOT-REDUCING DIET!

Designed by America's best-known diet doctor—to smooth out ugly bulges that have never given way to any diet you have ever tried before!

Based on an entirely new medical principle, it works two ways to give you a better figure than you may even have had as a teenager! Like this...

1) First, it carves anywhere from 5 to 10 to 15 pounds off your body in the very first week! And up to 10 pounds a week from then on, as only the first step of this wonder-working new medical diet!

2) And then—after you have lost as much as 20 or 30 or even 40 pounds in the first 6 weeks alone—you then concentrate on those ugly bulges no other diet has ever been able to touch before! Still through nothing but diet alone, you then see up to...

6 inches MORE gone from your waist...
6 inches MORE gone from your hips...
6 inches MORE gone from your buttocks...
4 inches MORE gone from your thighs...
2 inches MORE gone from your calves...

Until you can hardly believe that the figure you are looking at in the mirror is your own! And all through the application of a new medical principle by America's most famous diet doctor!

Like this...

Most Diets Remove Skin-Fat Only! But This Diet Pulls Deep Fat And Excess Protein Right Out From The Muscle Areas
Themselves! THAT'S WHY IT SMOOTHS OUT
UGLY MUSCLE BULGES THAT YOU CAN'T EVEN EXERCISE AWAY!

Now you are beginning to understand the powerful logic of this new reducing plan! It is so important to your future health and appearance, however, that we must go into a few more details about it with you right now:

Fat stores itself in several places in your body. Much of it, of course, is deposited right underneath your skin. You can feel it if you squeeze the skin. This is skin-fat, and it is the fat you usually get rid of in ordinary diets.

Any good diet will burn this skin-fat away. This diet does too—but far more quickly than you have ever dreamed before! As much as 5 to 15 pounds in the very first week, as starters! (That's why the doctor says that this diet has its own "Built-In Will Power"—because you lose weight so incredibly fast, this way, that you wouldn't break this diet for the world!)

But then, after this massive quick-weight loss—after this skin-fat has been burned right out of your body—this new medical diet goes one step further that opens up a whole new world of beauty to you!

Now it goes after the DEEP-FAT in your body—the fat, and excess protein, that is inter-laced with the muscles of your waist, your hips, your buttocks, your thighs, and all the other ugly "problem-bulges of your body"!

These are the areas ordinary diets really can't touch—because their food-mixtures reinforce these muscle-fat bulges rather than carve them down! These are the areas that laugh at even back-breaking exercises—

About The Author— Dr. Irwin M. Stillman

During his fifty years of experience in the practice of medicine, IRWIN MAXWELL STILLMAN, M.D., D-I.M., has helped millions of over-weight men and women to reduce. A Diplomate in Internal Medicine, Dr. Stillman is presently a consultant in Internal Medicine at Coney Island Hospital, Brooklyn, New York. Formerly, he was an attending physician in Medicine at Coney Island Hospital and at Harbour Hospital, a Fellow of the American College of Angiology, and a Fellow of the American Geriatric Society. Dr. Stillman received a gold diploma from the New York Medical College in 1968.

because they only make the muscles there GROW, and don't have the slightest effect on the fat!

But This New Diet Causes These Muscle-Fat Bulges TO FEED ON THEMSELVES!
To Gently, But Rapidly, Pull Out
Excess Fat And Protein Right Out
Of Those Bulges! So Those Bulges
Look Almost As Though You Had SMOOTHED THEM AWAY WITH AN ERASER!

Now for the final point—and perhaps the most convincing fact of all: This new QUICK INCHES-OFF DIET is given to you by perhaps the most successful reducing specialist in the world! It is backed and proven by over forty-five years of medical experience of Dr. Irwin Maxwell Stillman, who gave you last year the revolutionary Doctor's Quick Weight-Loss Diet.

But now Dr. Stillman has gone far beyond mere quick-weight loss alone! He has taken his previous Quick Weight Loss principles, and literally MULTIPLIED their power to give you a more beautiful new figure! Where you not only skyrocket down to your ideal weight—even easier than before—but also where you carve away up to 6 to 10 inches from the very problem spots that have always resisted trimming before!

Thus, Dr. Stillman has done what might have previously been considered impossible. He has actually improved his previous techniques! He has combined what is probably the world's fastest and healthiest system of losing POUNDS, with a brand-new system of carving off PROBLEM-INCHES—till you get the slimmest, healthiest, youngest-looking figure you have ever known in your life!

Prove Every Ounce Of It— Entirely At Our Risk!

The rest is up to you, of course. Right now, look bluntly at your figure in the mirror. Ask yourself these questions—all of which are now within your reach:

How would you look one week from today about 10 pounds lighter?
How would you look two weeks from today about 20 pounds lighter?
How would you look three weeks from today about 30 or more pounds lighter? And with your face as radiant, and livelier and younger-looking than your figure!

And then, go on even further—

After you've lost that weight, how would you look with another 6 inches carved off your waist? Another 6 inches carved off your hips? Another 6 inches carved off your buttocks? Another 4 inches carved right off your thighs?

We suggest, of course, that you check out this diet, and its effect on you as you go along, with your own doctor.

No one has ever told you this kind of weight loss, and inch loss was ever possible before. IT IS NOW! Its source is the Coupon below. All you risk to try it is a 6-cent stamp. It works for YOU, or you don't lose a penny!

This is the thriving shop established by a footloose young man with a "crazy" idea.

How To Make a Fortune Selling T-Shirts

by Lloyd Shearer

EIGHT years ago Rick Ralston, a tall, blonde kid of 20 from Montebello, Calif., arrived here with $60 and the urge to live the life of a beach bum, specializing in girls and surfing.

Today Frederick Carleton Ralston is the proprietor of Crazy Shirts, Inc., a retail business which specializes in way-out T-shirts to the annual cash register jingle of $500,000 and up.

"Somehow," Rick says, "I've become a success in spite of myself, or what society declares a success. If I've made it, I guess so can nearly anybody else."

How did Rick Ralston make it?

"In order to survive here," he explains, "even as a surf bum, a fellow's got to eat. In order to eat and live in some place other than 'Hotel Ford' or 'Hotel Chevrolet,' which is where I was living for a time, I began to hand-paint sweat shirts on the sidewalk."

"I'd gone to Art Center School in Los Angeles," he points out, "and I previously painted sweat shirts in Catalina Island during the summers, so that was the only skill I really knew. Anyway, I'd buy a sweat shirt for a buck, hand-paint it, and sell it for five."

"I made just enough money to buy a bag of rice and pay the rent. Most of the time I didn't work at all, just surf and play the beach. It was the perfect life of the perfect beach bum. Then I fell in love. And that's what did it."

Prepares for marriage

The girl Rick Ralston fell in love with was Geraldine Woodward of Honolulu.

"We began to discuss marriage," Rick recalls, "and how marriage would keep me out of the draft. And I thought if I'm going to get married, I should be a good husband and a good provider. I come from a religious home—my brother Bobby is the pianist and organist for Lawrence Welk—and that's how I was brought up—to think like that. So I went to Harry Newhart, the general manager of the International Marketplace (a shopping center which caters to tourists) and he let me have a concession way in the back. I had one salesgirl who worked 12 hours a day and Gerry used to pinch-hit for her when she wanted to take off or go out on a date. I used to sit on a stool and paint shirts all day long. I got tired and closed up the shop and went on a whaling spree and began to live the life of a beach bum again.

"The next year, 1964, I got married, and then the humming stopped. The Marketplace gave me another concession for 10 percent of the gross and another $200 a month for upkeep and advertising, and I really put my nose to the grindstone. I ordered T-shirts by the gross from the Russell Mills in Alabama. I worked all kinds of hours. I got a warehouse, a staff artist. I started doing $50,000 a month during the summer months, just selling crazy T-shirts at $3 a throw."

As Ralston's business increased, his marriage diminished even though it was blessed by the arrival of two children.

Too much business

"Funny thing," he says, "one of the main things that ruined my marriage was throwing myself into the business so much that Gerry resented my spending almost all my time at the shop and in the warehouse."

"Suddenly I was not the gay, care-free beach bum she had married, and she resented it. We grew so far apart that a divorce was the only way out. Now at the ripe old age of 28 I'm divorced, a guy with an ex-wife and two kids and a monthly alimony and support bill of $700 a month. So you can see that I'm not such a success after all. Or maybe it's impossible for a guy to be a successful businessman and a successful husband, both."

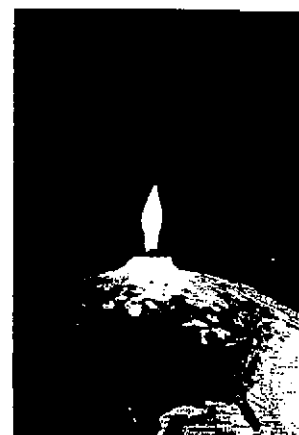

"Anyway, I've got another girl. But I don't think I'll get married again."

What young Ralston, who nets 15 percent on an annual gross of $500,000, plans to do in the future is to find one or two young men to manage his shops—he recently opened a second—on a share-the-profits basis.

"I came to Honolulu originally," he declares, "to avoid the 9 to 5 entrapment, the regular business routine which enslaves most guys on the mainland. Then I worked myself into a bigger trap. Now I've learned that moderation in all things—even in money-making—is the best way to live."

Rick Ralston, happily taking an order for T-shirts, is a former "surf bum" who didn't have a shirt to his name.

The End: is it closer than you think?

How will you know when the end of the world is at hand?

The Bible tells us to look for these signs:

"You must face the fact: the final age of this world is to be a time of troubles. Men will love nothing but money and self; they will be arrogant, boastful, and abusive; with no respect for parents, no gratitude, no piety, no natural affection; they will be implacable in their hatreds, scandal-mongers, intemperate and fierce, strangers to all goodness, traitors, adventurers, swollen with self-importance. They will be men who put pleasure in the place of God, men who preserve the outward form of religion, but are a standing denial of its reality." (2 Timothy 3:1-5 N.E.B.)

Who can escape the feeling that this ancient prophecy is a summary of this morning's newspaper?

Seventh-day Adventists believe that the return of Christ is imminent, although we do not speculate as to the date. Christ Himself said he will come when the Gospel has been preached in the whole world as a witness. (Matthew 24:14) That is why Adventists carry the gospel into nearly 200 countries.

Then, and only then, will the destruction of the world come. The wicked will be destroyed by fire. But those who have kept their faith in God will have eternal life in a world made new.

How will this supreme event affect you? The answer may be found in a special brochure available for the asking. Just fill out and return the coupon below. No one will call on you, but you may want to call on us.

In 1966 a total of 443 U.S. Air Force officers and men were killed in off-duty traffic accidents. The Air Force decided that the time had come for drastic safety measures.

As a result, as part of its training program, the Air Force commissioned private experts to produce a driver training program which by films and lectures drives home the basic principles of prudent motoring. So far more than 1 million airmen have been exposed to the program and the effect has been heartening.

Last year, for example, the Air Force auto-accident fatalities had dropped to 309 and this year the rate so far indicates a reduction to about 240.

The fundamental techniques of the Air Force safe driving program have been adapted in the form of a book—The Safe Driving Handbook. Prepared by the non-profit independent Aerospace Education Foundation, the book is brand-new and now available for the first time. The regular price is $3.95 a copy but this lifesaving volume can be purchased by PARADE readers for only $1.

In reducing safe driving techniques to fundamentals, the handbook sets forth: "Nothing in driving is more important than knowing when and how to brake." So important do the experts regard this aspect of car control that, in effect, they propose a newly designed speedometer.

"The numbers on your speedometer," they say, "are the key safety figures on your dashboard. But they are far from being a complete guide to safety because they do not give you a proper idea of your speed in relation to ability to stop."

Hence, they suggest that there be added to the speedometer a new set of figures. For example, just above the 60 mph number would appear the figure 272—that's the number of feet it would take to bring a car to a complete stop from the 60 mph speed. Similar "stopometer" figures would appear at intervals—each serving as a constant reminder to the driver that to stop a car, especially at the higher speeds, requires a far greater distance than is generally realized.

The Safe Driving Handbook presents hundreds of tips:

- Plane pilots are trained to keep moods and emotion out of their work but many an average driver expresses hostility with his car.
- Many states limit professional truck drivers to six hours a day but you sometimes hear a motorist brag of driving 11 or so hours a day.
- An alert driver knows his environment. For example, if a family with three bike-riding kids moves into the neighborhood, the chances of an accident have increased.
- The maximum distance one driver should cover in a day is 400 miles.
- The best passing speed is 15 mph faster than the other car.

The Safe Driving Handbook covers virtually every aspect of handling a car. The Air Force program has saved hundreds of Air Force lives. This handbook could save yours.

THE IDEAL DECORATING COMBINATION

Magnificent Hammered Iron Enameled Roses

Imagine the delicate beauty and craftsmanship of hammered iron combined with the age old art of enameling . . . it's a marriage of unlimited decorating possibilities! We've commissioned skilled artisans to work out designs of roses in hammered iron, fashion delicate metal leaves (so real they seem to grow!) and then wind them on to stems in an intricately patterned wall plaque. Then as a final touch of beauty they've lightly fixed enameled colorings of dusky red, soft rose and musky yellows to create a wall piece of fantastic beauty. The effect is incredible, but it is impossible to capture this beauty in the small black and white illustration here. Only when you actually see these plaques in your home can you fully appreciate their appeal and charm.

Keeping Up...With Youth

by Pamela Swift

High Price to Pay

One of the fallouts of the U.S. involvement in the Vietnamese war has been the mounting disillusionment with the military. Especially on Ivy League campuses.

A reflection of this disenchantment can be found in the number of ROTC units (Army, Navy, and Air Force) already disbanded or scheduled for disbanding over the next few years.

For example, the following schools have disbanded or will disband their Air Force ROTC units: Harvard, Princeton, Dartmouth, Brown, Colgate, Union, Lawrence, Trinity, Washington, N.Y.U., Kenyon, Tufts, Grinnell, Occidental, and Rochester.

Most of these institutions are liberal arts colleges, located in the Northeast.

Army ROTC units have been phased out of Harvard, Dartmouth, Boston University, will next year be phased out of Yale, Princeton, and N.Y.U.

Naval ROTC units are scheduled for disbanding at Brown (in 1972), Columbia (1971), Dartmouth (1973), Harvard (1971), Princeton (1973), Tufts (1973), and Yale (1972).

These ROTC cancellations, however, are not indicative of a nationwide trend. The Army ROTC has contracts with 283 colleges and universities; the Air Force ROTC with 174, and the Navy with 55.

It is simply that the nation's most venerated educational institutions, with the highest standards and best students, no longer want any direct involvement with the military arm of the government.

This indeed is a sad state of affairs. The campuses in question will suffer, the military will suffer, and so, too, will the nation to which the Ivy League colleges over the years have contributed the single largest share of leadership.

So many students are now using photographs in reports for class, club, or community work, so many people are now interested in communicating through photography that the Eastman Kodak Company has put together a 12-page booklet on the subject.

It's called "Photo Reports Make It Happen" and contains simple but excellent tips on how to take good photos and make good, useful photo reports. The booklet is available at no cost by writing Department 841, Eastman Kodak Company, Rochester, N.Y. 14650.

Daughters and Stepfathers

One of the byproducts of society's high rate of divorce and remarriage is a new and sticky love triangle involving the child of the first marriage and the stepparent of the opposite sex.

Psychiatrists call this phenomenon the Phaedra complex. Phaedra, a character in Greek mythology, was a young and beautiful woman who married an older man named Theseus, then fell in love with his son, Hippolytus. After Hippolytus spurned her advances, she committed suicide, leaving behind a note accusing Hippolytus of seducing her. Furious, Theseus banished his innocent son, and discovered the truth only after Hippolytus was dead.

Dr. Alfred Messer, a psychiatrist at Emory University in Atlanta, Ga., feels there is no need for such a tragic ending.

Since divorce courts generally give custody of children to their mother, Phaedra complexes appear mostly between stepfathers and stepdaughters.

When the daughter reaches adolescence and becomes interested in men, she naturally focuses her attention on the nearest man — her stepfather. About the same process takes place in the normal family, but there the question of incest puts a protective barrier between father and daughter. Between stepfather and daughter there is no such protection.

But, Dr. Messer points out, such an attraction need not destroy the remarriage. Just recognizing the existence of such a complex is the best help.

Other aids include—legal adoption of the children by the stepfather, and encouraging the children to call him "father." These help to establish a healthy distance between stepfather and child.

Hit 'n' Run Journalism

This week an estimated 2 million people will read at least one of the 200 journals of the "underground press"—one of the largest irreverent editorial bodies in this country.

Who reads such weeklies and bi-weeklies as "The East Village Other," "Rat," "Scenes," "Avatar," or "The Los Angeles Free Press"? Mostly the affluent under-30 generation—students, dropouts, the hip and the would-be hip. But you can find copies of these "rags" as they are called, in the top desk drawers of Madison Avenue executives probing to find out "what's new" in the $50 billion youth market. Distraught parents anxious to find their runaway children clutch these journals as they talk to narcotics officers (Narcs), who use them for leads to pot parties.

Although to some extent a product of the ferment of the '60's, the underground press did not spring full blown from today's protest movement. The first anti-establishment newspaper, "The Village Voice," appeared in 1955, price 5 cents, circulation 2500. Today the "The Voice" costs 20 cents and has an international circulation of over 127,000. Its average reader is over 30 and earning $12,000 a year.

Almost every major metropolis has at least one outrageously defiant "rag." Most of them are run by small, inbred staffs, usually at a loss. These journals are having a rough time competing with the new pornographic magazines like "Kiss," "Luv," and "Pleasure." These "pornzines" rack up $400,000 in weekly sales in Manhattan alone. John Wilcock, one of the founders of "The Village Voice," complains that they have "created a mindless trail of slime which threatens to wipe everything off the newsstands which doesn't exploit the human body for profit."

Boys and girls together: coeducation at Vassar.

Go Coed or Die

What is the fate of women's colleges in the United States? Can they survive without going coed? Vassar, Bennington, Sarah Lawrence, many of the best-known are opening their doors to men, and probably will survive.

Others, however, which insist upon remaining all-girls may not.

Applications to such schools are way down in most cases, and this fall many women's colleges will have plenty of room. Some may even fold or consolidate. Monticello College of Godfrey, Ill., a small liberal arts college founded in 1835, is a case in point. With applications below the 300 mark, Monticello has been forced to sell out to neighboring Lewis & Clark College, in Alton, Ill., which takes over next July 1st.

Heads of state are her house-guests: Mary Wilroy in Washington's Blair House.

The Super-Hostess of Blair House

WASHINGTON, D.C.

Mary Edith Wilroy is a name that few Americans know. But she has probably entertained more heads of state than any other person in the world—and been paid for doing so. She is the discreet super-hostess who runs Blair House (catty-corner from the White House), the President's guest house for visiting kings, queens, presidents, prime ministers, diplomats and other notables.

During the terms of three Presidents, Mrs. Wilroy has been "protocol officer," tactical commander and fiscal genius for the gracious Georgian-style house, which is furnished with priceless Americana donated by individuals, women's clubs, history buffs and business firms.

"My job is to provide a setting in which international relations can flourish," says the handsome grandmother of seven. "Basically, I go about it like any housewife would."

This means that dinner for 20 or maybe 40 is ready, the housework in 35 rooms is done and she is standing by the door to meet foreign dignitaries who occasionally have been escorted across the street and introduced to her by the President of the United States.

It also means that she must be prepared for the worst. Like the time a dry cleaning truck was stuck in a raging snowstorm with the laundry and evening suits of a party of foreign diplomats who were due at the White House at 8 p.m. "The weather was so bad that I couldn't rent a helicopter, so I finally called the Chief of Police and told him we were headed for an international disaster," she says. "At precisely the right moment, a Black Maria drew up at the door with the clothes. The guests never knew the difference."

A quiet fire alarm

On another evening, she made sure that Washington officials being entertained in candlelit splendor by a visiting head of state were unaware that excessive heat in the kitchen had triggered an automatic fire alarm at a nearby fire station. Between soup and dessert, Mrs. Wilroy persuaded firemen to take down the ladders already stretched to the third floor and remove fire equipment that completely blocked traffic on Pennsylvania Avenue, without any of the guests being the wiser.

Already this year, Mary Wilroy and her staff of four have kept their cool during a dozen or so state visits. In April alone, for instance, four important foreign guests called Blair House home for three days each, and Cabinet members and State Department officials and their wives—who are entitled to use the mansion—entertained at various luncheons, receptions and dinners for from ten to 200 people.

Word about a state visit comes to Mrs. Wilroy's basement office in Blair House from the State Department's Office of Protocol, of which she is an officer. Next she receives an attaché case full of fact cards which often include not only cultural and geographical data about the country of the visitors, but pictures, biographies and information about their hobbies and interests.

Then she has the huge old mansion put into impeccable order by her staff. The furniture and the old glass and silver—including some made by Paul Revere—are polished to a sheen. Historical memorabilia are dusted. Fine old brass is scrubbed. Fresh, mono-colored linen for bed, bath and table is selected. Candles with pleasant odors are placed in strategic spots. And in each room the supply of souvenir pencils, pens and the blue embossed Blair House stationery is replenished, bowls of fresh fruit, dried fruit, candy, and salted nuts are set out, daily papers and current American and foreign-language magazines brought in.

Individualized flowers

Mrs. Wilroy may buy favorite white freesias for the bedside of a queen, or pick a special bouquet from her own garden in Takoma Park, Md. When India's Prime Minister Nehru stayed at Blair House, she presented him daily with a fresh rosebud to wear.

"There is simply no routine to fit each occasion," she says, adding that she keeps her own personal file about any visitor who has stayed at Blair House before—like whether he has a wife, a large entourage, medical problems, religious preferences, food considerations or allergies.

Menus are planned with Blair House chef William Dallas. Hot "American" corn sticks, corn muffins or spoonbread and big, U.S.-style breakfasts and an around-the-clock buffet are specialties of the house.

At the very last minute before her guests arrive, Mrs. Wilroy checks to see that embossed name cards have been slipped into special holders on the doors of up to 15 suites awaiting the foreign contingent (they also receive maps with room assignments), that the house is neither too warm nor too cold, that TV sets and light bulbs are working and that doors are hospitably ajar into the cozily-lit rooms of the four-story, wheat-colored, green-shuttered home.

Sometimes, of course, things go wrong. Recently, she was forced to leave a royal guest standing outside his suite while she searched frantically for keys borrowed by his own security aide, who had slipped upstairs earlier, checked out the rooms, turned off the lights and locked every door in sight.

Mary Wilroy has been chatelaine of 1651 Pennsylvania Avenue since 1961 when she was plucked out of an administrative protocol job in the State Department and told to "go over there and run it as if it were your home."

It was purchased in 1942 by the U.S. Government, fully furnished, from the family of Francis P. Blair, a member of President Jackson's "Kitchen Cabinet." The Blair-Lee house next door, which was built for Blair's daughter who married a cousin of Robert E. Lee, was bought the following year. Now the two homes are connected and used jointly—the doors were cut through when the Truman family lived there while the White House was being renovated.

In 1964, the 140-year-old structure needed a facelift. It had an antiquated kitchen, no central air-conditioning, termites, a leaky water system, hazardous wiring. With Government funds the mansion was modernized and with about $200,000 of contributions from individuals and organizations a massive redecoration project was started. It is still going on.

The AFL-CIO, for instance, paid for redecorating the Lincoln Room, a small, butter-yellow reception room in which Robert E. Lee declined command of the Union Army.

Diplomatic budget

Mary Wilroy declines to talk about the annual budget for entertaining the President's guests. "When we have company in our home," she says diplomatically, "we don't talk about how much it costs." But because of the wear and tear of constant use, the mansion is always being repaired, and enhanced by new acquisitions. All gifts are approved by a Fine Arts Committee headed by the wife of the Chief of Protocol, who is currently Mrs. Emil S. Mosbacher Jr.

But Mary Wilroy makes the hard decisions about lining up the plumbers, electricians, carpenters and painters who must work quickly when one guest leaves and before another arrives.

Now divorced, she says that the biggest challenge in her life was running her own home and raising her two sons and two daughters.

On some nights when Blair House is dark, Mary Wilroy is able to commute to her own big old house in the Maryland suburbs. But more often she is scurrying around the Blair House mansion offering the kind of American hospitality that calls for finding a rare digestive herb to calm a royal guest; finding the recipe for a very special Norwegian birthday cake for the Prime Minister of Norway, or a bed long enough to accommodate Charles de Gaulle.

"All of this would be pretty heady stuff," admits the hostess of Blair House, "if only there were time to stop and think about it."

Georgian-style mansion has 35 rooms and is furnished with priceless American antiques.

My Favorite Jokes

by Ronnie Martin

EDITOR'S NOTE: Ronnie Martin spent three years studying law before deciding that he'd rather win laughs than courtroom cases. Helping to influence his decision was the fact that his brother, Corbett Monica, was starting to make it big as a comedian and, besides, the price was right.

Ronnie took a step up the ladder when he toured the country with the late Nat "King" Cole, performing his relaxed comedy routine for nine months. He has also appeared on the TV talk shows. Herewith some of his favorite jokes:

Men! If you want to lose weight, here's a diet for you—only eat when your wife cooks.

Every time I ever met a girl who could cook like my mother, she looked like my father.

A guy gets on a plane and holds a gun to the pilot's head. He says, "Take me to Miami!" The pilot responds, "I'm going to Miami, you don't need a gun." The man says, "Three times I got on a plane to Miami and ended up in Cuba—this time I'm going to Miami!"

I was walking down the street and saw a man get hit by a car. He started crawling away very quickly. I asked him where he was going and he answered, "I don't want to get involved."

The loudspeaker of a big jet clicked on and the captain's voice announced in a clear, even tone, "Now there's no cause for alarm, but we felt you passengers should know that for the last three hours we've been flying without the benefit of radio-compass, radar or navigational beam. This means that we are, in the broad sense of the word, lost. However, on the brighter side of the picture, we're making excellent time!"

Two Englishmen were sitting in a bar. The first gentleman said, "I say, do you know that the only people who come from Yorkshire are either funny-looking women or rugby players?" The second gentleman said indignantly, "My wife happens to come from Yorkshire." The first man thought quickly and said, "Oh, really? What position does she play?"

A father bought his son a chrome-plated shotgun which he promptly traded in for a gold watch. "That's a shame," said the father. "What will you do when you're married and find a burglar robbing your house in the middle of the night?"

"I'll take out my watch," said the son, "point to the time and tell him it's so late he ought to go home to bed."

I don't mind my mother-in-law visiting twice a year. All I want to know is why does she have to stay six months each time.

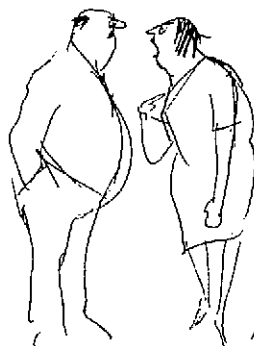

Behind Every Man...

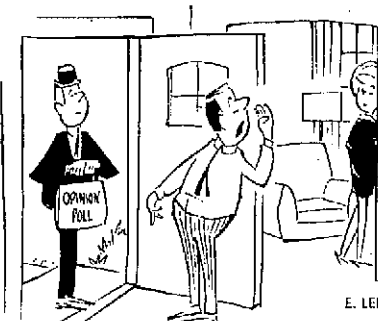

"Well, how about it Louise, do I like it?"

"Now remember dear, don't forget to lower your grip, snap your wrist, follow through and keep your eye on the ball."

"You're smart, you're clever, you're intelligent, you're brilliant—and you know what a liar I am!"

"O-oh, brother, did you come to the right place! Louise!"
